To
Mr. A. M. Hocart,
Archaeological Commissioner, Ceylon,
in sincere gratitude.

INTRODUCTION

Recent years have brought us two comprehensive works on the chronology of Ceylon: 1) JOHN M. SENAVERATNE, "The Date of Buddha's Death and Ceylon Chronology", JRAS. C. B. XXIII, No. 67 (1914), p. 141 ff. and 2) DMDZ. WICKREMASINGHE, "Ceylonese Chronology", as Introduction to vol. III of his Epigraphia Zeylanica.

Still earlier investigations dealing with a longer period are: 3) SYLVAIN LÉVI, "Les Missions de Wang Hiuén Ts'e dans l'Inde" in JAS. 1900, p. 297 ff., 401 ff., translated by JOHN M. SENAVERATNE, JRAS. C. B. XXIV, No. 68 (1915—16), p. 75 ff. (with "Notes" by the Translator p. 106 ff. and 4) E. HULTZSCH, "Contributions to Singhalese Chronology", JRAS. 1913, p. 517 ff.)¹

I mention further 5) H. W. CODRINGTON, "A Short History of Ceylon" where on p. XIII there is a "Note on the Chronology of Ceylon" which deserves attention.

The numerous single investigations particularly those in the JRAS. C. B. will be quoted in their place. Their authors are: P. E. PIERIS, E. W. PERERA, S. DE SILVA, B. GUNASEKARA, H. C. P. BELL, E. R. AYRTON, H. W. CODRINGTON etc.

The two first named articles (S. and WICKR.) start as I did myself in the translation of the Mahāvamsa from FLEET's date of 483 B. C. for the Nirvana of Buddha. Even if this date is not absolutely exact — arguments are advanced for the year 487 B. C. — it is as well to retain it for the moment. Now WICKREMASINGHE, EZ. I. p. 155 ff., has proved that even in

Ceylon itself there are traces of an era starting from 483 B. C. whereas later, almost certainly in the 7th century, 544/3 B.C. was adopted as the year of the Nirvana. Thus the most important thing is to find out the point in the chronology of Ceylon where the transition from the one era to the other takes place, where consequently we find an excess of 61 years.

SENAVERATNE (p. 143)¹ goes farthest in his assumption that the era of B. C. 483 was in use up to the close of the 15th century when a reform of the calendar took place, 544 B. C., being adopted as the year of Buddha's death, 93 instead of 61 years being erroneously added. At the same time the Śaka era (78/9 A. D.) was dated back 93 years. Later, about the 18th century, with a new reform of the calendar, the Buddha era was adjusted to the difference of 61 years. S. gets rid of the surplus number by the assumption that several of the kings' names handed down by tradition for the 15th and 16th centuries refer to the same person, that others are the names of co-regents, while many are mere inventions. Parakkamabāhu VI. is identical with Parakkamabāhu IX., Bhuvanekabāhu VI. with Bh. VII., while Parakkamabāhu VII. and VIII. never existed (p. 176—177).

SENAVERATNE defends his thesis with great acumen and extraordinary learning. But against it there is a series of synchronisms by which we can prove that the era 544/3 must be much older than S. assumes. Moreover the simultaneous alteration of the Śaka era is very unlikely. For this and other reasons SENAVERTNE's hypothesis was rejected during the discussion following his lecture on the subject. In spite of all the weakness and untrustworthiness of Sinhalese chronology, WICKREMASINGHE is nevertheless right in taking up a more conservative attitude towards its tradition.

One cause of great uncertainty also lies in the fact that in our calculations we have to rely for the most part on the figures for the reigns of the individual kings. Here we cannot rule out the possibility that many of these reigns were at least partly contemporaneous, that it is a case of simultaneous or of joint reigns. But the means for establishing this in individual cases are wanting. We have of course to do also with round numbers. When it is e. g. said that such and such a king reigned 12 years, possibly a few extra months have been thrown in. The sum total of such additions produces however, considerable inexactitude.

The main point however, is that our sources often differ more or less in their statements regarding the length of the various reigns, that for many of the kings in the Cūlavamsa and other documents figures are wanting altogether or can only be obtained approximately by calculation.

Matters are better, at least in my opinion, with the single dates for certain of the more important events, especially those starting with Buddha's Nirvana. I do not deny that some of these dates may have been got at by the authors by the simple process of adding up the years of the reigns. Nevertheless I have the impression that there was a limited number of dates which rested on ancient tradition and had as their starting-point the year of Buddha's death¹. There are already traces of something like a Buddha era in the Dīpavamsa and the Mahāvamsa, as for instance, when it is said in Dīp. 17. 78, that Devānampiyatissa was crowned 236 years after Buddha's entry into Nirvana. Or again when in both chronicles (Dīp. 6. 1, Mhvs. 5. 21) there is the remark that 218 years had elapsed between the Nirvana and the coronation of Asoka.

It is possible that in later times a chronological system was constructed out of these individual dates to which the reigns of the kings were adjusted, not of course without some violence. Then a new confusion arose when at a certain time through a misunderstanding the cause of which we do not know, the Nirvana of the Buddha was dated back 61 years. At some point or other in the list of the kings this number must be allowed for. Then it is an open question — granted an ancient tradition — whether in converting these single dates into the Christian era we are to start from 483 B. C. or 544/3 B. C.

In the face of all this uncertainty it is advisable in our chronological investigations to rely chiefly on foreign testimony regarding the history of Ceylon. There are above all the synchronisms afforded by Chinese annals and South Indian inscriptions. Then we have the confirmatory evidence of Sinhalese inscriptions, especially those of the mediaeval and modern times. Subsidiary to these are the single dates. The skeleton framed by this "foreign testimony" is indeed meagre in the extreme and the evidence is unequally distributed. A good deal remains doubtful. The blame lies partly in the method of description of the Cūlavamsa which conceals so much that to us seems particularly important. What a pity, for instance, that it has nothing to say about the relations with China which would seem to have been not inconsiderable. The name of China is not even once mentioned.

I come now to the fine and careful work of WICKREMASINGHE. When I wrote the preface to Vol. I. of my translation of the Cūlavamsa in which I promised an introduction to the chronology for Vol. II., I had not then seen W.'s "Chronological Table of Ceylon Kings" (EZ. III, p. 1 ff.). Later I had doubts whether a treatment of the same subject by myself might not be superfluous. I think, however, that readers of my translation will be glad to have at hand a list of the kings with their more or less probable dates. They will also like to have a more or less comprehensive survey of the material on which our calculations rest.

One thing more. WICKREMA. makes no attempt at reconciling the two chronological computations of 483 B. C. and 544/3 B. C. He is apparently convinced that this is at present impossible and wishes to avoid increasing the uncertainty by a new and again uncertain chronology. In converting into the Christian era he starts as far No. 76 (Kumārādhātusena)¹ from 483 B. C. Up to No. 94 (Dappula I.) he places the two computations side by side. From No. 95 (Dāthopatisa I.) up to the interregnum after No. 124 (Mahinda V.) he places the figures of the first computation in brackets, thus treating them as less probable and from No. 125 (Kassapa = Vikkamabāhu I.) he follows only the era of 544/3 B. C.

Here I venture a step further. I believe namely that the change of the era falls in the earliest period of the Cūlavamsa, that is at the close of the 4th century A. D. Here accordingly is the period where we must allow for the excess of 61 years.

My theory stands and falls with the identity of Ts'a-li Mo-ho-nan of the Chinese annals (L. 83, 89) with King Mahānāma, No. 5 (63). Mo-ho-nan, so it is said, sent a letter, with gifts in the year 428 A. D. to the Chinese Court. This seems to contradict another notice from Chinese sources quoted by L. 75 according to which a king of Ceylon Chi-mi-kia-po-mo (that is Śrī Meghavarman) sent an embassy to the Indian King San-meon-to-lo-kiu-to (that is Samudragupta) asking permission to build a monastery at Bodh Gayā as shelter for pilgrims from Ceylon. The Sinhalese king Śrī Meghavarman is without doubt Sirimeghavamsa, No. 1 (59) the first ruler of the so-called Little Dynasty. Samudragupta reigned from 326 — (about) 375 A. D. According to the traditional chronology the reign of Sirimeghavamsa is reckoned from 362—389 A. D.

But the Cūlavamsa reckons 79—80 years from the death of Sirimeghavamsa to Mahānāma's ascent of the throne which would thus occur at the earliest in 468 A. D. And in fact WICKR. 12 gives the date of 468—490 for Mahānāma's reign. But how does this agree with the other notice giving the year 428 for Mahānāma's embassy?²

WICKREMASINGHE tries to solve the difficulty by saying: "This (i. e. the embassy) may have taken place probably when Mahānāma was a priest wielding power in Upatissa's reign." This argument is refuted by the fact that Mo-ho-nan is distinctly described as a Ts'a-li, i. e. kshatriya, as king.

The solution of the problem must be sought elsewhere. Both Chinese notices are right, but the numbers given in the Sinhalese sources for the reigns of Sirimeghavajña up to Mahānāma are wrong. Their sum total is 129 to 130 years, but they have been expanded about 60 or 61 years in order to reconcile the old era of 483 B. C. with the new one of 544/3.

It is just here indeed that the traditional dates give the impression of artificial expansion. Buddhādāsa and his two sons (Nos. 61-63) are given a reign of 92/3 years! According to the Rājāvaliya they even reigned 142 years! These are fantastic figures. Possibly my theory may throw a new light on 37. 100. Suppose we assume that Sirimeghavajña's reign after 362 A. D. was considerably shorter, that perhaps a great part of the 27/8 years allotted to it falls within the period when he was reigning along with Mahāsena or as his rival, we might perhaps follow the reading of the MSS. S. 5, 6, 7 bhata (not bhatu) tassa kaniṭṭhako according to which we should translate: "his youngest brother, Jeṭṭhatissa, still a youth, hereupon raised the umbrella of dominion in Laṅkā." It is in any case only very reluctantly that I have decided to depart from the original text.

Be that as it may, if the Chinese notices and the hypothesis I have built on them are right, we must shorten the period between Mahāsena's death and that of Mahānāma by 60 to 61 years and this gives us for Mahānāma's death the year 430 or 431 A. D. Mahānāma, if we keep to the 22 years ascribed to him by tradition, would have reigned from 409—431 A. D.

It is impossible to determine individually how the reigns of Mahānāma's predecessors were distributed. I pointed out above that we might already begin shortening these with Sirimeghavappa. Upatissa with his 42 years may be discarded entirely, it seems to me, or at least but a very small portion of his reign be allowed to stand. He may be purely fictitious or perhaps a prince who reigned along with his father and either never came to the throne himself or if so, only for a short period. Here above all when the transition from the one era to the other had been effected, there set in those efforts to adjust the balance by manipulation of the figures.

There is one thing I should like finally to point out. If we go back for the change of the era to Sirimeghavappa and his immediate successors there is an inherent probability in this. It coincides with the transition from the Mahāvamsa to the Cūlavamsa. That we have here a significant breach in the history of Ceylon, a powerful reaction in favour of the Theravāda after a period of decline can scarcely be disputed.

LIST OF SINHALESE KINGS

I have made my own list of the kings of the Cūlavam̐sa, but have added WICKREMASINGHE's figures in brackets. Where former lists differ from my own this has also been indicated in brackets. Thus for instance, (166. Vijayabāhu VI.) means that this king (Cūlav. ed. II. 656 f.) is wanting in my list. — Udaya I. (Dappula II.) means that the king whom I call Udaya I. appears elsewhere as Dappula II.

ABBREVIATIONS:

- M. = Mahāvam̐sa or from No. 59 onwards Cūlavam̐sa.
 Rv. = Rājāvaliya (published and translated by B. GUNASEKARA.)
 Pv. = Pūjāvaliya (A Contribution to the History of Ceylon, extracted from the Pūjāvaliya, Colombo 1893).
 Ns. = Nikāyasam̐grahaya (ed. WICKREMASINGHE).
 Rr. = Rājaratnākara (ed. SADDHANANDA, Colombo 1887).
 Nar. = Narendracaritāvalokanapradīpikā as quoted by WICKREMASINGHE.

Figures in italics denote that we have to do with fictitious numbers, whereas the others rest on more or less probable calculation. Figures in bold type are single traditional dates and chiefly those from non-Sinhalese sources or from inscriptions which serve to confirm the chronology of the Mahāvam̐sa.

The figures in the last column refer to the notes following the list of the kings.

³⁾ Rv. calls the successor of Tula King Lāmaṇṇitissa who had slain him and reigned 39 years. Then it passes on the Vajagambāhu. The Pv. also calls Tul's successor Lāmaṇṇitis.

¹⁾ WICKREMASINGHE is I think, wrong when he says on p. 8 that I had overlooked the fact that Iṇanāga was deposed in the first year of his reign by the Lambakanna. I inserted the three years (Mhva. 35. 27) dominion of the Lambakanna Mhva. Transl. p. xxxvii, last line, as "interregnum". When W. takes the round figure of 10 years for the interregnum + Iṇanāga's reign, I can only approve.

²⁾ According to Rv. Bhātikatissa's successors were: 1) Kuṭānā (20 years), 2) Vēratissa (22 years), 3) Abūsen (2 years). Then Sirinā (= No. 52) reigned 2 years.

¹⁾ For Nos. 9-14 (67-72) Rv. has also 27 years.

²⁾ Rr. has the same number of years.

³⁾ I do not think that Wicka. is right when he follows Rv. in giving 9 years instead of nine months to No. 19 (77). There are other instances of the Sinhalese sources giving years instead of the months or days of the Mhva. (No. 20, 25, 36), people being accustomed to reckon by years. We have no example of the reverse. Moreover with regard to No. 19 (77) Pv. agrees with the Mhva. It seems to me that it is only in cases where both Pv. and Rv. together are against the Mhva. that weight attaches to their statements. Wicka.'s reference to the reading vassamhi in S 5 is no help. It is so isolated in comparison with the other MSS. that it is clearly a mere slip of the scribe.

¹⁾ In the middle of the 16th century a number of princes reigned at the same time in different parts of the Island. The most eminent of these was Māyādhanu, the Māyādunne of Rv. The Virakkama of Mhva. 92. 6 is probably identical with Kumāra Baṇḍāra (Rv.). In addition to these Jayavīra Baṇḍāra who wielded power in the Highlands and Rājasīha or Rayigam Baṇḍāra are mentioned as contemporaries.

NOTES

1. The first traditional synchronism is that of the landing of Vijaya on the Island with the Nirvana of Buddha. Mhvs. 6. 47, Dīp. 9. 40. It makes the impression of having been purposely invented that the event might thereby have a greater significance. But it would be a mistake if for that reason we were to regard as inventions those single dates referring to later kings (Devānampiyatissa and Vaṭṭagāmaṇi). For here we start not from Vijaya but only from the Nirvana. But the reigns of the kings between Vijaya and Devānampiyatissa seem to have been manipulated in order to obtain the synchronism Vijaya-Nirvana.

2. A seemingly ancient tradition makes Devānampiyatissa a contemporary¹ of the Maurya king Asoka. There is no urgent reason for doubting the fact. According to Dīp. 17. 78, Devānampiyatissa was consecrated as king² 236 years (that is in the 237th year) after the Nirvana. This figure corresponds to the sum of the years which according to Dīp. and Mhvs. had elapsed since Vijaya. If we take the date arrived at by FLEET for Buddha's death — 483 B. C. we get the year 247/6 B. C. as Devānampiyatissa's coronation year and the fact of his being a contemporary of Asoka is confirmed.

3. According to Ns., p. 10¹⁴ Vaḷagāma Abā came to the throne 439 y. 9 m. 10 d. after the Nirvana³. This gives us 43 B. C. This agrees with the statement of Mv. 33. 80 f. as to the foundation of the Abhaya-vihāra¹. According to the statement in Mhvs. the foundation took place 217 y. 10 m. 10 d. after that of the Mahāvihāra the date of which is, according to FLÉER, in May 246. Therefore the Abhayagiri-vihāra was founded in March 28 B. C., after Vaṭṭagāmaṇi had had regained the kingdom.

² Also in Ns., p. 2¹⁹.

4. According to Rv. a famine called bāmini-sāya took place under Coranāga and lasted three years. This is said to have coincided with the beginning of the Saka era 78 A. D. = 622 A. B. The statement cannot be reconciled with the other events of the chronology. It would seem that the tradition about this famine was uncertain, for it is placed by Pv. 19² in the reign of Vaṭṭagāmaṇi.

5. For the end of the reign of Mahāsena and therewith of the so-called Great Dynasty Rv. and Rr. agree in giving 844 y. (? Pv. 846) 9 m. 25 d. after the Nirvana. Ns. 14¹⁰ reckons the beginning of the reign as 818 A. B., so that with a reign of 27 years the end would fall in 845 A. B. This² seems to me in fact one of those single dates which rest on a sure traditional basis. This is also easy to understand. The tradition was that of the Bhikkhus of the Mahāvihāra and for them the death of Mahāsena meant the end of a period of persecution and the beginning of a new period of prosperity. In Mhvs. transl. p. xxxviii I have calculated the year of Mahāsena's death as 352 A. D. The difference between it and that of Wickr. and S. can be adjusted by assuming that the round numbers of a reign usually include some extra months.

6. I refer the reader to the Chinese account mentioned on p. V which makes Śrimeghavappa a contemporary of the Indian king Samudragupta (326-375 A. D.).

7. Fa-hian comes to Ceylon 411-412 A. D. A therā mentioned by him is perhaps identical with the Mahādhammakathin named in Mhvs. 37. 175 (cf. note to the passage) as living under Buddhādāsa (AYRTON, JRAS. 1911, p. 1142). Of course this there may have survived Buddhādāsa, as the chronology seems to indicate.

² Cf. also SENAYERATNE, JRAS. C. B. xxiii, No. 67 (1914), p. 216.

8. For Mahānāma's reign Chinese sources furnish us with an exact date A. D. 428. See above p. V ff. For the arrival of Buddhaghosa in the reign of Mahānāma tradition furnishes us with a date which assuming 544/3 as the year of the Nirvana, yields 412/3 A. D.

9. For Kumāradhātusena's (Kumārdās) reign a Chinese notice mentioned by TENNENT¹ will serve. It says: "In the year 515 on the occasion of Kumara Das raising the chatta, an envoy was despatched with tribute to China." Unfortunately TENNENT does not state whether the name of the Sinhalese king is mentioned in the Chinese account. Possibly it is a deduction of his own. At any rate according to my own calculation, the year 515 would fall in the beginning of the reign of Kumāradhātusena.

10. A further Chinese notice quoted by L. (see p. 91 f.) offers difficulties. According to this, an embassy of the Sinhalese king Kia-che Kia-lo-ha-li-ya brought tribute to the Chinese Court in the y. 527 A. D. As a rule Kia-che is the transcription of the name Kassapa. But it is impossible that this could be Kassapa I. since he reigned before Kumāradhātusena (see note 9). S. LÉVI has already pointed out that the second name Kia-lo-ha-li-ya might refer to Silākāla (Ambaheraṇa Salamevan). It should be noted too, that Silākāla was the son-in-law of Upatissa II. (III.) and that according to Mhvs. 41. 8 ff., this king had a son called Kassapa who was Silākāla's most dangerous rival. It might therefore be assumed that the Chinese account had confused these two persons or that the Sinhalese tradition had made out of one Kassapa Silākāla two individuals.

11. For Silākāla we have one more single date handed down in the Ns. p. 17²⁸: 1088 A. B. = 544/5 A. D. According to Wickr. this date refers to the introduction of the Vetulla Canon (dhammadhatu)¹ which according to Ns., Rr. and Mhvs., took place in the twelfth year of the king's reign. This does not quite agree with our chronology, for according to Ns. the beginning of Silākūla's reign would fall in 532/3 A. D. (instead of 524)². If we might assume an error in the tradition and read 1080 instead of 1088 A. B. there would be complete agreement.

12. According to Mhvs. 42. 44 ff., the king of Kaliṅga came to Ceylon in the reign of Aggabodhi II. and entered the Order under the guidance of the Thera Jotipāla. According to H. W. CODRINGTON (HC. p. 35, 51) this king of Kaliṅga had been driven out by Pulakeśin II. of the Cālukya dynasty who had seized the kingdom of Kaliṅga. This took place according to JOUVEAU-DURRUIL, 609 A. D. This year must therefore fall within the reign of Aggabodhi II.

13. According to Mhvs. 47. 33 ff., Mānavamma tries in vain to wrest the dominion over Ceylon from King Dāṭhopatissa II. He is helped in this by his friend Narasiha at whose court in Jambudīpa he had taken refuge. According to H. p. 557, this is the Pallava king Narasimhavarman I. who reigned 630-668 A. D. This enables us to fix an approximate date for Dāṭhopatissa II.

14. From Chinese sources (L.) we know that in the y. 718/9 a Chinese pilgrim Vajrabodhi visited Ceylon and was received with honour by King Chi-li Chi-lo. The name of the king as it is given here, may very well be an abbreviation of Siri-Silāmegha(vappa). L. suggests Mānavamma, who also had the biruda of Silāmegha. AYRTON (Ceylon Notes and Queries II, Jan. 1914, p. xxvii ff.) quite rightly objects to this for chronological reasons. But his own identification with Aggabodhi VI. also offers difficulties with my calculation as well as with that of WICKR and S. I suggest Kassapa III, No. 43 (101).

² According to Rr. 1088 A. B. = 852 (sic!) after the introduction of Buddha's doctrine, was the date for Silākūla's ascent of the throne.

As we know, the biruda of Silāmegha alternates with that of Sirisamghabodhi. Since Kassapa III. was the second predecessor of Aggabodhi VI. who was certainly called Silāmegha (Mhvs. 48. 42), he is almost sure to have had the same surname, though this may not be expressly stated. All we know of him is that he was a very pious prince (Mhvs. 48. 20 ff.).

15. There is no difficulty about the two embassies of King Chi-lo-mi-kia to the Chinese Court in the years 742 and 746. That king was Aggabodhi VI. Silāmegha, No. 45 (103).

16. Inscriptions of the 1st and 16th years (according to my calculation therefore 896, 912) of the reign of Kassapa IV., No. 56 (114) in WICKREMASINGHE, EZ. II. 9 ff., I. 200 ff.; H. C. P. BELL, Anurādhapura, 7th Progress Report 1891 (= S. P. XIII. 1896) p. 60.

17. According to Mhvs. 52. 70 ff., Kassapa V. undertakes with the Pāḍyas an expedition against the Coḷas. It is unsuccessful. There is evidently an allusion to this (H. p. 525 f.) in the Udayāndiram inscription of the 15th year of the Coḷa king Parāntaka I. = 921/2. In it he boasts of his victory over the Pāḍyas and over an army come from Laṅkā. In an inscription, discussed by RAI BAHADUR VENKAYYA, of the 12th year of the same king's reign this twofold success is also mentioned.

18. Under Udaya IV. (III.) No. 62 (120), there was an incursion of the Coḷas into Ceylon who wished to seize the regalia of the Pāḍya king deposited there under Dappula IV. (V.) (Mhvs. 53. 9, 40 ff.). Anurādhapura was taken it is true, but the main object was not attained, as Udaya had taken the treasures to Rohapa for safety. According to H. 524 f. this event took place in the last year of the reign of Parāntaka I., and R. B. VENKAYYA has proved that it is only in his latest inscriptions of 943/4 to 947/8 that this king calls himself "Conqueror of Ceylon".

19. According to Mhvs. 54. 11 ff. the troops of the Vallabha king made an unsuccessful incursion into Ceylon under Mahinda IV. No. 64 (122). CODRINGTON (HC. p. 39, 53) supposes this to be the Coḷa prince Parāntaka II. whose general was defeated in 960. This date therefore falls in the reign of No. 64 (122).

20. Of Mahinda V. No. 66 (124) it is related in Mhvs. 55. 16 that in the 36th year of his reign the Coḷas carried off him, his queen and all his treasure to India. H. 522 ff. assumes that this king was Rājendra-Coḷa who boasts of having captured the crowns of the king and of the queens of Ceylon. He first mentions the conquest of Ceylon in 1017/8 but not in the inscriptions of the foregoing year. The year 1017 is therefore that of Mahinda's capture.

21. The Coḷa king Rājādhirājadeva relates (H. 520 f.) in an inscription of the year 1046 that he had deprived 4 kings of Ceylon of their crowns: a) Vikramabāhu, b) Vikramapāṇḍya, c) Vīraśālāmegha and d) Śrīvallabhamadanarāja. This clearly refers to events related in Mhvs. 56. Here the following kings are mentioned as being at war with the Coḷas: 1) Vikkama-bāhu, No. 67 (125) = a¹, 2) Kittī, 3) Mahālānakittī, 4) Vikkamapaṇḍu = b, 5) Jagatīpāla, 6) Parakkama. Of 3, 5, and 6 it is distinctly stated that they were slain in battle with the Coḷas, of 3 it is said besides that his crown fell as booty to the Daṃḷas. Nos. 1 and 4 however, whose names are clearly recognizable in Rājādhirāja's inscription, ended otherwise: No. 1 died of a disease, No. 4 in combat with No. 5. Still their crowns may have been among the booty. At any rate the year 1046 falls in that period; the events may have reached their conclusion about 1050.

22. For Vijayabāhu I. No. 74 (133) to Parakkama-bāhu I. No. 78 (137) I refer the reader to WICKREMASINGHE's excellent treatment of the subject in EZ. I, p. 122 ff. and II. 205 ff.

¹ I should now prefer to read in Mhvs. 56. 6 Devanagaraṃ instead of d° and translate "he betook himself to Devanagara (Dondra) and entered the company of the gods."

23. For Parakkamabāhu's campaign against Rāmañña (Mhvs. 76. 10 ff.) cf. H. C. P. BELL, Rep. on the Kégalla Dist., p. 73 ff. It took place in the 12th year of his reign. The Rāmañña prince Bhuvanāditta named in the Devanagala inscription, is identified by BELL with the king Narabaditsi-tsi-thu who reigned 1167—1204 (PHAYRE, History of Burma, p. 50, 281, 289).

24. The coronation day of Sāhasamalla is the earliest absolutely certain date in Sinhalese history. In the Polonnaruva inscription of this king (EZ. II, p. 219 ff.) the date given for the event is Wednesday (bada), the 12th day of the light half of the month Binera (August-Sept.), after the expiration of 1743 y., 3 m. and 27 days of the Buddha era. FLEET (JRAS. 1909, p. 327, 331) has calculated the date as Wednesday, 23rd August, 1200 A. D.

25. According to the Attanagaluvam̐sa Parakkamabāhu II., No. 94 (153), came to the throne in the year 1824 after the Sambodhi = 1779 A. B. = 1235/6 A. D., according to S. 155 = 1296 A. D. (reckoned from 483 B. C., not from 544/3 B. C., as the year of the Nirvana).

26. According to Mhvs. 90. 43 ff. the Tooth Relic came in the reign of Bhuvanekabāhu I., No. 96 (155), into the possession of the Pāṇḍya king Kulaśekbara. This king reigned (H.) 1268—1308 A. D. Under Bhuvanekabāhu's successor Parakkamabāhu III. the relic is restored by friendly negotiation. CODRINGTON (JRAS. C. B. XXVIII, No. 72, 1919, p. 82 ff.) refers to MAQRIZI's account of a Sinhalese embassy to the Egyptian Court in the year 1283 A. D. and identifies the name of the Sinhalese king mentioned in the account with that of Bhuvanekabāhu I.

27. For Bhuvanekabāhu IV., No. 102 (161), the Laṅkā-tilaka inscription is important. See B. GUNASEKARA, JRAS. C. B. X, No. 34 (1887) p. 83 ff.; H. C. P. BELL, Kégalla Dist., p. 92; WICKR. 29 f. It gives Śaka 1264 = 1342 A. D. as the year of his ascent of the throne. According to Mhvs. 90. 108 (also Ns., Nar.) 1894 A. B. = 1350/1 was the 4th year of his reign, the beginning of the reign therefore 1346/7. The difference is probably due to the fact that his appointment as yuvarāja took place in the y. 1342, this event being often reckoned as the beginning of the reign. According to CODRINGTON (HC. p. 83) No. 102 (161) reigned at least until 1353/4.

28. Cf. the preceding note also for Parakkamabāhu V., No. 103 (162). According to the Hapugastenne inscription (JRAS. C. B. xxii, No. 65, 1912, p. 362) the 11th year of his reign was = Śaka 1281 expired = 1359/60 A. D. The first year of his reign would be accordingly Śaka 1270 = 1348/9 A. D. But at that time No. 102 (161) was reigning and his successor probably yuvarāja. In the Vegiri-devale inscription (WICKR.) Parakkamabāhu V. in 1351/2 still calls himself āpā.

29. The Vigulavatta inscription (H. C. P. BELL, Kégalla Dist., p. 78) gives Śaka 1282 = 1360/1 A. D. as the 4th year of the reign of Vikkamabāhu IV., (III.) No. 104 (163). His reign would accordingly have begun in Śaka 1278 = 1356/7 A. D. This agrees with the Niyamgampāya inscription (WICKR. 31) which gives the 17th year of his reign as 1916 A. B. = 1373/4 A. D.

30. For Bhuvanekabāhu V., No. 105 (164), we have several dates. Cf. S. 174 f., WICKR. 33 f. The most important are: a) according to Ns. 1929 A. B. = 1385/6 A. D. was the 14th year of his reign which makes 1371/2 that of his coronation. — b) according to Mhvs. 91. 13 (Ns. also) he is succeeded after 20 years (thus in 1391) by Virabāhu. — c) according to the Vegiri-devale inscription, Bh. V. made an endowment in the 30th year of his reign. He must therefore have lived at least 10 years after 1391 and claimed the royal dignity. Mhvs. 91. 13 would not agree with this if we were to assume the reading kāleko (not sāleko with Col. Ed.); for the passage would then state that only after his (i. e. Bhuvanekabāhu's) death (nipphite kāle) Virabāhu of the Alakeśvara family, seized the power.

31. Ns. 30³⁰ Council under the leadership of Dhammakitti 1939 A. B. expired = 1396 A. D.

32. Vijayabāhu VI., No. (166), is not mentioned in the Mhvs. The chronicle ignoring the tragic end of the Alagakkonāras, jumps over to Parakkama VI. I refer the reader to the note to 91.3 of my translation. Dates according to L. (JRAS. C. B. xxiv, No. 68, 1915-6, p. 96 ff.): 1405, arrival of the Chinese Tcheng-houo in Ceylon; 1409 Tcheng-houo comes again to Ceylon and carries the king (No. 166) captive to China. The king is set free again in 1411 or 1412, but murdered the night after his return.

33. For Parakkamabāhu VI., No. 107 (168), we have again several dates. The most important are the following: a) ascent of the throne according to Mhvs. 91.15 as well as the inscription of Embekke-devale (H. C. P. BELL, Ceylon Notes and Queries, viii, Dec. 1916, p. cxxxii ff.): 1953 A. B. = 1409/10 A. D.) (according to other sources and to WICKR. 2 years or 5 years later). — b) Chinese accounts (in TENNENT, Ceylon I, p. 6^o f.), that in the year 1459 A. D. a king of Ceylon Pu-la-ko-ma Ba-zae La-cha had for the last time sent tribute to China. The king was evidently No. 107 (168). In the years 1416 and 1421 A. D. it is even related that the King of Ceylon brought the tribute in person.

34. With regard to the date for Bhuvanekabāhu VI., No. 109 (170), the Kalyani inscription of King Rāmādhipati of Pegu is important in that it mentions his embassy to King Bhuvanekabāhu, the son of Parakkamabāhu, in the Śaka year 837¹ = 2019 A. B. = 1476 A. D. Cf. CODRINGTON, HC. p. 93, 100; TAW SEIN KO, Indian Antiquary xxii, 1893, p. 11 ff., 29 ff. &c.

35. According to the Kelaniya inscription (AIC. No. 162) Parakkamabāhu IX., No. (173), ascended the throne in 2051 A. B.² = 1507/8 A. D. The 12th year of his reign fell according to the Munessaram Sannasa, in 2060 A. B., giving 1504/5 for his ascent of the throne, thus a difference of three years.

36. According to the Dondra inscription (H. C. P. BELL, Ké-galla Dist. p. 85 f.) the Śaka year 1432 = 1510 A. D. fell in the year after the 4th year of the reign of King Vijayabāhu VI.,

No. 112 (174), his ascent of the throne would fall accordingly in 1505 A. D.

37. P. E. PIERIS, The Date of Bhuvaneka Bāhu VII. (JRAS. C. B. xxii, No. 65, 1912, p. 267 ff.) comes to the conclusion that No. 113 (175) reigned 1521-1551 A. D.

38. Viravikkama, No. 164 (175 d), came to the throne (according to Mhvs. 92. 6) 2085 A. B. = 1541/2 A. D.

39. Māyādhana (Mayadunne), No. 115 (175 b), died according to Rājalekhana (WICKR.), Śaka 1503 = 1581/2 A. D.; Rājasīha I., No. 116 (177), according to Rv. Śaka 1514 = 1592/3 A. D.; Vimaladhammasuriya I., No. 117 (178), according to Rv. Śaka 1525 = 1603/4 A. D.; he came to the throne (Mhvs. 94. 5) 2135 A. B. = 1591/2 A. D.; Senāratana, No. 118 (179) died according to Rājalekhana (WICKR.) Śaka 1557 = 1635/6 A. D. and Rājasīha II., No. 119 (180), Śaka 1609 = 1687/8 A. D.; Vimaladhammasuriya II., No. 120 (181), Śaka 1629 = 1707/8 A. D.

40. Kittisirirājasīha, No. 123 (184), ascended the throne (Mhvs. 99. 2) 2290 A. B. = 1746/7 A. D. He died Śaka 1703 = 1781/2 A. D. He sends embassies to Siam (Mhvs. 100. 59 and 91) 2293 and 2296 A. B. = 1749/50 and 1752/3 A. D. Lastly Mhvs. 100. 282 gives 2301 A. B. = 1757/8 A. D. as the date for the consecration of the rebuilt Rajata-vihāra.

Vimaladhammasuriya II. builds a temple for the Tooth Relic and furthers the Order by the admission of monks from Arakan (v. 1-15). — Pilgrimages and other meritorious works (v. 16-22). — Narindasiha lays the Order under obligations, undertakes pilgrimages, performs other pious works and builds the new temple for the Tooth Relic (v. 23-47). — The sāmaṇera Sarapaṃkara takes the Tooth Relic under his protection and at the instigation of the King, performs several important works (v. 48-62).

Chapter 98

Vijayarājasīha marries princesses from Madhurā who embrace Buddhism and are its devoted disciples (v. 1-20). — The King's relations with Sarapaṃkara (v. 21-24). — Veneration of the Tooth Relic with great festivities (v. 25-57). — Sacrificial festival of lamps (v. 58-64). — The building of vibāras and the embellishment of Sirivaḍḍhana (v. 65-70). — Sermons (v. 71-79). — Banishment of the Paraṅgis, visit to the sacred places (v. 80-86). — Embassy to Ayojjhā in order to fetch bhikkhus. The King's end (v. 87-97).

Chapter 99

Kittisirirājasīha reigns piously and seeks to spread the Buddhist doctrine (v. 1-24). — Honours conferred on the bhikkhus from Rakkhaṅga and furtherance of the Order (v. 25-35). — Pilgrimage to the sacred places (v. 36-41). — Great festivities in Sirivaḍḍhana, specially in honour of the Tooth Relic (v. 42-74). — Continuation of the Mahāvamsa (v. 75-80). — Friendly relations of the King and his brothers who like himself, are believing Buddhists (v. 81-107). — Military embroilment with the Olandas who take Sirivaḍḍhana, but suffer a severe defeat (v. 108-139). — The Tooth Relic which had been concealed from the enemy is brought back to the town (v. 140-149). — The Olandas sue for peace (v. 150-167). — The King cares for the welfare of the Order (v. 168-182).

Chapter 100

Veneration of the Tooth Relic by the King who makes large offerings to it and celebrates festivals (v. 1-43). — Reform of the Order, embassy to Ayojjhā to King Dhammika who sends bhikkhus under the leadership of the therā Upāli to Laṅkā where they are received with great festivities (v. 44-90). — The King himself visits the monks from Sāminda in the Pupphārāma where dwellings are assigned them and instigates the holding of an Upasampadā ceremony (v. 91-96). — Furtherance of the newly established Order; the envoys who had accompanied the monks from Sāminda return thither (v. 97-135). — Dhammika again sends bhikkhus to Laṅkā. Death of Upāli (v. 136-148). — Envoys whom Kittisiri had sent to Dhammika return with rich gifts (v. 149-170). — Efficacy of the Siamese monks in Laṅkā; their return to Siam (v. 171-179). — The making of a Buddha image in Sirivaḍḍhana and ceremony of the Festival of the eyes (v. 180-200). — Rebuilding of the Gaṅgā:āma and furnishing of the monastery (v. 201-215). — Foundation of a monastery in Kuṇḍasālā (v. 216-219). — Restoration of the cult on the Sumanakūṭa (v. 220-228). — Restoration of destroyed monasteries and their property, namely of the Rajata-vihāra which is described in detail (v. 229-292). — Further meritorious works of the King and of his minister Suvannagāma (v. 293-301).

Chapter 101.

Sirirājādhirājasīha reigns piously (v. 1-18). — Sirivikkamarājasīha at first a pious prince, becomes a tyrannical monster. The people rise against him and banish him to the mainland. The British take possession of the kingdom (v. 19-29).

CHAPTER LXXIII

ACCOUNT OF THE REBUILDING OF PULATTHINAGARA

Now when the Ruler Parakkama had accomplished his 1 consecration as king, he the wise one, best among those who understand what is good (for the people), thought thus: "By 2 those kings of old who turned aside from the trouble of furthering the laity and the Order — who through lust, hatred, fear and delusion went woefully astray¹, who caused great evil 3
by the gathering of immeasurable taxes and the like — has this people aforetime been grievously harassed. May it hence- 4 forth be happy, and may the Order of the great Sage — long sullied by admixture with a hundred false doctrines, rent 5 asunder by the schism of the three fraternities and flooded with numerous unscrupulous bhikkhus whose sole task is the 6 filling of their bellies — (that Order) which though five thousand years have not yet passed, is in a state of decay, once more attain stability. Of those people of noble birth who here and 7
there have been ruined, I would fain by placing them again in their rightful position, become the protector in accordance with tradition. Those in search of help I would fain support 8 by letting like a cloud overspreading the four quarters of the earth², a rich rain of gifts pour continually down upon them.

² The Buddhist cosmology recognises four chief continents. Cf. Vv. 20. 10 cātunnaṃ mahādīpanaṃ issaraṃ yo'dha kāraye. S. V. 343²⁰ cātunnaṃ dīpanaṃ paṭilābho. In contrast to these are the 2000 small dīpas by which they are surrounded (VvCo. 104¹⁰). In the Gal-vihāra inscription

- 9 All this was (for me) while with arduous struggle I sought 10 the royal dignity, the absolutely preconceived result. Now is the time to carry out what I have wished." In consideration of this he bestowed office on those who deserved it¹.
- 11 Hereupon he had the drums beaten and those in search of help called together and he allotted them yearly a large 12 alms equal in weight to his body. Then the Ruler in order to promote the furtherance of the Order, assembled the great 13 community dwelling in the three fraternities. Further he called together many distinguished teachers learned in the methods 14 of discriminating between failure and non-failure, and as he himself was the foremost among those versed in the rules of the Order and acquainted with right and wrong, he could distin-15 guish the genuine from the false ascetics. Further being in virtue of his impartiality free from liking and disliking, and as a result of his unweariedness arduously active day and 16 night, he cured like a clever, expert physician who distin-17 guishes between curable and incurable disease, those which were curable and set aside those which were incurable by the method prescribed by the rules of the Order, free in his de-18 cisions from error. From the days of King Vattaḡāmaṇi Abhaya² the three fraternities had lost their unity, despite 19 the vast efforts made in every way by former kings down to the Buddha is compared to a rain-cloud which pours its blessing over the four continents. These continents are: Uttarakuru, Jambudīpa, Pubbavideha and Aparagodāna (WICKREMASEKERE, EZ. II, p. 278, n. 3). For the Brahmanic teaching of the Dvīpas see KIRPIL, Kosmographie der Inder, p. 110ff.

¹ Verses 2—10 form one sentence. It is governed by idāni kalam vi-dhātum etam sabboṃ mayā sambhāsitam. What he has aspired to is:
 1) with regard to the mass of the people that they should be happy
 (v. 4a); 2) with regard to the Order, that it might attain stability (yaṭhā assa addhanīyaṃ v. 6d); 3) with regard to the nobility, that the king should again become their protector (v. 7d: pālanaṃ must be supplemented by an assaṃ from assa in 6d "may I be"); 4) with regard to those in want, that the king may support them (v. 8d).

² For the schism in the Order at the time of this prince see Mhva. 83. 95ff.

the present day. They turned away in their demeanour from one another and took delight in all kinds of strife. But the all-wise Ruler who had already in past existences striven after the purification of the Order as something which must be attained¹, achieved its union, whereby he had to endure double as much heavy toil as in his efforts for the royal dignity. And he made the Order as uniform as milk and water so that it could last in purity for five thousand years².

Hereupon the best of men had a square hall³ erected in the middle of the town with four entrances and several large

² Verses 12—22 form one sentence. The principal verb in 22 c d is akāsi (jīnasāsanam kīrodakībhūtam), subject bhūpati in 21 d. The gerunds vāśikātvā (12 c) and samnipātiya (13 d), as also samaggaṃ katvā (21 d) are subordinate. This last is preceded by the pret. and pres. participles: — paṭighānūnayaṇṇijito (15 b), atandito (15 d), samupadhārento (16 c), tikicchanto and vivaṇṇayaṇṇa (17 a b), as well as anayāpetasamkappo (17 c) and anubhonto (21 c). These are all of them attributes of the subject. The object of samaggaṃ akāsi is nikāyattitayaṇṇa with the three attributes in 19 b c d of which the first has a still closer adverbial definition in 18 and 19 a ("in spite of the great efforts" etc.); payāsena must be supplemented by katena. — The brief account of our chronicle is confirmed by the Gal-vihāra inscription of Parakkamabāhu in Polonnaruwa. Cf. Ed. MÜLLER, AIC nr. 54; WICKREMASINGHE, EZ. II. 256 ff. From the contents it is even possible to establish certain connections between the inscription and the account of the Cūlava, though these are of too vague a character for us to draw far-reaching conclusions from them. Both start with the schism of the church under Vaṭṭagāmaṇi. Both speak of the intention that the Order should now be secure in its stability for 5000 years. In the Cūlava the king is compared to a cloud spreading itself over the four continents just as the inscription uses this comparison of Buddha. See also note to 78. 5. In chap. 78 a second and more detailed account of the reform of the church follows. Rājāvalī says (trsl. by B. GUÑASEKARA, p. 59) quite briefly: "he reconciled the religious differences which had existed since the reign of Vaṭṭagāma Abā." The account in the Nikāya-saṃgraha is more detailed (p. 22 of WICKREMASINGHE's ed.).

24 rooms and instituted a great almsgiving in which everything needful was to be had daily for many hundreds in number 25 who had kept the precepts of moral discipline¹. And every year the Ruler of men had given to each of them according to his age, garments and mantles, (thus) at all times full of 26 benevolence. Thereupon he had four almshouses built in the four districts of the town and had them erected in separate 27 divisions, and therein he placed many vessels of bronze, cushions 28 and pillows, mats, carpets and bedsteads as well as cows by the thousand that gave sweet milk. Then near these (halls) 29 at a spot with pure water he laid down charming gardens adorned with trees that bore abundant blossom and fruit, and 30 fair as the garden of Nandana². Further generous as he was,
 he set up in their neighbourhood rich provender houses 31 supplied with money and money's worth which contained all necessities such as syrup, sugar, honey and the like. And 32 (there) he instituted for many thousands of bhikkhus from all four regions of the earth who practised moral discipline and other virtues, for Brahmins belonging to a mendicant 33 order, as well as for many other supplicants and poor travellers daily a great almsgiving, he the wise (prince), untiring, unwearying, with a heart full of love.

34 Hereupon the Ruler of men, filled with pity, had another great hall built for many hundreds of sick people, fitted for 35 their sojourn there, and had placed in it in the way above described, a complete collection of all articles of use. There 36 also he gave to each sick person a special slave and a female slave to prepare day and night according to need, medicines 37 and food, solid and liquid. There too he had many provender houses built in which a quantity of medicine, money and 38 money's worth and the like were collected. To discerning and skilful physicians who were quick at distinguishing various (bodily) conditions and who were versed in all the text books,

¹ P. śīlapālānaṃ refers as W. assumes, to monks. "Age" in v. 25 (P. yathāruddhaṃ) means then the period of belonging to the Order.

² The pleasure garden of the god Indra. E. W. HOPKINS, Epic Mythology, p. 141.

he gave maintenance according to their deserts, recognising 39
 the merits in all of them and made them day and night practise the medical art in the best manner. He himself on 40 the four Uposatha days in the month, having laid aside all his ornaments and having taken upon himself the vow of the sacred day, pure with pure upper garment, surrounded by his 41 dignitaries, was wont to visit that hall, his heart cooled with pity¹. With an eye that charmed by goodness he gazed at 42 the sick. And as the Ruler of men was himself versed in medical lore², he the all-wise summoned the physicians ap- 43 pointed there, tested in every way their healing activities, and 44
 if their medical treatment had been wrongly carried out he met them with the right method, pointed it out to them as the best of teachers and showed them the proper use of the 45 instruments by skilfully treating several people with his own hand. Then he tested the favorable or unfavorable condition 46 of all the sick, let those who were rid of their illness have garments given to them and then rejoicing in good, after he 47 had taken his reward³ from the hands of the physicians and given them their reward³, he returned to his palace. By such 48 means year by year he being (himself) free from disease, freed the sick from all their illnesses.

Yet another miracle never before seen or heard was mani- 49 fest in him who was rich in the virtue of pity rightly exercised.
 To that hall there came, tortured by great pain, a crow 50 suffering from an ulcer that had formed in her cheek. As if 51

² P. āyubbede = skr. āyurvede. The Āyurveda "Veda of the (Lengthening of the) Span of Life" was held to be the basis of all medical knowledge and was regarded as an upāṅga of the Ātharvaveda. See WINTER-NITZ, Gesch. der ind. Literatur, III, p. 542; J. JOLLY, Medicin, p. 12 f.

³ Each time the expression patti is used. Employed of the king, it means the merit working itself out in the kamma. This merit is found in the healing activity of the physicians and is left by them to the king, because he is its spiritual parent. Cf. note to 42. 50. Employed of the doctors, patti means the payment for their services.

chained by the strong bands of his pity she sat as if with clipped wings, motionless outside the hall moaning piteously.
 52 The physicians who rightly recognised her condition, caught 53 her and cured her at the Great King's command. Her disease cured, the King set her upon an elephant and having made her walk round the town, her right side towards it, he set 54 her free. Where, when and by whom was ere such exceeding great mercy even to animals seen or heard?
 55 Thereupon King Parakkamabāhu, the hero, to whom all right-minded people were devoted, set about the rebuilding in grandeur and beauty of the superb city of Pulatthinagara
 56 which had reached such a state that nought but its name remained, and which no longer sufficed to make manifest his 57 superlatively royal glory¹. The Monarch now had a high chain of walls built which on all sides enclosed the fortified 58 town² and was larger than the town wall³ of former kings and gleamed with its coating of lime bright as autumn clouds.
 59 Then after he had built round this three walls⁴ each in turn 60 smaller than the other, he laid down various streets. Then he

¹ For the following description compare above all A. M. HOGARTY, The Topography of Polonnarava (ASC. Memoirs II. 1926, p. 8 ff.). H. W. COLEMAN is certainly right in his assumption that the description in the Cūlavamsa proceeds from south to north. I refer the reader at once to the second and later account of Parakkamabāhu's building activities in 78. 31 ff.

² By khandācāra I understand here the inner walled part of the town in contrast to the open parts of the town lying around it. The "chain of walls" refers probably to the rampart of the town still recognisable, stretching for about a mile from north to south and half a mile from east to west. Within this rampart lies the "citadel" with the royal castle. See note to v. 61.

erected around his own palace and around his whole dwelling a second inner wreath of walls¹ and built thereon a palace² 61 seven storeys high, furnished with a thousand chambers and adorned with many hundreds of pillars painted in divers hues. It was richly supplied with hundreds of alcoves³ which were 62 like to the summit of the Kelāsa⁴ mountain and were radiant with manifold ornaments of climbing plants and flowers. It 63 had doors and windows of gold large and small, well divided walls and stairs and offered conveniences for every season. It was ever adorned with many thousands of various beds 64 which were made of gold, ivory and the like and had costly

² The word for "palace", pāsāḍaṇ, first occurs in v. 70. All the verses between contain attributes of which I have made independent sentences. There is no doubt that the palace is recognisable in the ruins which are marked "palace" on the plans. It is enclosed along with a number of subsidiary buildings by a rampart (the anupākāra of the text) "forming an oblong of roughly 440 by 264 yards" (A. M. Hocutt, l. c., p. 8). The enclosed ground is now known by the name of the "citadel", and the palace stands in the southern part of the square. Cf. for the whole H. C. P. Bell, ASC. 1911-12 (= S. P. III, 1915), p. 50 ff. When the Cūlava. speaks of a thousand apartments and many hundreds of pillars that is of course merely the stereotyped exaggeration constantly recurring in such descriptions. At the same time there is a striking number of tiny rooms grouped round the central main part of the building in the groundfloor. There are more than fifty of them. Without doubt there were further apartments in the upper storeys. That the palace at least in its central portions consisted of one or several storeys is proved by the extraordinary strength of the walls enclosing the innermost chamber. These are more than ten feet thick. Then too a broad staircase is still standing which led from the south of this room upwards. Unfortunately our chronicle gives instead of exact figures merely the customary phrases prescribed by poetics.

⁴ Buildings which are high, pointed and white in colour (covered with stucco), especially stūpas (78. 77), are frequently compared to the Kelāsa mountain (cf. 68. 41 and note).

65 coverings. The height of its splendour¹ was reached in the royal sleeping apartment which was ever immeasurably re-66 splendent with a thick bunch of pearls² suspended at its four corners, white as moonbeams and gleaming so that they 67 laughed to scorn the beauty of the divine Gaṅgā. (The sleeping apartment) was adorned with a wreath of large golden lampstands which breathed out continually the perfume of 68 flowers and incense. With the network of tiny golden bells³ suspended here and there and giving forth a sound like the 69 sound of the five musical instruments, the palace made known, as it were, the rich fulness of the merits of the King. This 70 splendid palace, like to a matchless structure of Vissakamma⁴, charming and peerless, he, the first among the protectors of the earth, built and gave it the name of Vejayaṇṭa⁵.
 71 For the carrying out of the ceremonies of expiation by the Brahmans (he built) the Hemamandira and for the recitation 72 of magic incantations the charming Dhāraṇīghara⁶. For listening to the birth stories of the great Sage which were related by a teacher appointed there for the purpose, (he built)

¹ So I translate sāndhikataṃ uttamam (cf. skr. sandhikā as well as below v. 152) in v. 67d. Verses 66b to 67ab contain attributes of sīrī-sayanagabbhena in 67c, v. 65 attributes of thālamuttakāḍḍhena.

² In Rām. 5. 9. 17 it is said of Rāvaṇa's palace nistulabhīṣca mūtā-bhīṣtalena bhīmīrājitaṃ.

³ The kiṅkiṇī(ka)jāla is one of the ornaments of the maṇḍapas (JāCo. I. 32³¹; DhCo. I. 274²) and of the pāsādas (D. II. 188⁶; Mhv. 27. 16, 27).

⁵ This is the name of Indra's palace. See 48. 136.

⁶ I take hemamandira "golden house" and dhāraṇīghara "house of incantation" as the names of the buildings in question. Santī in a is as otherwise santikamma, to be understood in the technical sense of skr. śānti. Cf. with parivattana in c parivattanamanta JāCo. I. 200¹⁶. It is impossible now to say which of the present ruins correspond to the buildings mentioned. We should probably look for them in the various structures in the immediate vicinity of the palace.

the fair Maṇḍalamandira¹. For the reception of the magic 73 water and of the magic thread given him by the yellow-robed ascetics (he built) the Pañcasattatimandira². Lastly he who 74 ever trod the path of the true doctrine, erected a sermon house³. It was surrounded by an enclosure of coloured curtains and adorned with costly canopies. By reason of the 75 many-hued, sweet-smelling flowers laid down here and there as offerings it had the semblance of a single nosegay. Its 76 interior was constantly lighted by lamps with scented oil and perfumed by incense of gum resin. It was gaily adorned with 77 many likenesses of the Victor (Buddha) in gold and the like and was resplendent with a garland of pictures of the Omniscient
 One, which were painted on stuff. When that Prince among 78 kings entered it to place with his own hand a (jewel as) eye⁴ upon the statue of the Victor, or to honour by sacrifice the 79
 Tathāgata, or to listen to the unsurpassable true doctrine
 — (then) was it like unto a divine hall of assembly. It was 80

- graced by a wonderful peacock which drove people out of 81 their senses whenever screeching its peacock cry, it began its dance together with the dancing girl who danced there while they struck up a sweet rhythmic song¹.
- 82 Further in order to listen to the rhythmic songs of the many musicians and to behold their charming dance, the Monarch had built near the palace the Sarassatimaṇḍapa².
 83 It glittered in every direction with its golden pillars. It was delightful with paintings relating to his (Parakkamabāhu's) 84 deeds. It was embellished by a wishing-tree offering all desired things which sparkled with all kinds of ornaments such 85 as earrings, bracelets, necklaces and the like, which was resplendent with garments of linen, silk, Chinese stuff and other 86 materials, which gleamed with its golden trunk and a row of branches, and which was adorned by a flock of numerous birds which were painted on it.
- 87 Further he had the fair maṇḍapa erected which bore the name Rājavesibhujāṅga³. It was like unto the hall of the gods, called Sudhammā, which descended to earth, just as if

the good deeds of all people were accumulated at one spot. It was three-storeyed, ornamented with coloured pictures, 88 surrounded by lines of fair *vedikās*¹, exquisite, adorned with 89 a costly chair beneath a wishing-tree which offered the singers and other people the wished-for objects. It shimmered with its 90 manifold precious stones like the diadem, sparkling in the sun, of that fair lady, the island of Laṅkā, whom he won by the force of his arms²; and it was like unto the wreath of tresses of 91 the protector of the world of men³. In the same way he 92 built the fair *Ekatthambha-pāsāda*⁴ that ended with a ma-

¹ What vedikā means is not easy to determine. Noteworthy is the frequency of the phrase vedikāya parikkhitta „surrounded by a vedikā” as for instance a bathing pond, a pokkharāṇi D. II. 179^f ff. Here most probably it means a railing, since just before the same has been said of a stair case. As a staircase when it is of gold etc. has golden thambhā (that is railing gates) and sūciyo (i. e. cross-bolts), as well as an uphāsa (cornice) of silver, in the same way the vedikā of the pond has it. Cf. further VvCo. 340⁵, where kañcanacedimissaṇṇa is explained by suvannamayāyā vedikāya sahitaṇṇa parikkhittaṇṇa. A vedikā is part of a heavenly pāsāda just as the rooms, the windows, the network of bells (Mhvs. 27. 16). The lohapāsāda had a parāḷavedikā, a vedikā of coral (Mhvs. 27. 26). There was a nānāraśanavedikā round the bodhi tree (Mhvs. 30. 70). A vedikā belongs to a stūpa (Mhvs. 32. 4; 34. 41), to an image house (Mhvs. 78. 40), to a bathing-house (Mhvs. 78. 46). Cf. also note to 76. 118.

² I divide siṃhābhūḍa (= instr.) aruṇe. For it is hardly admissible to take the whole as a parallel compound to laṅkāgandya.

⁴ Lit. „one-pillar-palace”. In such a one-pillar-palace, gehe ekathūṇike, was Citti the daughter of Paṇḍuvāsudeva confined, to prevent her coming into contact with any man. JāCo I. 441²⁴⁻²⁵ also mentions an ekatthambhakapāsāda which serves as a king's dwelling. For an idea of what such a structure looked like, v. 94a b is important where it is compared to a candelabra. One must therefore oddly enough imagine the pāsāda as something in the form of a dovecote. It should be remembered however, that the rooms both in the royal castle at Polonnaruwa and in the Baddhasāmapāsāda were extremely small, not more than 8×10 ft. In Veherabendigala I saw something like a room just large enough for a man stretched at full length to lie down in.

93 kara¹ and rose aloft as if it had split open the earth. And it was adorned with a superb golden chamber² that was 94 placed above on a golden column, possessed of the beauty of a cave of gold for this lion among kings, and which glittered like a candelabra on a golden foot.
 95 Again the Ruler, the leader of earth protectors, had a private garden laid down in a region close to the kings house.
 96 As one felt that it showed by its beauty a likeness to the (heavenly) pleasure garden Nandana, and by lavishing charm charmed the eyes of men³, it received the name of Nandana⁴.
 97 Its trees were twined about with jasmin creepers and it was filled with the murmur of the bees drunk with enjoyment of 98 the juice of the manifold blossoms. There campaka, asoka and tilaka trees, nāgas, punnāgas and ketakās, sal trees, pā-99 ṭali and nīpa trees, mangos, jambū and kadamba trees, vakulas, coco-palms, kuṭajas and bimbijālakas, mālatti, mallikā, tamāla 100 and navamālikā shrubs⁵ and yet other trees bearing manifold fruits and blossoms rejoiced the heart of the people who went 101 thither. Pleasant it was, and with the cry of the peacocks and the gentle twitter (of the birds) it always delighted the 102 people. It was furnished with a number of ponds with be-

² P. jātarūpanisāsena, with a dwelling-room, a habitation of gold.

³ I separate thus: . . . janānaṃ nayanā (acc. pl.) nandanā-daṃ nandayati. The fem. nandanā is found also S. I. 6¹⁰.

⁵ The botanical names are in the same order 1. melastoma champaka, 2. Artocarpus asoka, 3. unknown (Skr. tilaka), 4. Mimusops ferrea, 5. Albizia tinctoria, 6. Pandanus odoratissimus, 7. Shorea robusta, 8. Bignonia suaveolens, 9. Nauclea cadamba, 10. Mangifera indica, 11. Eugenia jambolana, 12. Nauclea cordifolia, 13. Mimusops elengi, 14. Cocos nucifera, 15. Wrightia antidysenterica or Nerium antidysentericum, 16. Momordica monodelpha, 17. Jasminum grandiflorum, 18. Jasminum sambac, 19. Xanthochymus pictorius, 20. a variety of Jasminum sambac.

autiful banks whose chief decoration were red and blue lotos
 flowers and which appropriated all that was the loveliest of the lovely. It was adorned too with a large gleaming bath- 103
 room¹ supported by pillars resplendent with endless rows of figures in ivory, which was fair and like to a mountain 104 of cloud pouring forth rain by (reason of) the showers of water which flowed constantly from the pipes of the apparatus, and which seemed to be the crown jewel of the beauty of 105 the garden² and ravished the eye. The garden was (further) 106 resplendent with an extensive palace³ adorned with many columns of sandalwood, resembling an ornament on the earth's 107 surface, that glittered, peerless, shimmering, and with an octagonal maṇḍapa resembling an ear ornament. It was also 108 adorned with another large, fair, charming maṇḍapa that had the charm of a wreath of serpentine windings⁴. There in the 109 garden the Silāpokkharāṇī⁵ pond continually captivated the King who was highest among rulers of the earth, who had attached the good without number to himself. Still more 110 delightful was the garden by (means of) the Maṅgalapokkharāṇī

¹ P. dhārāmaṇḍapa (v. 105) corresponds to the skr. dhārāgrha. From the description it is clear that a shower bath is meant.

² P. vyāṇalakṣhiyā. It must be borne in mind that lakṣmī is at the same time the name of the goddess of beauty, Lakṣmī. Thus in the picture the garden is compared with the goddess and the "palace" with an ornament of her diadem.

⁵ I. a. stone pond. Having regard to the two names occurring in v. 110, I prefer to take this as a proper name. W. also understands puṇṇapokkharāṇī in v. 111 as such. It is quite possible. We must then join sugandhicāripūrena with nandayanā "which gladdened by the fullness of perfumed water". My translation of vv. 111, 112 was determined by the circumstance that °pūrena and puṇṇa° occur next to each other.

pond, and provided with the Nandāpokkharapī pond it looked 111 like the divine garden of Nandana. Yet another pond gleamed 112 there, filled with a stream of perfumed water, gladdening the royal moon, and it was ever fair with rich beauty and splendour, furnished with the cave called Vasanta and with bathing ponds¹.

113 Again on land that resembled an island because the water divided into two arms, the foe-subduer laid down a second 114 garden, the Dīpuyyāna². There one saw the Dhavalāgāra³ that like to the summit of the Kelāsa, was made entirely of 115 stucco, wonder exciting. The garden was adorned with a Vimāna which bore the name of Vijjāmaṇḍapa because it was 116 built to show forth the various branches of science. And there too gleamed the beautiful, roomy⁴ Doḷāmaṇḍapa⁵ that was

¹ The pokkharapī ca comes in rather lamely after bathing-ponds have been already mentioned in v. 109 to 111. The question is where must the garden be looked for. In my opinion no weight can be attached to the structures in it mentioned in the text. The description is purely formal, made up according to the recipe for describing a garden. Even the enumeration of the many trees means nothing. The author is merely displaying his botanical knowledge or rather his acquaintance with literary sources like Abhp. 536 ff. Of actual facts which could be utilised little remains but that it was a gharuyyāna a house-garden (private garden). We must look for it therefore in the immediate neighbourhood of the royal castle and I believe therefore that it filled the northern half of the citadel. Doubtless it contained pavilions and bathing arrangements. A. M. Hocart is inclined to look for the Nandana garden to the east of the palace and outside of the citadel, mainly on account of the sīlāpokkharapī, since a bathing pond answering this description does in fact lie under the eastern wall of the citadel.

² Opinion is now unanimous, I think, that the "island park" lies on the so-called "promontory" that juts out in the Topaveva west of the citadel and on which are now situated the rest house and the bungalow of the Archaeological Survey. For the ruins of the Promontory see the plan ASC. 1901 (= LHL. 1907). For the bathing-house in the Dīpuyyāna cf. EZ. II. 143.

³ I. e. "white house", to be taken as a proper name.

⁴ The meaning of paṇḍita is unknown. Skr. paṇḍita (cf. Kauṭaliya 2. 2. 1) means a (fenced-in) pasture.

⁵ I. e. "swing pavilion".

furnished with a swing hung with tiny pretty golden bells. The garden was further resplendent with the vimāna called 117 Kijāmaṇḍapa¹ where the king at the head of the sport officials connoisseurs of the merry mood², was wont to amuse himself. And it was for ever embellished by the so-called Sanimaṇḍapa³ 118 which consisted of ivory, and again by another (maṇḍapa), the superb so-called Moramaṇḍapa⁴ and also by the Ādāsamaṇḍapa⁵ 119 whose walls consisted of mirrors. There too the bathing 120 pond Anantapokkharapī⁶ with its stones whose layers resembled the coils of (the serpent king) Ananta, continually captivated the people. There the bathing pond Cittāpokkharapī⁷ with 121 its gay pictures rejoiced the foe-subduer Parakkamabāhu, the royal sage. Resplendent there was a four-storeyed, peerless 122 palace, painted with various pictures and bearing the name Siṅgāravimāna⁸. The garden was adorned with tāla and 123 hintāla palms, was resplendent with nāga and punnāga trees and was rich in banana, kaṇṭhikāra and kaṇṭhikāra trees⁹.

² P. hassarasa = skr. hāsyarasa. On the theory of the rasas s. note to 72. 94.

⁴ I. e. "peacock pavilion".

⁵ I. e. "mirror pavilion".

⁶ Ananta is here the name of the world serpent Śeṣa (see Hovkins, Epic Mythology 23—24). It is also called Anantabhoga, and it would be possible to insert this name also here in anantabhogasaṃkāśasamivacasila (instead of "coils of the a"). W. seems to do this. But then it is not clearly indicated in what the comparison consists. In my opinion the steps surrounding the pond were laid somewhat in this form: ~~~~~

⁷ I. e. "picture pond".

⁹ The botanical names are in the same order: 1. borassus flabelliformis, 2. phoenix paludosa, 3. mesua ferrea, 4. rottlera tinctoria, 5. mus sapientum, 6. pterosperrum acerifolium, 7. premna spinosa (?). — Verses

124 Now there was in the palace of the Monarch of all races of rulers, among those belonging to the closest of his followers, a man named Mahinda. He was a worshipper of the triad 125 of the Jewels¹, understood what was blessed and unblessed, was wise, pure in heart, versed in the means of accomplishing 126 many meritorious actions, never went astray through lust, hatred, fear or delusion, was never satiated with the fulness² of goodness, as little as the ocean by the (streaming in of 127 the) waters. He was gifted with conscientiousness and modesty, attacked ever with brave courage and was a discerning guar-128 dian of moral discipline. Now this man with the favour of the sublime Monarch who was ever a helper in all (good) 129 enterprises, caused a pāsāda to be built for the honour of the sacred Tooth Relic which was pure by its suffusion with the nectar of the eighty-four thousand portions of the doctrine.
130 The same (pāsāda) was embellished by a roofing and doors and windows of gold and was resplendent with numerous 131 paintings within and without. It gleamed with canopies of various colours like a golden mountain surrounded by a net 132 of lightning. It was resplendent with curtains which glistened in brilliancy, and with a series of couches covered with costly 133 coverings. It was like to a dwelling of the goddess of beauty, glorious as if all the grace found in each living being were 134 concentrated in one spot³. It was resplendent with its vast, charming hall of the moon, which was wonderfully beautiful, white as light, or as pearl ornaments, or as geese, or as snow, 135 or as a cloud. Banners were fixed on it, it was fair, with gilded summit, bright, calling forth delight, beautiful⁴.

113—123 again form one sentence which must be analysed according to note to v. 96. According to the description in this passage, the garden must have been full of buildings. That would fit the "promontory" on which there are many ruins, amongst others those of a bathing-pond.

⁴ The verses 124 to 135 are one sentence. The subject is Ma-

Further the King, the sole banner of the stem of the 136 nobility, possessed a dear consort who had come forth, rejoicing the eyes of the people, as the moon (rises) from the ocean, from (the house of) the great king Kittisirimegha¹, 137 who loved him, the highest of rulers, as Sītā (loved) Rāma. Amongst all the ladies of the harem, many hundreds in number, 138 she was by far his best loved. She loved the triad of the 139 jewels and beyond her own husband who was like to the King of the gods (Indra), she cared for none even as much as grass whoever he might be. She did what the Lord of men wished, 140 had friendly speech, was adorned with the ornament of many virtues such as faith, discipline and the like, was skilful in 141 dance and song, possessed an intelligence (sharp) as the point of the kusa grass, her heart was ever cooled by the practice of the virtue of pity². She, the Queen Rūpavatī, most 142 beauteous of beauteous women, the clever, the virtuous, pure in action, the highly-famed, mindful of the doctrine of the Victor 143 which teaches of impermanency, had learned many sayings of the great Sage and kept them in her memory, as for instance "Short is the life of the lamentable men; the pious man should 144 live as if his head were in flames; there is no escape from hindanāmako (v. 127 c), predicate and object are kāresi pāsādaṃ. Verses 124—127 contain the attributes to the subject, verses 130—134 (after an adverbial in 128, 129) the attributes to the object pāsādaṃ. It is to be noted that nothing is said about the spot where this temple of the Tooth Relic was built. A. M. Hocart assumes that it must have stood in the Dīpuyyāna, since the kings used to keep the sacred relic near the palace. He says (Memoirs ASC. II. 4): "Perhaps that puzzling structure called the Mausoleum, without doors or windows may be the temple in question." V. 130 seems on the other hand to contradict this. However the Tooth Relic was in Rohaṇa in the early times of Parakkama. Its recapture is first described in the following chapter. If then Mahinda's building was to serve for the keeping of it, its recapture was either actually expected or the structure belongs to the time after the close of the campaign described in Chap. 74. Cf. also 74. 198 ff.

145 death"¹. Thus as she knew the short-lived nature of beings who wander about the ocean of existences, and as she knew that there was no firm hold there that could compare with 146 meritorious works, so she was unwearied in much well-doing, and as thereby she achieved her speedy escape from the cycle 147 (of rebirths) she built in the midst of the town a vast golden thūpa², as it were a golden ship to reach the saving shore of Nirvana.

148 Further in this beautiful town the all-wise (king) had different kinds of streets laid down, many hundreds in number, adorned with many thousands of dwellings of two, three and 149 more storeys and provided with various bazaars where all wares were to be had and in which day by day there was 150 incessant traffic of elephants, horses and chariots — (streets) which were here and there enlivened by people who were ever indulging in great games.

151 Then he laid down in the vicinity three suburbs called 152 Rājavesibhujāṅga, Rājakulantaka and Vijita, adorned with three three-storeyed pāsādas which possessed every excellence 153 and every beauty, and crowned by three vihāras which were 154 named Veļuvana, Ispatana and Kusinārā³. But between the

² H. C. P. Bell (ASC. 1909 = VI. 1914, p. 6) has already identified this with the thūpa of the so-called Pabulu-vehera, situated within the ramparts, thus in the town itself and in its northeastern part.

royal palace and the three towns the monarch had built at a distance of a *gāvuta*¹ from each other, charming sermon houses and image chapels² and splendid vihāras adorned with rest-houses for bhikkhus from all four regions of the heavens.

In the town Pulatti(nagara) by name furnished thus with all accessories and provided with every luxury, like to a garden made beautiful by union with the joy of spring, which he himself enlarged so that it was four gāvutas long and seven *gāvutas*³ broad, which bore his name — the beauteous one — which possessed a splendid wreath of walls, which was resplendent with fair dwellings, which contained large as well as small streets, which was an elixir for the eyes — (in this town) the Lord of men who was like to Puripdada (Indra), who was skilled in the preserving of all advantages, those not yet achieved and those already achieved, had fourteen gates erected: the superb King's Gate⁴, the beautiful Lion Gate, the great Elephant Gate, further the Indra Gate, the gate called after *Hanumant*⁵, the lofty Kuvera Gate, the brightly painted Caṇḍi Gate, as well as the *Rakkhasa Gate*⁶, the high-towering Ser-town of the same name mentioned in Mhvs. 7. 45 is quite unhistorical. But it is not impossible that the suburb was named after that town. The three monasteries were called after especially sacred places: ... Veļuvana after the park near Rājagaha which was given to Buddha by Anāthapiṇḍika; Isipatana after the park in Benares where Buddha preached his first sermon; and Kusinārā after the place where he entered Nirvana. For Veļuvana see below note to 78. 87.

¹ Cf. 78. 91, 85. 20. According to the Kaṇṭaliya 2. 20 a gācuta (skr. gavyūta or goruta) would be the equivalent of $\frac{1}{4}$ yojana (cf. note to 38. 68 and I, p. 349) that is, if the Indian yojana as is likely, is the standard of measurement, a little over two miles (according to the Buddhist yojana the half of that).

³ If we reckon the gācuta as over two miles then what is meant here could not possibly be the city with its ramparts alone which reached nothing like these dimensions, but the outlying open town as well.

⁶ For Kuvera see note to 37. 106, for the rakkhasas note to 39. 34. Caṇḍi (the same in Skr.) is a name of the goddess Durgā, wife of Śiva.

163 pent Gate and the resplendent Water Gate, further the Garden Gate and the beautiful Māyā Gate¹, the Mahātitttha Gate², and the splendid Gandhabba Gate³.

164 In this manner did King Parakkamabāhu who possessed the firmness of the king of the mountains, whose intelligence was sharp as the thunderbolt, make the aforetime small town of Pulatthinagara which had suffered by many wars, splendidly adorned as the city of the Tāvatisa gods.

Here ends the seventy-third chapter, called «Account of the Rebuilding of Pulatthinagara», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

² Through this gate ran in all probability the road leading to Anurādhapura and from here to the well known port Mahātitttha on the western shore of Ceylon.

³ P. gandhabba = Skr. gandharvā, denotes a group of semi-divine beings who are regarded as the heavenly musicians. They are the male counterpart of the accharā, the nymphs.

CHAPTER LXXIV

ACCOUNT OF THE FESTIVAL OF THE TOOTH RELIC

With the idea that the original capital¹ Anurādhapura 1 which had been utterly destroyed in every way by the Coja army, was specially deserving of honour, since its soil was 2 hallowed while he lived² by the feet of the Master, distinguished by the wheel with its thousand spikes and its rim, and because it was the place where the southern branch of 3 the sacred Bodhi tree (was planted) and where a dopa³ of relics was preserved — (with this idea) the Lord of men be- 4 gan to take in hand its restoration. Hereupon the discerning 5 Lord of men summoned a high dignitary and instructed him in accordance with his wishes. The latter accepted the charge 6 without disregarding it in any way, with bent head, made obeisance with clasped hands, betook himself to Anurādhapura 7 and himself acquainted with the appropriate action, began to carry out to the uttermost the king's command. Within the 8 compass of the capital of the former kings the skilled one restored within a short time the large and the small walls, the streets, the pāsādas and the gate towers, the charming 9

² According to the legend the Buddha also visited the site of the future Anurādhapura during his three sojourns in Lankā. The picture of the wheel on the sole of the foot is one of the 32 great bodily marks of a mahāpurisa (see D. II. 17), who will either become a great world ruler or a Buddha.

³ A measure of capacity used specially for corn. Skr. droṇa.

bathing-ponds and the delightful gardens as they had been 10 formerly; also the cetiyas of the three fraternities, the Mahācetiya and the others, as well as the numerous vihāras such 11 as the Lohapāsāda and the like, as well as the pāsāda serving him as dwelling, with its gates, bastions and towers, with its 12 royal courtyard, and embellished with a charming moon chamber, and brought it about that the whole town furnished 13 with these and other marvellous works was as aforetime. Thus he had the buildings set up by many former kings repaired 14 in haste by one of his dignitaries. For all wishes are fulfilled for the wise who partake of the harvest of good deeds accumulated in many existences.

15 Hereupon the all-wise (Prince) laid the foundations of the town called Parakkama(pura)¹. It was furnished with gates 16 and towers, with walls, moats, streets, pāsādas and shops and adorned with parks which were embellished with pāsādas, erected there for the shelter of many hundreds of bhikkhus 17 who strove after moral discipline and other virtues. It was superb, prosperous and wealthy like Ālakamandā, the town of the gods, and ever crowded with people.

18 Then he issued orders as to the way in which the officials appointed over the various districts of the island of Sthala 19 should collect without loss the taxes levied on each district without oppressing the people in their particular territory.
 20 Further in every month on the four Uposatha days, in ponds and all other places in the island of Laṅkā for all creatures

¹ A Parakkamapura is mentioned in 72. 151. It must have been situated in Dakkhinadesa. If that is the town meant here, kāraṇesi in v. 17 can only refer to its restoration and embellishment. Moreover Pulatthinagara itself bore the name of Parakkamapura. It was according to 73. 157 attanāmaṅkita, just as under Vijayabāhu I. it was called according to the Velakkūra inscr. (EZ. II. 246), Vijayarājapura. I consider it not improbable that verses 15 to 17 also refer to Pulatthinagara and its restoration, and that the compiler who found the two names in different sources, referred them erroneously to two different towns. What he tells us of this Parakkamapura is in any case nothing more than the usual customary phrases. Pūjāv. and Rājāv. say nothing about the founding of a town Parakkamapura.

without exception, such as game, fish and the like, living on 21 dry land and in the water he commanded safety (of life), he who was himself threatened by no peril.

Now in the province of Rohaya numerous vassals after 22
the death of the Monarch Mānābharaṇa, deviated from the right way¹. Not knowing the character of King Parakkama, 23 and harassed in their hearts by fear they did not make their appearance before the Sovereign. As they thought again and again 24 of their own shortcomings their terror was in course of time redoubled. They knew in truth quite well that the great 25 courage of that lion-like King could not be surpassed by others:
all they thought of was that not a day's life would remain 26 to them once the union of the kingdom had taken place², but they thought not at all of the further course (of events).
With speeches like this: "shall we ever permit a hostile army 27 even to set eyes on our country with its rivers, mountains and ravines?" they brought all the inhabitants of the pro- 28 vince under their influence and betook themselves to the Queen-mother Sugala³. "Thy grief, o Queen, called forth by Mānā- 29 bharaṇa's death, shall not torment thy heart as it pleases.
Who then so long as we are in life, shall enter this our land 30 with its many inaccessible fastnesses?" With such like and 31 similar words they persuaded the Queen and all united, they built at each difficult spot as far as the frontier of the 32 country, numerous fortifications, which were immovable even by elephants, had trenches dug everywhere, placed there barri- 33

² P. raṭṭhe saṃjātasamcaḍḍhe. I believe that saṃcaḍḍha = Skr. saṃvṛṣṭha stands here as so often, in place of the abstract, as only in that case is the proper construction of the compound possible. The union of the kingdom consists in the incorporation of Rohaya. The vassals fear that in such an event they will not escape justice.

³ The consort of Sirivallabha (59. 45) and mother of the younger Mānābharaṇa.

34 cades of briars sharp-pointed as iron, made the roads in-35 accessible with felled and fallen trees. Thereupon all the sol-36 diers native to the province, thousands in number rebelled 37 and took up their place everyone in one of the big strong-38 holds, girded for fight, well armed with offensive and defensive 39 weapons, full of violence, with strong forces¹. The Queen Sugalā who had not a mind capable of reflection and was 37 inclined herself by nature to evil, let the fatal words of these people influence her. She made over to them the great pos-38 sessions of pearls, jewels and the like over which she had control, as well as the rich treasures belonging to the Tooth and Alms-bowl Relics as if she were throwing them into the 39 fire, gave them office, ignorant of the right and the wrong occasion, and began herself through them to start the revolt.

40 When the Lord of men Parakkama whose courage was hardly to be surpassed, heard of these events he smiled gaily 41 and joyously. He summoned his general Rakkha by name, a war-tried man, told him how matters stood exactly as he 42 had heard of them and spake to him (thus): "Arise in haste, quench thoroughly the forest fire of the hostile army which 43 has broken out with a rain shower of arrows, appoint people whom it is necessary to appoint, to keep the country in order and come again quickly." Thereupon he sent him off with strong forces.

44 Now the Sthala and Keraḷa (mercenaries) dwelling in Koṭṭhasūra² banded themselves together with the Velakkāra 45 force³ and took counsel together: "The Lord of men has sent forth many famous warriors together with high dignitaries to

¹ Verses 22—35 form one sentence. The subject is sāmantā in 22 which is again repeated by yodhā in 34. The predicate is nīśidimṇu. All the other verbs are gerunds with which are co-ordinated participles referring to the subject, or absolute locatives.

² The place lies not far from Pulatthinagara in an easterly (south- or north-easterly) direction (see note to 61. 43). According to our passage, it seems to have been a garrison for mercenaries.

take Rohaya; let us meanwhile take possession of Rājaraṭṭha." And they all of one accord began the war. King Parakkama- 46
 bāhu before whom every sovereign bowed, sent some digai- 47 taries who were heroes thither with fitting army and train. He had those slain who deserved it, granted several villages 48 to those inhabitants living under a common selfgovernment, had a number of other villages made into such as were de- 49 signed for the royal use¹ and free himself from fear² of any kind, he made an end of fear of the foe.

But after the general Rakkha had with bowed head, pro- 50
 strate, received the command of the Great King he marched, the highly-famed hero, from Pulatthinagara, betook himself 51 to the locality named Barabbala³ and halted there. When the 52 whole of the forces in Rohaya together with the inhabitants of the province⁴ received news, in accordance with the facts, of his gradual approach, they came to the decision: "as long 53 as we are in life we shall not permit him to cross the fron-

¹ It is plain from this passage that certain villages had been assigned to the mercenaries for usufruct. In addition to the execution of their ringleaders (48a b) they are now punished by the withdrawal of such villages which means a decrease in their revenues. Of the villages taken away some are allotted to peasant holders as communal property (gaya), others are declared royal property. I do not believe therefore, that W. is right in translating gaya by "assemblies of monks". Gaya here is rather the technical, administrative term (skr. the same, cf. BR. s. v. gaya 3). For mediaeval village constitution in Ceylon on which this passage throws a side-light, see H. W. COCHRAN, H C. p. 46 ff.

³ H. W. COCHRAN discusses the campaigns described in 74. 50 ff. in his "Notes on Ceylon Topography in the twelfth century" II. Unfortunately the place names mentioned in verses 50—78 cannot be determined. Later details show however, that this part of the campaign took place in the districts on the right bank of the Mahaveliganga, mainly in Bintenne and the adjoining regions. Barabbala, Kaṇṭakavana, Ambalala, Sava, Divācandantabūṭava, Kiṇṣukavatthu, Vaṭarakkhatthali, Dāṭṭhāvaḍḍhana and Sahodara are unknown.

54 tier of our kingdom and enter here", and with great fury, recking nothing of their life, they marched to the same place 55 intent on the opening of hostilities. Thereupon the general
 Rakkha gave this army fearful battle, slew many soldiers, 56 broke through the trees which they had felled and flung across the road, and with large forces reached the place called 57 Kaṇṭhakavana¹. He fought with the hostile army that had taken up its position there by the building of a stronghold, 58 broke through the fortifications, forced an entrance and after robbing many thousand warriors of their life, he marched 59 farther and came to the place called Ambalala. He offered battle to the army stationed there, broke through the strong-60 hold there and made the whole battlefield full of flesh and blood. Then he marched from there farther, broke through 61 the strong fortification of Sava and slew many soldiers. Beyond this lay the forest Divācandantabāṭava hemmed in on 62 both sides of the accessible road by high mountains, and where just at its heart the road was endangered and all traffic made impossible by many huge trees which they had felled and 63 thrown down. In this forest from one to two gāvutas in extent the hostile army had laid down one behind the other seven very inaccessible fortifications whose stout gates were not to 64 be shaken even by rutting elephants. Against this army that had firmly determined: "we shall in no case permit him to enter as he thinks fit into any single stronghold occupied by 65 us"² he delivered for several months day and night terrible 66 battles and while he slaughtered many thousands of warriors together with their leaders, the general Rakkha with large forces took up a position on the spot³.

² I should prefer here to place the full stop after sabbathā and thus take this word in the oratio recta. For the position of iti see note to 37. 114.

³ Verses 55—66 form one sentence. Subj. Rakkhacamūnātho in 55 a, again repeated by camūnātho in 66 d; pred. is nisidittha in 66 c. The construction in v. 61—65 is as follows: ... "after he in the

When the hero, the Great King Parakkama, heard during 67
his sojourn in Pulatthinagara from the mouth of the messengers of Rakkha's constant battles, he gave orders to the 68 Adhikārin Bhūta who dwelt in his palace thus: "An indecisive struggle for so long a time with these wretched rebels is fitting neither for me nor for thee; smite in pieces according 69 to these my orders the whole of the fortifications along with their gates, slay the whole of the numerous army and send 70 me then speedily a true report of these doings." He assigned him numbers of soldiers and sent this man experienced in the 71 art of war, to the scene of the fight¹.

Hereupon Bhūta marched forth from superb Pulatthinagara 72
and joined with strong forces the commander-in-chief Rakkha.
Without in any way departing from the orders of the illustrious 73
Lord of men, they both had doublets of buffalo hide made (for their men) for protection against the arrows, made the 74 great army ready for battle, offered a sharp encounter, slew numerous warriors, many hundreds in number, broke through 75
the seven strongholds, laid down as they were one behind the other, started from there again and came to the village of Kipsukavatthuka². Here too they fought a fearful, bitter 76 fight. Then after they had set out from there and had reached Vaṭarakkhatthali, and after they had here destroyed a hostile 77 forest D. (61 d) ... (there follow the attributes 61 d to 63 a) ... with the army (65 b), which, after it ... had set up fortifications (63 b — 64 a), was firmly determined ... had fought (65 d) ..."

¹ It is plain that Rakkha's action in the difficult ground of the Divācandantabūṭava forest had come to a standstill. Bhūta is sent to his aid. Cf. further the note to v. 90.

² Here one might assume the end of the sentence, since the part.
yātā may be regarded as a finite verb. But the subject changes in the sentence. In v. 72 the sing. so is subject; but yātā must be supplemented by an ubho (after Bhūta's joining with Rakkha). Mārento which is the reading of all the MSS. (= skr. mārayantaḥ) must also be taken as plural. In the continuation of the sentence there is again a change of subject. At first as we see by cattentā, the plural (ubho) remains subject. Then in v. 78 it is the singular Rakkhacamūnātho. The preceding gerundives in verses 76—78 b are to be treated as loc. abs.

army which had approached from various directions, and there-78 upon offered battle at the village called Dāṭhāvaddhana and had further fought an action at the village called Sahodara, 79 the general Rakkha who had large forces and train with him, sent on many thousands of warriors of his own neighbourhood¹ 80 to do away with the hostile army at Lokagalla. Then he destroyed a vast hostile army that approached with the intention meanwhile of overwhelming the commander-in-chief (Rakkha), and retired².

81 The great four-membered army that had marched to Loka-galla so utterly destroyed the division there that only the 82 tidings thereof remained, took away from it all its possessions³

¹ I take ṭhapetdāna in the sense of "putting aside for a particular purpose." By the removal of a considerable part of Rakkha's troops the foe is emboldened to make fresh attacks. The operations which H. W. COCHRINGTON certainly interprets aright l. c., now become topographically intelligible. Events hitherto have taken place along a line east of the Mahaveliganga. Rakkha probably follows the main road leading from Dastota by way of Mahiyangana (Alut-nuvara) to Bibile. With COCHRINGTON we may look for Sahodaragāma somewhere in the region of Bibile. Here Rakkha is forced to halt, to secure in the first place his threatened right flank. The name Lokagalla without doubt corresponds to the modern Loggala. There is a small river of this name which rises on the saddle of Passara and flows northwards to the Mahaveliganga which it joins just where the river bends at right angles to the north. I am informed by Mudaliyar WANASUNDARA-Badulla that an old short cut led across the saddle of Passara from Buttala along the Loggala-oya to the Mahaveliganga. The rebels had reckoned with the possibility that the enemy might use this road for their advance and had occupied it. Rakkha however, advances farther east along the main road. A farther penetration southwards lays him open to the risk however, of being attacked in the flank from Loggala or cut off in the rear. Hence the expedition in this direction briefly described here.

² All MSS. have paḍayati. I will not risk altering it. Moreover it makes good sense. Rakkha cannot for the moment advance. He is content to release himself from the foe who is pressing hard on him. Too much stress need not be laid upon the māretā "cut up" in 80 d. It merely expresses the successful defence.

³ W. translates: ... "Yet could they not completely cut off their great resources." He has misunderstood acchinditvāna. What we have to do and betook itself then to the place where the commander-in-chief was sojourning. The two armies joined forces, advanced 83 to Majjhimagāma¹ and here made the firm resolve: "We shall not permit the commander-in-chief in Lokagalla to seize the 84 sacred Tooth Relic and the precious Alms-bowl Relic²." At 85 the village of Kaṇṭhakadvāravāta³ they fought a great battle with the hostile army, destroyed the troops of the enemy and then marched to Uddhanadvāra. With the hostile army which 86 after laying down fortifications, had taken up a position there they fought a severe action, blew up the fortifications along 87 with their gates, destroyed many of the enemy and took up a position in that village to equip army and train (anew). Queen Sugalā took the sacred relics, the Tooth and the Alms- 88 bowl, and betook herself to Uruvelā⁴.

with here is not the a priv. + *chind*², but the frequently used verb acchindati "to take away by force" (skr. ā + chid; cf. PTS. P. D. s. v.) The dhanajātay which has been taken away consists of course of elephants, horses, chariots, arms.

² Lokagallatthasenanāthādhipikāriṇo cannot possibly be the subject of the principal sentence as W. assumes. That must be sought rather in de sendā in 83a. There is no reason either why the generals who had fought at Loggala should be so set upon the gaining of the sacred relics. In a far greater degree was this the case with Rakkha. The idea is rather this: Parakkama's generals fear that the hostile troops which had been defeated at Lokagalla might withdraw to the main army and there insist above all on safeguarding the relics, since all was already lost in the field. This Rakkha and his followers were determined at all costs to prevent.

⁴ For Uddhanadvāra see note to 61. 16. It was situated near Monaragala, thus about 10 to 12 miles SSE. of Medagama. According to 61. 25 it was the capital of that part of Rohana called Atthasahasana which was ruled by Sirivallabha. Here his widow Sugalā lived and the sacred relics were kept in her neighbourhood. Uruvelā whither she

89 But for the purpose of disposing of the hostile army in 90 Dīghavāpi¹ the Lord of men Parakkama had sent forth with an army the Adhikārin Kittī and the Jivitapotthakin Kittī and yet other dignitaries with a thoroughly equipped army and 91 train². They engaged the foe who coming from the direction of Erābulu³, had taken up a position at the village called 92 Givulaba, in a terrible battle, broke through their fortifications there, killed many enemies, started from there again and 93 reached Uddhagāma. There they laid down fortifications, carried on war for three months and put the great army to flight.
 94 With a hostile army that had erected fortifications near the locality called Hihobu, had dug trenches and spread thorn 95 bushes, and which with massed troops had taken up a position 96 ready for combat, they then fought a terrible battle. They broke through the whole stronghold together with the gates and entered by force repulsing each attack with a hail of arrows⁴.
 97 Thereupon they advanced farther and scattered as before, a hostile army that at a spot about a gāvuta in extent beside 98 the village of Kirindagāma had as before set up fortifications and there taken up a position, and halted with vast forces at the place called Dīghavāpi⁵.

brought them for safety is identified with good reason by Κομνησος with Etimole which is situated about 5 to 6 miles south-east of Monaragala. What is curious is that Sugala when she is forced to flee, does not put a greater distance between herself respectively the relics, and the enemy.

² I do not believe that the expedition is only now set going after the occupation of Uddhanadvāra by Rakkha. It is far more likely that it was begun earlier by the two Kittis, probably sent of by Parakkama at the same time with Bhūta. The author is going back in his description.

⁴ Lit. They made the combat one where it was difficult for anyone to come near (durasadanu).

⁵ The single localities mentioned such as Uddhagāma, Hihobu,

The Ruler of men, Parakkama, the best of far-seeing men, 99 sent to his dignitaries who were at that place, the following message: "Shattered¹ in combat the foe is in flight. 100
 They have seized the splendid sacred relics of the Alms-bowl and the Tooth and are fain, through fear, to cross the sea. 101
 So have I heard. If this is so, then the island of Laṅkā will be desolate. For though here on the Sīhala island various 102 jewels and pearls and the like and costly kinds of various precious stones are found, yet of quite incomparable costliness 103 are the two sacred relics of the Lord of truth, the Tooth and the Alms-bowl. At the cost of much valuable property and 104 by the constant amassing of well-trying and armed warriors I have freed this superb island of Laṅkā from every oppression, 105 but all my pains would be fruitless². My head adorned with 106
 a costly diadem sparkling with the splendour of various precious stones, would only be consecrated³ by the longed-for contact 107 with the two sacred relics of the Great Master, the Tooth and the Alms-bowl. Therefore must ye all, with the same 108 end in view, with army and train and without in any way departing from the orders I give, conquer the hostile army 109 and speedily send me the splendid Tooth Relic and the sacred Alms-bowl." The Adhikārin Kitti by name who was in the 110 district of Dīghavāpi, received his message with bowed head, and with his division after assembling about him the many 111 leaders, he marched to the place which the commander-in-chief

Kirinda cannot be determined. At any rate this Kirinda is different from the place of the same name on the coast south of Tissamahārāma. Doubtless however, these events took place on a line running from north to south west of Batticaloa. Moreover the object of the whole undertaking is intelligible. By pressure on the right wing of the enemy the thrust against the main position in the centre at Uddhanadvāra was to be eased. The army columns then unite at Uddhanadvāra for the decisive blow (v. 111, 113).

² Lit. "These by me, the island liberator, made efforts will be perfectly (kāmaṃ "at one's own pleasure") fruitless."

³ P. parittito (lit. "purified") with reference to uttamaṅgaṃ, because this ("the head") is only a paraphrase for the person ("my head" = "I").

112 (Rakkha) was occupying. A vast army consisting of hostile
 113 divisions and inhabitants of the country¹, advanced with all 114 its leaders, plentifully supplied with arms, equipped for combat, 115 brave, a veritable host of heroes, against the village of 116 Uddhanadvāra, full of lust for battle. "Of the enemy who 117 have invaded our country we shall not let a single foe escape.
 118 On the road which would be the line of retreat of the foe
 119 we shall place barricades and make the roads to an extent 120 of two to three gāvutas impassable and round about the terri-121 tory occupied by the enemy cut off the supply of food. Then 122 when the whole hostile army is weakened we shall fight an 123 action with it in which because of our rain of arrows they 124 will have difficulty in approaching us², and destroy them."
 125 So thought the army and after it had in the way above
 126 described, put up strong barricades it took up a position, 127 keen for battle. Thereupon the Adhikārin Bhūta, the com-128 mander-in-chief Rakkha and the Adhikārin called Kittī, the 129 heroes, crushers of the hostile army, after equipping their 130 great army on the battle-field advanced thence according to 131 orders all together and destroyed in a terrible combat a great 132 number of soldiers so that nought but their name remained.
 133 They broke with large forces through the stronghold called 134 Maharivāra, marched thence farther, assembled all of them at 135 the place Voyalaggamu by name and war-experienced (as they 136 were) took up a position there. The hostile army which was 137 lying opposite in the district called Sumanagalla they destroy-138 ed in the way described above, and after they had in a terrible 139 battle which was fought at the place called Badaguna scattered 140 in desperate battle the entire army of the foe which stood here 141 and had also put to flight in combat the whole army which after 142 laying down fortifications in the district called Uruvelā, had 143 taken up their position there, they took possession of the splendid relics of the sacred Bowl and of the sacred Tooth and halted on the spot at the head of their mighty army¹.

At that time an officer of King Mānābharaṇa, the general 127
by name Sūkarabhātudeva, the foolish one, who had been placed 128 in chains by King Parakkama, had burst his fetters and had escaped to Rohaṇa. Then the Ruler of men summoned the 129
Adhikārin Mañju² and spake to him (thus): "The general Sūkarabhātu has fled to his country, thou must come up with 130 him before he has gained a hold anywhere." Therewith the Lord of men sent him off. He betook himself from Pu- 131 latthinagara to the place called Sāpatagamu³. There he fought a great battle with the hostile army. He slew many soldiers 132 and after laying down a fortification took up a position himself there at the head of his large army.

Now⁴ all the many rebels, each in his division, roused the 133 whole population of the country down to the very boys (in

¹ Herewith one object of the warlike operations has been attained. The actions described in vv. 119-126 must have taken place in a relatively limited territory SE. of the modern Monaragala. As the sequel shows, Parakkama's generals had obviously not yet advanced as far as Gutta-sūlā (Buttala) (cf. v. 154, 156).

² It is remarkable that the MSS. have the form Mandin. Likewise 75. 152, 185. It is however beyond doubt that the same general is meant as the one mentioned in 74. 144, 75. 150 as Mañju.

³ Conusseron identifies this with the modern Hapatgamuva. It lies about 8 miles NW. of Badulla in the Vyaluva Korale, on the right bank of the Mahaveliganga at the spot where it flows from west to east. This throws light on the whole episode. Since Sūkarabhātu has crossed the Mahaveliganga, it may be said that he has escaped to Rohana. His object was plainly to organise the rebellion in Malaya, in the rear and flank of Rakkha's troops. For that reason Parakkamabāhu is forced to send a new division against him. Mañju suppresses the movement in Malaya, Sūkarabhātu himself however, escapes, joins the rebels in position opposite Rakkha, and takes over the leadership here in the sequel (see v. 153). Mañju remains posted for the moment in order to safeguard the flank of the main army.

⁴ I believe that v. 132 closes the Sūkarabhātu episode for the moment. The sequel takes place as v. 136 shows, in front of Rakkha's army. A more exact localisation is impossible, since the individual places cannot be identified. The situation only becomes clear again in v. 154.

134 open revolt). With the firm resolve, even at the sacrifice of 135 their life, not to give up the two relics of the Tooth and of 136 the Alms-bowl, they assembled with hostile intent, mastered 137 by insolence, at the village called Bhattasūpa. Thereupon the 138 commander-in-chief Rakkha, as also the Adhikārin Kitti and 139 the Adhikārin Bhūta and many other officers gave terrible 140 battle to the hostile army, and skilled in war as they were,
 141 let not two escape by the same way. They took, in loyal 142 devotion to the King, the Tooth Relic and the Bowl Relic 143 with them, instituted a great sacrificial festival and withdrew 144 unthreatened from any quarter. Now the whole hostile army, well equipped, having taken up arms with fury, gathered together from every side¹ at the place called Demaṭavala and fought a mighty, terrible and horror-rousing battle². By the (corpses of the) men slain in the terrible fight and (the mass of) the cast-off weapons the commander (Rakkha) and the other dignitaries, left (the foe) on every side not even room to place their feet, and after taking³ with them the splendid relics of the sacred Bowl and of the sacred Tooth, they reached the village named Sappanārukokilla.

143 Carried off by an attack of dysentery, the commander
 Rakkha now went thither in accordance with his doing — all 144 living forms are indeed transitory. The two adhikārins Mañju and Kittī by name⁴ without omitting any honour due to his

² Verse 140 a is hopelessly corrupt. According to the somewhat high-handed emendation of S. and B., W. translates "(the whole army of the enemy) that was at Vāpi".

³ Note that the line gahetvā pavare dāhāpattadhātubhadantake is exactly the same as v. 126 a b. Nevertheless gahetvā in the two places must be taken in a different sense. As in this passage a śloka of 6 pādas appears in the same way as these appear elsewhere, the line may be a later addition. The intention was to stress that Rakkha took the relics along with him on all his expeditions. Cf. v. 138.

⁴ One expects that along with Kittī Bhūta would be mentioned rank, carried out the ceremonies of the dead¹. Now that the 145 wise commander was dead and the Ruler of men tarried afar off, they brought together with exceeding energy the whole 146

 army of the Sovereign who was endowed with terrible courage, and while these heroes allowed no possibility of any sort for 147 any kind of panic and celebrated a great festival for the two sacred relics, they sent their report to the illustrious Ruler 148 of men and tarried yet a few days on the spot. When the 149 Sovereign Parakkama heard of these events he had erected² on the spot where the commander had been burnt, a vast 150 alms-hall with four entrances, and in order to honour (the dead) by sacrifice he sent the (following) order: "Collect for 151
 those bhikkhus coming from the four regions of the heavens and for the other bhikkhus a plentiful gift of alms." (Thus) he (commanded), the best among the grateful, the first among those who have attained knowledge. The two experienced 152 commanders joyfully carried out the order in fitting manner and remained on the spot.

The rebels thought, since the commander-in-chief was dead 153
 and they (themselves) had gained a leader in Sūkarabhātu, they would meanwhile try for victory, and all gathered to- 154 gether in the district of Guttasālā³. When the vast, foe- 155 crushing army of King Parakkama heard that, it advanced 156 with its leaders, fighting at various places a severe action, from all sides against the district of Guttasālā. Thereupon all 157 here. Cf. the association in v. 119, 136. Mañja is still in position (v. 166 ff.) in the N. W., in Malaya. He had thus merely to be summoned to the funeral rites.

¹ P. petakiccāni. According to the Brahmanical view as it is here and often expressed in ceremonial, the deceased before he is admitted to the world of the manes, becomes a preta a "roaming soul". The ekoddiṣṭasāśrūddha is offered to the preta. HILLEBRANDT, Ritualliteratur p. 90.

² I am now of opinion that direct speech begins first at 150 c. The gerund karevā is, as seems clear from 149 c d, to be subordinated to the finite verb pesesi.

³ Now the modern Buttala. See note to 51. 109. The scene of the contests and the further course of the operations is now again perfectly clear.

the rebels gave up this village and withdrew through fear to 158 the village (and) district of Mahāgāma¹. When the Sovereign Parakkama heard of these events he of matchless bravery sent 159 a messenger with the order: "That ye fight as chance wills it, while dragging the relics about from village to village 160, pleaseth me not. Send ye both relics at once to me." When 161 the commanders of the army received this message they with the intention of sending the sacred relics, the Tooth and the 162 Bowl to Pulatthinagara, entrusted an officer with their care, started from the village called Hintālanagāma, and after they 163 had as before fought a terrible battle with the approaching hostile army at Khīragāma² and had put it to flight on all 164 sides, they entered Khīragāma, fought here also a severe action and cut down many. Then they marched farther from that place, fighting at Tanagaluka, and Sukhagiriḡāma, at Kaṭa-165 dorāvāda³ and Ambagalla⁴, as well as at Taṇḍalapatta likewise a furious action, and after bringing hither with great pomp both relics, the Tooth and the Bowl, they sent them 166 to the Adhikārin Mañju. This (officer) had at the village called Sākhūpatta⁵ and at Lokagalla cut down many soldiers and brought all the dwellers in (the district of) Dhanumaṇḍala⁶

² Khīragāma is the place where according to 79. 71 (cf. note to the passage) a cetiya was erected to Queen Ratanāvalī who was cremated there. CODRINGTON as he informs me by letter (20th Dec. 1927), has discovered this stūpa in Badalkumbura near Alupota in the Kandukaru Korale, about halfway between Buttala and Medagama. It is situated not far from the old high road. It is not impossible that we have to do in v. 162 ff. with movements of retreat in a northerly direction from Buttala, since Bhūta and Kittī were trying to get into touch with Mañju. For Hintālanagāma see also note to 75. 7.

⁴ W. separates the compound Kaṭadorāvādambagallake into Kaṭadorā-rā Dambagallake which I consider impossible.

⁶ The mention of Lokagalla now Loggala (see note to 74. 70) shows into his power. He was stationed there, went forth to meet 167

 the relics of the Tooth and the Bowl, celebrated for them sacrificial festivals day and night, entrusted the Kammanātha 168 Añjana with the care of the relics and sent the two relics to the Great King. Thereupon he set forth, marched to the vil- 169
 lage called Bokusala and held counsel, being versed in counsel, with all the dignitaries: "Our foes know their own country. 170
 When we come near them they disperse on every side, penetrate then (again) into the territory that we have brought 171 into our power, in order to conquer it, and vex the people.
 But would our master, the world conqueror, prize as much as 172
 a blade of grass, a kingdom even if it were utterly subdued, but by disregard of his commands, he who knows the course of war? Therefore will we honour the command of 173 our illustrious monarch and in order that the foe may not be able to return to the territory¹ already subdued by us, post 174 there at different places a strong force with officers, and when thus our enemies have their roots cut off by us, we will set 175 forth to lay our heads at the foot lotus of our master." Thus he resolved who was wise among those who understand decisions. Hereupon all the dignitaries who agreed with his 176 words, set forth with the vast army, ready for battle, and 177 marched to the village of Vālivāsāragāma in a district where many roads meet. After they had arrived there and deprived many foes of their life, they set forth thence and built a 178 fortification at the place called Balapāsāpa. Having posted there the Laṅkāpura² Kitti and another large army consisting 179 that Mañju was still in position near the place where he had come into contact with Sūkarabhātu (74. 131 and note). From 70. 17 it is clear that Dhanumaṇḍala was a district in Malaya, approximately corresponding to the present Viyalava division.

 by pavisanti. Cf. Cōlav. ed. I, Intro. p. XVI.

² W. translates "Kitti and Laṅkāpura". He takes the last-named apparently for the general of this name (76. 83) often mentioned in the sequel to whom apparently 70. 218 also refers. According to the last passage this Laṅkāpura was the son of the Laṅkādhinātha Kittī.

of the four members, all the dignitaries and leaders set forth 180 at the head of the main army with large forces to subdue from one strip of country to the other the numerous rebels in the district called Dīghavāpi¹.

181 Meanwhile the Ruler of the kingdom, King Parakkamabāhu, tarried in beauteous Pulatthinagara where there was no war 182 trouble. Endowed with the gifts of faith and insight and with the effects of many meritorious works, he the first among 183 those versed in art, spent the day in pleasant pastimes. But now when he learned that the relics were gradually drawing nearer, he spake, his heart full of the greatest satisfaction 184 and joy: "In truth a great gain for me! Blessed is my life, the finest fruit of my labours for the peace of the realm is 185 mine now that I may behold and reverence these two relics of the Monarch of sages." With these and the like exclama-186 tions he the virtuous one, went forth well bathed, beautifully clad, well anointed and beautifully adorned at the head of 187 the festively arrayed princes and dignitaries, like to the moon in autumn when it is surrounded by the stars, the distance 188 of a yojana to meet (the relics). At the first glimpse he who was honoured by the pious, honoured them with all kinds of ornaments, with the most varied kinds of precious stones and 189 pearls, with costly jewels, with all kinds of incense, with lamps 190 and sweet-smelling flowers and with many perfumes giving expression to his reverence, as if the Enlightened One were 191 still in life. Unceasingly shedding tears of joy and with tiny hairs bristling as if the inward rapture had burst forth, 192 beautifying his whole body, and with floods of the highest joy making drunk his soul, as if he possessed limbs which 193 were overwhelmed by showers of the finest nectar, the stead-

fast one, the superb one bore the splendid Tooth Relic on his head, like to the Moon-bearer¹ who bears the crescent moon upon his head. He showed all his companions the two relics 194 while well versed in the sacred writings, he proclaimed their glory, and after he the all-wise had had a great sacrificial 195 festival celebrated by them (his companions) the Ruler of men had the relics laid down on the spot². He who kept a watch 196 over all his senses, set up a strong guard; he commanded that gifts of every kind should be offered, and then his heart filled 197 with the joy of faith, he returned with his dignitaries and his train to his abode like god Brahmā to the Brahma palace.

Thereupon the King had erected in the middle of the 198 town for the Tooth Relic a splendid temple of fine proportions, like to the hall of assembly, Sudhammā³. From the King's 199 Gate onward⁴ he had the road for the distance of a yojana made perfectly level like the palm of the hand. Then he who 200 had his joy in the welfare of all beings, had erected everywhere triumphal arches with coloured pictures on them that delighted the heart of the people, and beneath these outspread 201

² P. tatth'era, i. e. just at the spot where he had raised the Tooth Relic to his head and showed it to his train. According to vv. 187, 199 it was about a yojana (that is about nine miles) from the southern door of the town. Here the relics are kept provisionally until their festive entry into the town.

canopies¹ tied with garlands of all kinds of flowers in gaily-hued succession. The pillars of the triumphal arches he decked singly with different stuffs and the upper part he provided with rows of umbrellas and whisks², with bunches of all kinds of flowers, with fluttering cloths³ and banners and other costly things fit as votive offerings. The two sides of the street he embellished with fruit-bearing trees, such as sannīras⁴, banana, areka and coco palms and furnished them with vases filled with charming nosegays, with all kinds of banners and pennons, with lamps and incenses and the like, and adorned the road, capable of distinguishing the true from the false way, like the street Sudassana of the lord of the thirty gods⁵. Then after he who understood how to win good people for himself, had speedily furnished the gate court of the temple of the Tooth Relic like to (the town) Alakā⁶, the Monarch had a priceless jewel hollowed out and filled with sweet-smelling powder. Here the Increaser of the realm placed the superb Tooth Relic, then laid the jewel in a casket of precious stones and this again he placed in a costly box of gold. But the Bowl Relic he placed in a costly golden maṇḍapa that sparkled with the rays of various precious stones, that was wonderful and shimmering like the rainbow, that rested on four wheels, that was indeed lovely and like to a bundle of rays of the rising sun, on a beautifully arranged seat covered with costly carpets in a sweet-smelling layer of flowers. Then he capable of maintaining what has been won, made people of the clan of

² The whisk, cāmara, made of the tail of the yak, has grannious, belongs like the umbrella to the insignia of royalty.

³ P. vitānchī. The word cannot mean "canopy" again here. The instrumentals in v. 202 d and 203 are governed by sajjeteṭṭā.

⁴ Name of the King's cocopalms.

the Lambakappas with umbrellas, whisks and swords in their hands and other people of noble families place themselves 214 round the maṇḍapa for its protection. Round about the 215 maṇḍapa he placed splendidly attired dancing girls in many hundreds of (other) costly maṇḍapas, each of these being ac- 216 companied by people bearing lutes, flutes, drums and the like in their hands and by bands of female musicians who were 217 like to the heavenly musicians¹, to do honour with their dance, their song and their music (to the relics). With all kinds of 218 flowers, with incense and various perfumes he filled the town with fragrance² and delighted the crowd of people. With the 219 light of many thousands of lamps he transformed the heavenly regions and the intermediate regions into pure glory. With 220 rows of umbrellas and whisks, with rows of coloured banners and all kinds of pennons he veiled the whole firmament. With 221 the trumpeting of elephants and the neighing of horses, with the clatter of chariot wheels and the rattle of kettledrums; with the enrapturing tone of all the festive shell trumpets, 222 with the roll of the great drums and the cries of victory of the bards; with the shouts of acclamation and loud clapping 223 of hands and the jubilant cries (of the people) he filled the regions of the heavens with noise³. The Monarch himself 224 arrayed with all his ornaments, mounted his favourite, beautiful elephant⁴ which was hung with coverings of gold, and sur-

² P. vāsagīṭā from the denom. vāsaṃ. Likewise in Mhvs. 5. 139 "His seat after being perfumed, used to be hung up". My translation of that passage was wrong.

⁴ P. pavarapaṇa nāgaṇa . . . subhaṇa.

225 rounded by many dignitaries, who rode their steeds¹, he 226 went forth with great pomp² from the splendid town, betook himself to the sacred Tooth Relic and to the glorious Bowl Relic, revered them in worthy fashion with hands folded 227 on the brow, and while offering to them with his own hands sweet-smelling flowers he went on his way with both relics³.
 228 Now at an unusual time a great cloud gathered spreading herself forth⁴. With her hollow rumbling she increased the roll of the drums and with the bright bouquet of the rainbow 229 she adorned the space of the heavens. She made lustrous lightning quiver on all sides, an instructress for the dance 230 begun by the peacocks. Together with the dust raised by 231 the hoof-beat of the horses she made the wreath of the sun's rays disappear and veiled the whole firmament in thick darkness.
 232 When the dignitaries saw all this they thought again and again: she will pour forth violent rain to disturb the high 233 festival, and their hearts filled with sore trouble, they betook themselves to the all-wise Ruler and considered what was to 234 be done. But the Great King who knew the excess of his own power and the unimaginable majesty of the great Sage, 235 spake (thus): "Be ye not troubled; here a marvellous high festival is being celebrated that captivates the hearts of men 236 and gods, and I have set forth with unapproachable courage, rich in merit, rich in wisdom, rich in glory, rich in fame.
 237 What god, what Māra and Brahmā would be able to hinder 238 the magnificent festival taken in hand by me? Harbour therefore no fear when ye convey the two relics, but set forth on your way." With these words the discerning (prince) set forth. Then the great cloud while filling all the ponds and rivers 239 outside the range of the festival with floods of rain, as she 240 approached the great procession, moved along before it and rained just enough to lay the dust of the ground¹. When all 241 the inhabitants of the town who had gathered together and the virtuous sons of the Sage, many hundreds in number, saw this miracle they cried: "In truth of great majesty is this 242 Ruler of men, the foe-subdner; in consequence of his high merit he has appeared in Laṅkā. Here is merit, here is wisdom, 243 here is pious devotion² to the Tathāgata, here is fame and glory and exceeding great sublimity." Proclaiming these and 244 other words of highest wonderment they filled all regions of the heavens with loud songs of praise. While thus the Monarch 245 accomplished such a series of wondrous things as had never been seen or heard of before, he celebrated the high festival 246 in a manner befitting his majesty, and after the wise (prince) had had the two relics brought into the temple of the Tooth Relic, the hero who was a single light for the whole world, 247 celebrated for seven nights long a festival of lamps.

¹ P. vāhanārāḥa. The word vāhana means it is true, not merely riding animals but vehicles of every kind, also chariots.

² P. ānubhācena mahacca seems to be a transposition of mahacca ānubhācena. D. I. 49³³, M. II. 118¹⁴ we have mahacca rājānubhācena. Buddhaghosa says (Sumv. I. 148¹⁴) mahacca rājānubhācena, mahatā ca rājānubhācena; mahaccā ti pi pāli, mahatiyā ti attho; līngacariyāyo esa.

³ Verses 198 to 227 form one sentence. The principal verb is paṭi-pajji. The preceding verbs are gerunds or present participles.

Thus did the King Parakkamabāhu before whom monarchs 248 did obeisance, institute in pious fashion for the glorious relics a great festival that like none other called forth joy, rejoicing, wonder and admiration from all people who beheld it.

Here ends the seventy-fourth chapter, called "Account of the Festival of the Tooth Relic", in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

² Notice here the expression bhaddi = skr. bhakti i. e. love, surrender in faith. The bhaktimārga as path to salvation comes in Hinduism as third after karmamārga, practice of the ritual, and after jñānamārga philosophic knowledge. The use of bhaddi in this passage shows plainly the influence of Hindu ideas on Buddhism. What Viṣṇu is to Hinduism that Buddha is here — the object of bhakti (see H. Jacot, Die Entwicklung der Gottesidee bei den Indern, p. 28). The word bhaddi occurs again in the same sense in 85. 33 and 121 and in 93. 9, 10 in Sieubhaddi which is contrasted with the Buddhist faith.

CHAPTER LXXV

THE CONQUEST OF ROHAṆA

1 Now all the dignitaries and leaders set forth with great 2 forces to occupy the district of Dīghavāpimaṇḍala¹. After fighting a great battle at the place Savanaviyala and utterly 3 destroying the stronghold there with its twelve gates, and after fighting further at the place Gomayagāma, at Chaggāma 4 and at the stronghold Balapāsāṇa² a severe action and shattering the hostile army, they halted at the stronghold named 5 Balapāsāṇa with army and train. Thereupon the dignitaries and leaders set out thence, fought a sharp combat in the 6 district of Mūlavatthuka, and while fighting at various places
 — at Vadhaḡāṇakapāsāṇa, at the village called Mulutta, at 7 Senaguttagāma, at Bolagāma, at the place Vānaragāma and at Gallambatthikagāma great battles in terrible succession, they marched from all sides against the village of Hintālanagāma³.

³ It is, I believe, impossible to determine the places named in vv. 5, 6. But evidently the troops march in broad alignment through the district of Dīghavāpi in a concentric direction — hence samantato — to Hintālanagāma. This must be looked for according to 74. 162 near Khīragāma, thus somewhat north of Buttala. In this region the troops of Kittī and Bhūta were probably standing. Thus there is evidently a plan for uniting the whole army and striking a decisive blow in the neighbourhood of Guttasālā and Mahāgāma.

With the hostile army that stood here after it had erected 8 on a space of three gāvutas¹, a strong fortification with many entrenchments, they fought a great battle, slew numbers of 9 soldiers and took up a position on the spot, spreading fear amongst the foe. But now the rebels all set off for Dīgha- 10 vāpimaṇḍala with the intention of (re-)taking the (already) captured province². When the dignitaries in Hintālavanagāma 11 received exact tidings of this undertaking they sent off many soldiers. These covered in two nights a tract of ground of 12 twenty gāvutas³, fought a great battle, cut down the foe and 13 so terrified them that they gave up trying to renew the contest. Then they returned victorious to their place⁴. Hereupon 14 all the dignitaries near this village having fought with the foe — who after throwing up an entrenchment at the place 15 named Ādipāḍapunnāgakhapḍa were standing in the district of Guttasālā — a great battle and after likewise fighting at Corambagāma, further at the village of Mūlānagāma and at 16 Kuddālamapaṇḍala a severe action, set forth from the place called 17 Hintālagāma. They fought an action at Kittirājavālukagāma, further a terrible battle at the place called Uladā, at the 18 village named Vāluḥa and after fighting an action at Huyala- gāma, they halted, slaying many enemies⁵.

² Thus the revolt breaks out again in the rear and the flank of the army. The pacification of the Dīghavāpi district had not been successful.

⁴ I. e. to the headquarters at Hintālagāma.

⁵ One must not be misled by the accounts of the success of single actions. It is clearly the case here of guerilla warfare. In open fight the rebels offer little resistance. But when the revolt seems to have been suppressed at one place, it at once breaks out anew in another. The accounts of "great battles" (maḥāyuddha) and the "bitter or severe actions" (tumula raṇa) in which the hostile army is shattered and countless soldiers slain, are too much of a formula to lay claim in all their details to historical credence. Every encounter whether important or unimportant, is described very nearly in the same way. The capture of the relics was certainly an important moral success. But the main object of the whole enterprise, as it is alleged in 74. 40 ff. was not

- 19 Now to make the town Mahānāgahula which had been inhabited by former kings, a royal capital¹ by the Great King 20 were sent forth the Damiḍḍhikārin Rakkha and Rakkha the Chief of the chamberlains, and they having equipped a great 21 army, set forth full of lust for battle. The Chief of the chamberlains Rakkha hereupon sent off the Kesadhātu by name 22 Devarāja, who dwelt in Pañcayojana, with a great army, and after destroying numbers of foes there, he being experienced 23 in the art of war, smote the enemy who after throwing up many entrenchments at the village of Gimhatittha, in order to make it the royal capital, had taken up their stand there, so utterly that nought but the tidings of them remained.
 24 Then to allow the exhausted army to recover from the combats, the hero tarried a few days on the spot².
 25 Thereupon the enemy gathered together and driven by their heavy grief, they took grave counsel (together) as follows:
 26 "The power of the Ruler of men Parakkama, which is like achieved. Cf. below v. 149 ff. Parakkama's troops were unable to pass the Buttala line. The King realises that and develops an entirely new plan of campaign, an attack from the north-west, with Dakkhinadesa as base.

to the fire at the destruction of the world, is hard to subdue even by the kings in the whole of Jambudīpa. Even the Lord 27 of men Gajabāhu and the Ruler Mānābharaṇa, these two lion-like kings, skilled in war, who prepared a great army and 28 spent much money, though they fought day and night in divers ways, when they heard the sound of his drum of triumph 29 were scattered afar. They became as glowworms at the rising of the sun, and since tortured by fear, they were not even 30 able to stay in their own country, they seeing no other way of escape, sought refuge with (the god of the dead) King Yama. Save the wilderness, there is for us no other protection. In 31 every way our land is furnished with mountain wildernesses and the like. Therefore let us at all inaccessible places throw 32 up many entrenchments, make all the well-known highways impassable, lay down many robbers' paths, and when then our 33 land has been made impassable let us gather ourselves together and open battle." Herewith the rebels being all of one 34 accord, marched to the mouth of the Gālu river¹ full of the lust of battle. When the Chief of the chamberlains 35 heard thereof, he marched thither, fought a great battle with them and put them to flight. The army which had been 36 shattered in the battle joined from all sides with the foe who had his position at Mahāvālukagāma². The Chief of the 37 chamberlains Rakkha gave his army time to breathe; then he marched farther in order to fight the foe at Mahāvālukagāma. He shattered all the enemy and made the battlefield (bloody) 38 as the world of the Nāgas³ when afflicted by the Garuḍas³.

² Now Veligama halfway between Galle and Dondra. It appears that the main body of the hostile army had its position at this place. When its vanguard had been beaten by Rakkha near the mouth of the Gālu river the whole army concentrated at Veligama.

³ P. garuḍa is the skr. garuḍa. This in the singular is in the first place the name of a mythical griffin-like bird which is regarded as Viṣṇu's

39 He drove them thence as a panther many gazelles and the 40 victory gained, halted there himself with large forces. Then the Chief of the chamberlains who was himself versed in the consideration of advantage and disadvantage, while he sojourned 41 in Vālukagāma, reflected thus: "These foes perish of a truth in great numbers, like moths who know not the danger of 42 the fire and are burnt therein. But when they have perished the land will become like to a wilderness. And they know 43 not the great-heartedness of our King. From now onwards we must grant the foes who surrender, freedom from punish-44 ment and give them protection". Hereupon he sent to some of the inhabitants of the province the message: "All those who 45 would preserve their lives, let them come to me." Now when the merchants who dwelt in the port of Vālukagāma¹ to whom 46 their life and their money were dear, heard that, they came in great numbers and (with them) other of the inhabitants from all sides to the Chief of the chamberlains Rakkha and 47 presented themselves to him, tortured with fear. Hereupon he sent his soldiers forth and made them several times fight an action with the foe at different places such as Devanagara 48 and at Kammāragāma, at Mahāpanālagāma and at the village of Mānakapiṭṭhi, at the ford called Nilavāla and at the village 49 named Kadalipatta². He remained victor at all these places 50 and received graciously all who came to him. Now all the steed. At the Pūli stage the word in the plural serves as designation of a whole group of such birds. They are the deadly enemies of the serpent spirits called Nāgas. See note to 41. 80.

¹ It is interesting to learn that Veligama was at that time (12th c.) a not unimportant trading-centre, thanks probably to the spacious and sheltered bay on which it lies.

² The progress of the Kañcukināyaka along the coast is easy to follow. Devanagara is the modern Devundara (Dondra) at the southern point of the island. Kammāragāma the village Kamburugamuva halfway between Veligama and Matara which last we recognise in Nilavālatittha, since it lies near the mouth of the Nilvālaganga. The name Matara means "great ford". The remaining names can no longer be identified. What is striking is the sequence of the narrative, since Devanagara could only be occupied after the capture of Kammāragāma and Nilavālatittha.

rebels made the resolve: "We shall not permit the all too 51 mighty army of the foe after crossing the river at the place Mahākhetta, to fight (with us)". They set forth and themselves full of fury, reached the bank of the river. When the 52
Chief of the chamberlains heard of this event he sent forth his army to march thither to fight with the foe. Thereupon 53 the best soldiers of the two parties fought a severe action in the middle of the river. Now raged between the two armies 54 a terrible battle like to that of the gods with the Dānavas¹ who rose from the ocean. While now the great warriors 55 stood in battle with the hostile army, they reflected thus:
"An indecisive battle with these people is the same as a defeat. 56
If not to speak of our Lord, the Chief of the chamberlains hears such tidings, that means a great humiliation. Let us 57 therefore break in pieces the foe like small sugar canes, fling 58 them into the water of the river and make them food for the fish and the turtle, otherwise it is we who shall still their hunger." They fought an exceeding terrible battle like the 59 monkeys who leapt over the ocean² in the combat between Rāma and Rāvaṇa. They caused the swift river to flow with 60 flesh and blood and set forth with strong forces to take Dīghālī³.
The warriors marched thither and rooted out the host of their 61 foes as elephants a banana grove into which they have broken.

¹ The Dānavas are demon-like creatures, asuras, enemies of the Devs. This passage refers to the fight described in the Mahābhārata 1. 5. 19, in which the gods after getting hold of the amṛta conquer the demons who then withdraw below the ground and into the sea. Cf. Hopkins, Epic Mythology, p 48; H. Jacout, Mahābhārata, p. 5.

³ It is not easy to establish the locality of these battles. It is clear that Mahākhetta (v.50) and Dīghālī must be situated close together. Cunningham looks for them (cf. note to 72. 63) on the Nilvalaganga north of Matara. But since Rakkha has already taken Devanagara, he must stand on the left bank of this river. We must thus assume that the rebels were trying to turn Rakkha's left flank and that he was therefore forced to give up the advance eastwards and to make a change of front northwards. The identification of Dīghālī with Dikvella is difficult to maintain, since the river is absent upon and at which the fights described must have taken place.

62 There shattered, the enemy gathered together again at the place called Suvappamalaya¹ and began the combat anew.
 63 Then the Chief of the chamberlains also sent thither numbers of soldiers. There hailed down an uninterrupted rain of arrows 64 and after ascertaining through spies a passage leading through the forest, they penetrated the path pointed out by them, 65 slew many soldiers who had sought shelter in the various entrenchments and cleansed Suvappamalaya also from the briers 66 (of the rebels). Hereupon the Chief of the chamberlains who was himself on the way to Mālāvaratthali, sent to the soldiers 67 who had marched to Suvappamalaya the (following) message:
 "I am on the march to the village of Mālāvaratthali; set ye 68 forth also on the way thither." When the people heard that, they did so, and he took them all with him and betook himself to Mālāvaratthali².
 69 The war-skilled Damiḷādhikārin Rakkha by name, betook
 70 himself at the head of a strong force to Doṇivagga³. When

² It is clear from the passage that the march to Suvappamalaya was only the lateral expedition of a division detached from the main army. I do not believe therefore that Mālāvaratthali should be looked for as in the line of march after Suvappamalaya. It lay rather on that followed by the Kaṣcukināyaka in his advance. As this was directed towards Mahānāgahula, thus in the direction of the lower course of the Valaveganga (see note to 58. 39), I should look for Mālāvaratthali farther south, somewhere between Viraketiya and Tangalla.

³ We may assume that the narrative here goes back somewhat in time and that the advance of the second Rakkha in Doṇivagga took place simultaneously with that of the first Rakkha in Gimbatittha or very soon after. Parakkamabāhu's plan of campaign was evidently to advance from two sides against Mahānāgahula, the capital of Rohaṇa, from the west and the north-west. Doṇivagga is the depression at Pelmadulla-Opanake, about twelve miles east of Ratnapura. The name is preserved in that of the small river Denavaka which flows through the depression. As there is considerable rice cultivation in this region it is particularly suited for the gathering of an army.

the numerous rebels heard tidings thereof, they gave true tidings of the situation to the Laṅkāpura Rakkha who was in the town called Mahānāgahula and sent an urgent message to come hither immediately. They thought: the road leading from Doṇivagga to Navayojana is very difficult, therefore let us hinder the (direct) passage into our province from there at the difficult places¹, and with great fury they set about beginning hostilities. The war-skilled Damiḷādhikārin Rakkha wished now before the beginning of the war on the part of the enemy, to strike a decisive blow² and in his lust for fighting, sent off many soldiers and the Kesadhātu Loka and the Saṅkhanūyaka Nātha by name and other officers. These fought a great battle and won a great victory. The shattered foe flung into confusion by great terrors, gathered again at the place Guralaṭṭhakalañcha. Now the Damiḷādhikārin Rakkha again sent forth his great army to take away this place also³.

¹ The passage offers difficulties. What is now called Navadun Korale (= Navayojana; cf. note to 72. 60) is mainly the region of Pelmadulla. Formerly however, Navayojana, as Condamorox points out, seems to have been of greater extent. I am inclined to think that it embraced in mediaeval-times the whole region east and south-east of Pasdun Korale, i.e. Kukul Korale, Hinidum Pattu, Moravak Korale. It was in this territory that the combats described in 72. 60—64 took place. Kālagiribhaṇḍa also mentioned there is probably only a part of Navayojana. The purport of our passage seems to me to be this: the rebels have no fear of being threatened from the west, from Navayojana, as in that case Rakkha would first have to cross the Rakvana mountains. He will, they thought, avoid this difficult line of march, but is more likely to advance along the direct road (raṭṭhapanesana). This would be more or less the road leading now from Madampe south-eastward to Ambalantota at the mouth of the Valaveganga. It was here at the places fit for resistance that the rebels believed the defence should be organised. We shall see in the sequel that Rakkha later on nevertheless risked the march over the mountains. ² P. mukhabhaṇḍa, see note to 63. 30.

³ The name Guralaṭṭhakalañcha suggests the Atakalan Korale. With this is designated the name of the district in which Madampe lies. It is quite intelligible that Rakkha wishes to gain a footing here, in order to secure for himself access to the road leading to Mahānāgahula. The Col. Ed. reads Garulaṭṭhakalañcha as against the MSS. It is a risky thing however, to change names just in order to get a particular meaning.

79 The brave warriors arose, broke through many entrenchments, even broke through the main fortifications which were provid-80 ed with numerous gates and reached the place which the foe was occupying. They took whom they could alive, sent many 81 other foes straight into the jaws of death, put to flight the others who found no further support, and cleansed this place 82 also from the briers (of the foe). Then they returned (to Rakkha), and he showed them befitting favours.

83 Now in order to protect the enemy whom the king's majesty had turned to ashes, by the application of kindness, 84 even as a cloud (shelters) the forest set on fire by the glow of the summer sun, the prudent Damiḷādhikārin returned to 85 Dopivagga¹. He appointed to every district that he had captured, the appropriate people, took those who had submitted to his dominion² under his dominion and purged this 86 district also³. The enemy who after throwing up entrenchments, had taken up their position at Pūgadaṇḍakaśvāṇa⁴, 87 renewed the fight with strong forces. The Damiḷādhikārin, well skilled in the game of war, thereupon sent thither also 88 many soldiers with their officers. The brave warriors went forth and with the rain of arrows which they let rain⁵, with 89 the rattle of the drums and the clash of swords they were like to the flashing march of a storm cloud that appears out

¹ The fact that Rakkha returns to Dopivagga and that now like his namesake, (75. 41 ff.) he seeks to win over the rebels by kindness shows that he has not achieved his object. The breach planned along the main road to Mahānāgabhula has not succeeded, the advance has been checked at a certain place.

² I should expect vase yante rather than vase honte (cf. 77. 10 and note).

³ Probably Dopivagga. It is to be assumed that the revolt broke out also in Rakkha's rear.

of season. Through delight in their own heroism¹ chasing away the weariness of combat, they celebrated the goddess 90 of heroes with their drums of victory. When they thereupon heard that numbers of the foe had built a stronghold at the 91 place called Tambagāma and had taken their stand there, the heroes of tried valour were minded to show that nothing but heroic action pleased them, marched by night thither and invaded 92 (the place), through the sound of their war drums challenging the foe to fight. But when the rebels heard the clatter of the 93 drums they thought a thunderbolt had fallen on their heads and in the greatest panic some fled while others perished. 94 But those (victors) burned down the fortification so that nought but ashes remained and returned with strong forces to Pā- 95 gadandāvūṭa². The Damiḷādhikārin Rakkha called back his own troops and sent forth to subdue the enemy who lurked 96 here and there in their district, the four-membered army with its officers. This army cut down at Bodhiñvūṭa, at Bhinnūla- 97 vanagāma³ and at Atarandāmahūbodhikkhandha numbers of the enemy, fought also a night action and returned thence.

Now the Damiḷādhikārin marched at the head of strong 98 forces to the place called Sūkarālibheripāsāṇa⁴. Without 99

⁴ In this name are combined two neighbouring places, Sūkarāli and Bheripāsāṇa. The first is the present Urubokka, the second Berapalanatara. We owe these identifications to COXINGTON. I had them also from the principal of the Dharmasālaya in Ratnapura, UNAPOLA RATANAJOTI, with whom I discussed the passages of the Mhvs. in quesdisregarding in any way the orders of the Ruler of men (Parakkamabāhu) he restored the people who without being hostile, had hidden themselves here and there, to their district as before. And after he had placed the proper officials in the district (thus) won, he set forth at the head of a fearsome, strong army and reached the village named *Sīmātālatthalī*¹. Now the many rebels lurking in various places², summoned hither the army of the inhabitants of the country. Thus in possession of large forces, they then also summoned the Laṅkā-pura Rakkha whom they had themselves made commander-in-chief and who at the head of many hundreds of warriors filled the world with the sound of his drums and kettledrums, tion. The two places are only about two miles distant from one another in the Moravak Korale south of Pelmadulla-Madampe, on the other side of the Rakvana mountain range. I believe Rakkha's tactics were somewhat like this: The general has realised that a break through along the highway (now Madampe-Tambagomuva-Ambalantota) is impossible. He tries it now with an outflanking manoeuvre. With this object he crosses the mountain range to the south of Rakvana in order to attack the enemy from Moravak Korale (= Navayojana) that is just from the side where the rebels thought themselves safeguarded by the difficulty of the ground (see note to v. 73). The passage was without doubt the Bulutota pass which forms a natural saddle between the Galkanda and the Kurulukanda. It seems to me not improbable that it was already used in mediaeval times. After the crossing of the Bulutota pass Rakkha had however another parallel chain to traverse. It may be assumed that for this he made use of the deepest depression at Butkanda over which in the future the road will run which is to meet the Bulutota road from the south (Deniyaya). It is here that the footpath now runs which joins Rakvana with Deniyaya. Codrington's comparison of the Mahābodhikkhanda mentioned in v. 97, with Butkanda has now greater significance. It must be assumed that the expedition described in v. 96-97 had the character of a reconnaissance.

¹ RATANAJOTI told me of a village Hintalgoda in Moravak Korale but I cannot find the name either in the list of place names in the Census (vol. II.) or on the map.

² Evidently as sentries on the look-out. Verses 102 and 103 show what surprise and terror the appearance of Rakkha in Moravak Korale caused among the rebels. First the militia are called out to help and then the commander-in-chief himself who according to v. 70, was at that time in Mahānāgahula.

and so advanced to Nadiḥhaṇḍagāma¹. When the Damiḍḍhi- 105
 kārīn heard of this undertaking, the prudent one summoned his soldiers and held with them the following speech: "Here 106 shall ye now show your devotion to your Lord (the king) and I shall be witness to your heroism. Think not: this is 107 bad ground, the foe are very dauntless, but believe without doubting in the winning of the victory on the battlefield 108 through the majesty of our Lord and Master. But go first and occupy the right place for the battle." Thereupon these 109 set forth with great determination and occupied full of daring, a position near Mahāsenagāma² in order to fight. Now the 110 warriors on both sides flung themselves on to the battlefield.
 With the sparks born of their arms as they beat against each other, starring the whole firmament as it were by day, and 111 with the outpouring of their rain of arrows filling all regions of the heavens, they began the battle, letting their battle-cry sound forth. But the Damiḍḍhi-kārīn, the mighty one, won 112
 the head of the Laṅkāpura Rakkha together with his heroism.
 Then did the rebels melt away irretrievably as the tide of 113 the waters of the ocean when it has passed its shores³. The 114 battlefield there was full of crows, vultures and the like, but the Damiḍḍhi-kārīn who had won the victory by combat held 115 high festival and surrounded by the divisions of his army, he the highly-famed took possession of the town of Mahānāgāhula⁴.

Now the Chief of the chamberlains Rakkha marched forth 116
 from Mālāvaratthali⁵ and betook himself in haste to the town

¹ CONINGTON has recognised this in the present Obada (Sinh. ō, oya is always rendered by nadi). As Obada lies below Urubokka, about nine miles distant as the crow flies, on the river of that name in West Giruva, it proves that Rakkha in his advance followed the valley of the Uru-bokka-oya.

² We may assume that the place where the decisive battle took place was not far from Obada.

³ The rebels dispersed as the surf of the sea disperses on the shore.

⁴ In this section the MSS. give the name as Mahānāgākula, otherwise -hula or -sulā.

117 Mahānāgahula. He sought out the Damiḷādhikārin and the latter discerning and aware of the favorable as of the un-118 favorable occasion, took counsel with him as follows: "In accordance with the commands of our Lord we have taken the town of Mahānāgahula, yet still there are many foes left 119 alive. These robbed of all resources, have withdrawn to Khaṇḍavagga. But that our soldiers just after they have 120 gained the victory, should march in haste thither pleaseth me not. Where our Lord sets his foot there is our refuge." For 121 that reason they remained on the spot¹, and while they let the people who without being enemies had hidden themselves here and there, come to them and appointed each to his own district again, they spent the time even there in the town of 122 Mahānāgahula. But the many rebels who had betaken themselves to Khaṇḍavagga, stirred up the inhabitants of the 123 district with the wish to renew the war. They gathered themselves all together at the place called Khaṇḍavagga. The 124 Damiḷādhikārin thought that now was the right time for the contest, he advanced from the town of Mahānāgahula and began 125 a fearful battle in Bakagalla²-Uddhavāpi. The skilful (general) beat them all and then returned. Several of the enemy came 126 hereupon to Saṃghabhedakagāma; but the general Sūkara-bhātudeva took his soldiers and came thirsting for the fight to

Mahāgāma¹. Now the Damiḷādhikārin himself called his soldiers 127 together and sent them first to Saṃghabhedakagāma. The 128 brave heroes betook themselves now to the battlefield and after they had in the fire of the majesty of the illustrious Ruler of men destroyed numbers of the foe, they returned to the 129 town of Mahānāgahula and held there in fitting manner high festival. But in order also to get the general (Sūkarabhātu) 130 into his power, the Damiḷādhikārin sent off the Laṅkāpura Deva and many other soldiers to fight against him. They 131 betook themselves to the battlefield and with arrows sent unceasingly covering the whole heaven and raising their thunder- 132 ing² battle-cry they dashed forward to the battlefield, slew the general and shattered the foe. Then these brave warriors 133 too came to Mahāgāma³ with the sound of their victorious drums making joyful the Damiḷādhikārin. Thereupon an elder 134 brother of the Laṅkāpura Rakkha who had seized the leadership of the army, gathered together the many foes whom 135 death had spared and marched for a combat such a rebels fight⁴, to the town of Mahānāgahula⁵. The Damiḷādhikārin 136 now also sent soldiers thither, they shattered him after slaying many of the enemy. The shattered soldiers came to a 137 place called Kuravakagalla. The Damiḷādhikārin Rakkha marched from the town Mahānāgahula, shattered them all and re- 138 turned. Now there came together from all sides to Mahāgāma the Lokagalla Vikkama by name and many other foes in order 139 to fight with the Mūlapotthakin Māna. But in this fight 140

² P. gajjantā. The comparison which it is impossible for us to render sufficiently exactly, is borrowed from the storm. The mass of the arrows are the cloud darkening the heavens, the battle-cry is the thunder.

along with the life of the foe the Mūlapotthakin Māna by name speedily won the victory.

- 141 Now the Damiḷādhikārin took counsel with the dignitaries:
 "When we see the destruction of the foe in every single fight 142 and the panic of those fleeing hither and thither, then we think the enemy has lost the courage for renewing the war and yet one does not perceive that they are wholly rooted 143 out. Let us give up the middle of the province and when here and there hidden (rebels) have come into the middle of the province, defeat them¹." With that the prudent one, the 144 highly-famed returned to Pūgadaṇḍāvēṣa. But the rebels who had not seen through his plan, streamed together from everywhere out of the wilderness into the middle of the province.
 145 When the Damiḷādhikārin received true tidings of these events, he started thence at the head of his men, fought with the 146 numbers of foes at the village of Bodhiāvēṣa, as well as with the foe everywhere else — at the place called Sūkarālibheri-147 pāsāṇa and at the stronghold called Madhutthala — great battles 148 and robbed them of their life. Then he penetrated to the middle of the province, sent his army also thither in various 149 directions and rooted them out all and sundry. Hereupon he received a message which came to him from the leaders stand-

¹ In consideration of the sequel I should assume that cajitrāna is subordinate to the principal verb hanissāma rather than to the part. nīṇesu. Rakkha's plan is clear and proves successful. By raṭṭhamajjha is meant the agricultural country on the right bank of the Valaveganga with Mahānāgahula. That is it is true, in his power, but the rebels have withdrawn into the inaccessible wilderness surrounding it on all sides. In order now to entice them into the open country where he hopes to defeat them decisively, he ostensibly abandons the captured territory and withdraws to his original base near Doṇivagga. For it is here we must look for Pūgadaṇḍāvēṣa (cf. above v. 86, 95). This explains also why in the following combats with the rebels we are in fact taken in by Rakkha's manoeuvre, the former names Bodhiāvēṣa (v. 97) and Sūkarālibheripāsāṇa (v. 98) recur. The Madhutthala named along with them must also be situated near Sūkarāli = Urubokka. All these places are situated on the border of the raṭṭhamajjha into which he finally penetrates to annihilate the enemy.

ing in Huyalagāma and marched to Kumbugāma¹. Thereupon 150
 the general stationed in Huyalagāma by name Mañju, and the two generals called Kittī and Bhūta came surrounded by 151 numbers of heroic officers, to the same place, holding high festival of joy. The general by name Mañju², hereupon, 152 showing honour to the Damiḍadhikārin Rakkha, spake the following words: "So long as the many foes which have 153 broken away from your country and are hidden in the various inaccessible places have not got a footing, let us slay them 154
 all, while the enemy who has sought refuge in the wilderness of Aṭṭhasahassaka and the Queen Sugālā we will take captive³. 155
 But if the many foes who sojourn in the wilderness are hard for you to overcome, we shall send off soldiers." The Damiḍadhi- 156 kārin agreed with these words. He advanced in haste with his army into the region of the Vananadī⁴ and soon came near 157 to the foe who in order to reach the mountain wilderness, had speedily betaken themselves to Mālūvaratthali. When they 158 heard that Rakkha was on the march⁵, they withdrew, tor-

¹ We have seen above in v. 19 that the generals Mañju, Kittī and Bhūta after vain attempts to reach Mahāgāma by Guttasālā, halt at Huyalagāma. Now they try to get into touch with Rakkha. As Huyalagāma cannot have lain far from Buttala, we may look for Kumbugāma somewhere on the road leading along the southern base of the mountains.

² Cf. note to 74. 129.

³ Aṭṭhasahassaka (cf. note to 61. 24) is the territory east of the Valaveganga. Thus Mañju and his generals undertake the operations in eastern Rohaṇa, Rakkha those in the western part of the province.

⁴ There is scarcely a doubt that with Vananadī is meant the Valaveganga. The ger. passasa must be = parissa. A causative form is impossible since the object belonging to it is wanting. Saḥa senayā agrees only with a parisati. But perhaps we might render vananadī-passasaṃ parissa by: "he advanced along the V." That would make excellent sense. The rebels have evidently occupied Mahānāgahula after Rakkha's withdrawal. In order now to cut them off from communication with eastern Rohaṇa, Rakkha marches from Kumbugāma down the Vananadī. His plan succeeds. The rebels turn westward by way of Mālūvaratthali (see note to v. 66) to the mountains of Dvāḍasa-sahassaka, the present district of Giruva (note to 61. 22).

⁵ That is in further pursuit of them.

159 tured by fear, into the great forest and sought refuge on the Mahāpabbata. The Damiḷādhikārin surrounded the mountain, fought a great battle with them and utterly destroyed them.
 160 Then after occupying Dvādasasahassaka thus set free from the briers (of the rebels), he considered what should be done with 161 the many foes taken alive and had many hundreds of the 162 enemy impaled in villages and market-towns. Likewise round about the village of Mahānāgahula the mighty one had num-163 bers of the foe impaled, several too hanged on the gallows and burnt to ashes and after taking up his abode in the vil-164 lage of Mahānāgahula, he had under a favorable constellation
 the drums of government of the illustrious Ruler of men 165 beaten in villages and market-towns. After sending a messenger announcing these events to the Ruler of men and receiving 166 from the Great King a mark of honour, he took up his abode, the discerning, the highly-famed (general), in that same Dvādasasahassaka, pondering over the needful measures.

167 All the chief dignitaries¹ in Kumbugāma reflected (thus):
 168 "From the time that we set forth to war in Rohaṇa the soldiers sent forth by us have here and there in great battles 169 covered the earth with the bones of the foe, and even all the brave warriors who dwell in Jambudīpa would not be able to 170 withstand these soldiers. Why then should we henceforward think to carry on war with the foe hidden here and there 171 through fear? Queen Sugalkā is the cause of these people 172 becoming rebels and has led them into the wilderness². Therefore we must get the Queen alive into our power." With such resolve the discerning (generals) marched from Kumbugāma 173 and came to Haritakivāta. After they had there in various places posted good soldiers, known as courageous people, in 174 the necessary numbers, they advanced thence fully armed to Kaphavāṭa and when at the place called Vanagāma, they caught sight of the hostile army with whom was the Queen, 175 they fought there a great (and) fearful battle. With the sound of their drums of victory cleaving open, as it were, the earth, they seized the Queen and all her treasures of many a kind¹. 176 Having appointed for the guarding of the treasure the necessary chamberlains, they brought the war game begun there to an 177 end and after covering the earth with the hands and feet and heads of the foe and taking those alive to whom this had to 178 happen, they made the province of Rohaṇa everywhere free from the briers (of the rebels).

¹ The narrative now deals with the operations in eastern Rohaṇa which we may imagine as taking place simultaneously with the events related in vv. 156—166.

² Owing to the presence of the obj. te the part. pres. parisaṇṭi must be taken in a causative sense (see Cēlava. ed. I, Introduction p. XIV).

Now by some kind of wile, taking with them a few sol- 179 diers, the three Phālakūlas who were near the end of their life, and the two Laṅkāpuras by name Taddhigūma and Pabbata, 180 had escaped out of the hand of the foe² and were in flight tortured by fear. But the two brothers, the generals³ and 181 the Laṅkāpura known by the name of Kaḍakkudā, as well as many other officers with their soldiers, having reached Ud- 182 dhanadvāragūma⁴, shattered them in a great battle and then reached Nigrodhamāragalla⁵. Hereupon the great dignitaries 183 with their officers pursued the enemy, sent the head of the Phālakūla to the highest dignitaries⁶, captured the Laṅkāpura 184

¹ The place where the capture of Sugala took place is not yet determined. The name Valgama or Valagama to which the P. Vaṇṇagāma would correspond, occurs frequently in Ceylon. A Valagama is situated in the Bintenna Pattu. It is however very doubtful if this can be the one meant.

² The enemies from whom Phālakūla and the others had escaped were of course the troops of Parakkamabāhu.

³ For the de bhātaro daṇḍanāthā see note to 70. 279. They are mentioned here for the last time.

⁶ That is Manju together with Bhūta and Kittī who had not personally taken part in the pursuit of the Phālakūlas.

Pabbata by name, alive and destroyed the foe so utterly that nought but the tidings of them remained¹.

185 Thereupon the clever Adhikārin Mañju² made the following proposal: "From the time when we began to conquer this 186 Rohaṇa we have never — apart from³ the boundless terror-inspiring destruction of our enemies in battle through the 187 majesty of our Lord — treated the foe with sternness so as to teach the people what evil results treason to the king brings 188 about. Therefore those deserving of harshness let us treat harshly and let us be ever kind to those who deserve kindness, 189 and in this way in accord with the commands of our Lord and Master, win them over to ourselves." All agreed with 190 zeal to his proposal. They caused many foes to whom severity was due, to be brought before them, and at villages and market-191 towns they had numbers of stakes set up on which they impaled many hundreds of the enemy. Many other foes they 192 had hanged on the gallows and burnt and showed forth in every way the majesty — hard to subdue, scarcely to be surpassed, arousing astonishment — of the Ruler of men Pa-193 rakkamabāhu. Then while they showed due grace to those who were accessible to kindness and were worthy of being treated with kindness, they brought peace to the province, as clouds in the rainy season to a forest burnt by fire.

194 When the Ruler of men Parakkama heard tidings of these events he sent an exceeding gracious message of the following 195 content: "In the first place send hither all the dignitaries 196 taken alive and the Queen Sugala. The burden of the whole administration there is to be given over to the Adhikārin Bhūta. Then along with the whole of the four-membered army 197 sent forth from here, preceded by the numerous bhikkhu community dwelling there, after leaving the necessary garrison 198 in the various districts, under a constellation regarded as favorable, the whole of the dignitaries shall assemble and present themselves before me."

The dignitaries all carried out his orders without omitting 199 anything. They marched from Rohaya and reached at the 200 head of their large army, Pulatthinagara. Accompanied by the dwellers in Pulatthinagara, who played music, shouted with joy, clapped their hands in applause, waved cloths a 201 thousandfold again and again and let their cries of victory resound – they drew near to the superb royal palace and cleans- 202 ed their heads with the blossom dust of the foot-lotus of the 203 illustrious King of kings enthroned (there) in splendour.

Thus had this Ruler of men, pursuing the path of politi- 204 cal wisdom and of virtue, with exceeding terrible majesty¹, more powerful than a forest conflagration, of keen understanding, together with his heroes made Rohaya free from the briers of the foe.

Here ends the seventy-fifth chapter, called «The Conquest of Rohaya», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

¹ The word that I here translate by "majesty" is the P. tejo. As this has the original meaning of "glow", the comparison with the forest conflagration has also a linguistic connection. The compound must be separated thus: dava-dahana-aggatara-atibhīma-tejo.

Chapter LXXVI

ACCOUNT OF THE CAPTURE OF THE TOWN OF RĀJINĀ

- 1 While now the Monarch gifted with insight, day and night strove unweariedly for the furtherance of the laity and of the 2 Order, there banded together in the eighth year of the reign of the illustrious Ruler of men all the inhabitants of the pro-3 vince of Rohaṇa and stirred up by an all too foolhardy vil-lain¹, they revolted anew, to cruel destruction foredoomed.
 4 When King Parakkamabāhu heard of these events he sent 5 once more a great army with dignitaries thither; and as he fought at all the villages and market-towns named aforetime 6 ever renewed battles and made the enemy as fuel for the fire of his own majesty, he shortly freed the whole province of Rohaṇa from the briers (of the rebels).
 7 In the sixteenth year of this King of kings, in the pro-
 8 vince immediately bordering on Mahātitttha² several people dwelling in that province, who were near the end of their life³, stirred up a revolt and began the war which seemed to 9 them the better (lot)⁴. Thither also the (prince) gifted with discernment, sent a four-membered army and destroyed the foe so that they became as dust.
 10 Between the countries of Lankā and Rāmañña⁵ there had never been a dissension since they were inhabited by people

¹ I incline to take kenapi pāpakammēna as referring to a person, pāpakamma thus to be taken like the skr. pāpakarman (cf. BR. s. v. as a bahuvrīhi compound).

² See note to 48. 81.

³ The fate to which they are doomed tempts them to the foolish revolt.

who held the true faith. The rulers of the island of Laṅkā 11 and the monarchs of Rāmañña were both in like manner true disciples of the Sugata¹. Hence all former monarchs in both 12 countries in deeply-rooted trust, filled with friendly feeling² were wont to send each other many costly gifts and in this 13 way for a long time to maintain intercourse without dissension. Also with King Parakkamabāhu the Monarch of Rāmañña 14 kept up friendly relations even as former rulers who had for a long time held firmly to him. But once upon a time the 15 deluded one hearkened to the words of slanderers, of certain messengers who came back from our land, and deprived the 16 envoys of the Sovereign of Laṅkā who came into his own country, of the maintenance formerly granted. Furthermore 17 he issued the order that elephants which had (hitherto) been sold by many (traders) to foreign countries³ were no longer to be sold. Further with evil intent he made the restriction 18 that elephants which had formerly been sold there for a hundred or a thousand silver nikkhalas⁴ must (henceforth) be 19 sold for two or three thousand⁵. He also did away with the 20 age-old custom of presenting an elephant to every vessel in which gifts⁶ were conveyed. When he caught sight of a letter 21

² Duḥṣaṇṣaṇṇhaviṣṣambhā and sahitā are attributes of bhūpālā, and the instr. cittena hitā (this last for hitena) belongs to sahitā.

³ We see thus that Burma in the Middle Ages traded in elephants with foreign countries.

⁴ An unknown coin. The word is without doubt connected with the P. nikkha or nekkha = skr. nīṣka which likewise denotes a weight and a coin.

⁵ VV. 18, 19 seem to be in contradiction to v. 17. I think however that in v. 17 the emphasis is to be placed on nekattha nekehi. It is the free trade in elephants that according to v. 17 the king makes an end of, putting in its place a royal monopoly. This is immediately followed by an enormous rise in prices.

⁶ Evidently from foreign sovereigns, in the first place the king of Laṅkā with whom according to v. 13 such exchange of gifts had fre-

written on gold, addressed to himself, he under the pretext 22 that they were envoys sent to Kamboja¹, or saying something of that kind, had the envoys of the Sovereign of Laṅkā after taking from them all their goods and chattels, thrown into a 23 fortress in the Malaya country². And although he learned exactly how his own envoy Tapassin by name, had had every 24 distinction conferred on him by the Ruler of Laṅkā, he nevertheless bereft of all political wisdom, took everything away from the envoys of the Monarch of Laṅkā: their money, their 25 elephants and their vessels, had blocks of wood fastened to their feet to their greatest torture, and employed them in the 26 work of sprinkling water in the prisons. When once upon a time a prince of Jambudīpa Kassapa by name, sent costly gifts 27 along with a letter on gold, he forbade his people to land and in an insulting manner made them take the letter back to their 28 town. One day he had the Siṃhala envoys summoned to him and declared to them: "Henceforth no vessel from the Siṃhala 29 country shall be sent to my kingdom. Give us now in writing the declaration that if (messengers) from there are again sent to us, in case we should slay the envoys who have come 30 here, no blame of any kind will attach to us³. If ye give not the declaration ye shall not have permission to return 31 home." After he had made them sign this, so that in the event of a transgression they should not return again to their 32 country⁴, he took the paper from their hand. The teacher quently taken place. The King of Rāmañña does not put an end to the intercourse but alters it in a way which shows unfriendliness.

Vāḡissara and the scholar Dhammakitti¹ he sent off in a leaky vessel into the open sea. Once upon a time he took from 33 the hands of the messengers the gifts and goods which the Ruler of Laṅkā had sent in order to buy elephants, with the 34 promise that he would give them fourteen elephants and silver money², but he told merely lies and gave them nothing. Further they seized by force a princess whom the Ruler of 35 Laṅkā had sent to Kamboja land.

When King Parakkamabāhu heard of these many insults 36 committed by that (prince), he thought with the greatest indignation: "Where in the whole of Jambudīpa is there a king 37 who would be capable of treating my envoys in such a manner?" He summoned his ministers and spake: "Either the capture 38 or the slaying of the king of Arimaddana³ must be effected." Hereupon there spake a distinguished official of the public 39 accounts, the Damiḡādhikārin by name Ādicca, with clasped hands — he wished himself to undertake the enterprise — to 40 the King thus: "It is not necessary to entrust⁴ the chief dignitaries with this task. If I do not stray a single step from 41 the path of thy order it will be for me, if I undertake the task — even should I be quite alone — in very truth not diffi- 42 cult to carry out in successful fashion the commands of my lord whose commands are hardly to be transgressed." When the 43 King heard that he was content. He placed under him the troop leaders who were to be sent and commanded him to depart speedily. Then the highly-famed one gave the order 44 without delay to make ready ships of various kinds, many hundreds in number. Now all the country round about the 45

coast was one great workshop fully occupied with the building of the ships taken in hand. When within five months he had had all the ships well built, he assembled them in haste at the port of Pallavavaṅka. Then endowed with vast royal power¹, he had provisions supplied² for a whole year such as rice and the like and abundant weapons of war, such as armour and the like; further gokappaka arrows³ of iron with sharp points, many hundred thousand in number for defence against elephants, also different kinds of medicines, preserved in cow horns for the healing of venomous wounds caused by poisoned arrows, as well as all kinds of remedies for curing the poison of infected water in the many swampy stretches of country; also iron pincers for extracting arrow-heads which are difficult to move when they have pierced deeply and the shaft has broken, lastly also skilful physicians and serving women — everything in complete fashion⁴. After he versed as none other in the right measures, had made a strong force — numbering many hundreds of thousands — embark, the Ruler sent all the ships off on one day loaded with all kinds of arms and filled with capable soldiers. Now when this assemblage of ships all at the same time⁵ sailed forth in the midst of the ocean it looked like a swimming island. Subdued by adverse winds some of these ships went down, some drifted on to foreign shores. Numbers of trusty warriors who had embarked in one of the vessels landed on the Crows' island⁶. They fought a battle there, captured several of the inhabitants of the island alive, brought them then to the King of Laṅkā and presented them to him. Warriors of great fighting strength 59 who sailed on five vessels landed on the territory of Rāmañña in the port called Kusumi¹. These doughty soldiers with the 60 Nagaragiri Kittī at the head, equipped with armour and weapons, slew from their landing-place the troops belonging to the Rā- 61 mañña country, many thousands of them in terrible combat and while they, like to rutting elephants, hewed down around many 62 coco palms and other trees and set fire to the villages, they laid waste a great part of the kingdom. But the ship on which the 63 Damiḷādhikārin Ādicca commanded, landed in the territory (of Rāmañña) at the port of Pappālama, and while at once the 64 people with the Damiḷādhikārin at the head, fought a gruesome, fearful, foe-destroying battle and captured alive many 65 people living in the country, they plunged the Rāmañña kingdom into sore confusion. Thereupon the Sihalas with terrible 66 courage, fearful with their swords, burst into the town of Ukkama and slew the Monarch of the Ramapas. When they had 67 subdued the Ramapas and brought their country into their power, the great heroes² mounted a splendid white elephant. They rode round the town free from all fear turning the right 68 side towards it and thereupon made known by beat of drum the supremacy of the Sovereign of Laṅkā³.

⁴ Anāṇaṃ is associated as adverb with paṭipādesi and refers to everything that has gone before.

² Probably Ādicca and Kittī are meant.

³ The Burmese chronicles have nothing to say about such a catastrophe having overtaken their country. The description in the Mahāvāṇsa is without doubt very much exaggerated. The fact of a successful campaign against Rāmañña is, however, confirmed by the important inscription of Devanagala in the Kegalla district, Galboda Korle, Meda Pattuva, whose significance H. C. P. Bell was the first to recognise (Report on the Kegalla District, ASC. 1893, p. 73 ff.). According to this inscription — one of Parakkamabāhu I. — the war against Aramaṇa was determined on in the 12th year of the King's reign. The reigning king of Aramaṇa at that time is called Bhuvanāditta. The inscription also mentions the town of Kusumi (cf. v. 59) and tells finally of the granting of land to Kit-Nuvaragiri (= Kittinagaragiri v. 60) evidently

- 69 Then overwhelmed by fear the people in the Rāmañña land, seeing no other protection, gathered together and held 70 counsel. With the instructions: "Year by year must we from now onwards send elephants to any amount as tribute from 71 our property — in order that the Monarch of Laṅkā may not 72 lay on us intolerable (burdens), ye must influence him¹ and 73 thereby at all times full of pity, have mercy on us all" — they sent in haste their messengers with letters in their hand to the bhikkhu community² dwelling in the island of Laṅkā.
74 Through the friendly words of the community living in the three fraternities, the Ruler of Laṅkā was moved to kindness, 75 and while the Ramaṇas sent him yearly numbers of elephants, they made anew with the Laṅkā Ruler who kept his treaties faithfully, a pact of friendship.
- 76 Now the Paṇḍu king by name Parakkama, in the town of Madhurā³, when his capital was besieged by the war-loving, 77 hostile king named Kulasekhara who had come thither with an army, had found in the territory of Jambudīpa no king 78 with whom he might have taken refuge. He sent messengers to the Monarch of Laṅkā with the message: "O Thou with 79 whom I may take refuge, thy two feet shall be for me who as reward for his services. The Damiḷādhikārin Ādicca is not mentioned. He appears to have died soon after the campaign, as he does not occur again in the Cūlavamsa.

am a moth in the fire of the majesty of my foe, a cage of diamond". When the sovereign of Laṅkā heard their speech, he spake thus: "If the distress of him who has placed him- 80 self under my protection be not removed, how would my name of Parakkamabāhu¹ be fitting? He who trusts in me is hard 81 to vanquish by a foe, be he who he may. From what foe among the brutes is the hare in peril who has fled to the moon²? General Laṅkāpura, slay Kulasekhara, establish the Paṇḍu 82 king in his realm and then return." The general by name 83 Laṅkāpura, a very courageous man, versed in the means of war, a forest fire for the wide(-spreading) wilderness of the 84 foe, received with the words "Be it so!" the King's command like a wreath upon his head and accompanied by many war-skilled officers, he marched at the head of an army invincible 85 in battle and came to Mahātitttha.

King Kulasekhara had (in the meantime) slain the Paṇḍu 86 king with his wife and children and captured the town Madhurā by name. Laṅkāpura received from the Great king who had 87 heard of these events, anew the order to conquer the kingdom and make it over to a scion of the house of Parakkama³. He set forth for the port Talaḍilla⁴ by name on the opposite coast. He embarked his great army on many hundreds of 88

² The Hindu thinks he sees the picture of a hare in the disk of the full moon, just as we speak of a "man in the moon". The moon is therefore called in P. saxin = skr. śaṣin, from sasa = śaśa "hare".

³ Instead of the names Laṅkāpura and Parakkama the original has pronouns.

⁴ The MSS. have all Talaḍilla or Talaṇḍilla, in v. 92 only the first form. The Col. Ed. reads Talabbilla with the variant Talavillo, I do not know with what authority.

ships, started off and sailed a day and a night on the back 89 of the ocean. When he caught sight of the coast, since a hostile army was standing there, he made all his troops put 90 on their armour on board. As the ships had to lie in deep water¹ and because with a landing just at this spot, the 91 armour of the whole army would have been wet through, he made the troops get into hundreds of boats of small size².
 Then when the rain of arrows from the Damiḷas standing on 92 the coast, came flying, he had shields fashioned of leather set up in front of the people (as protection) against the arrows and so landed in the Paṇḍu kingdom at the port called Ta-93 lajilla. After putting to flight the Damiḷas at the port and capturing the harbour, he took up a position there and fought 94 with vast forces four battles. When the five officers, Vaḍavalattirukka-nāḍālvāra³, Kuṇḍayamutta-rāyara, Villava-rāyara⁴, 95 Añcukoṭṭa-nāḍālvāra and Narasīhadeva by name, advanced to 96 fight⁵, he fought also with these, slew many Damiḷas, took 97 away their horses, put to flight the great army and occupied
 Rāmissara⁶. He fought with them while he was posted there,

¹ P. agādhe saynivattanabhāvato. The meaning is this. The coast was so flat that the ships could not lie close to the shore. They had to turn (say-ni-ratt) at some distance in deep water (agādhe) and embark the troops in boats (see the following note).

² P. ekadoṇināḍā. Doṇi must be taken here in the sense of a particular measure of volume, otherwise eka would be unintelligible. Skr. droṇi means "boat" as also a measure of volume.

³ According to O. SCHRAEDER (private letter 22. XII 23) nāḍālvāra is derived from the popular Dravidian nāḍu "land, district" and āl "man" (Canarese āḷu "soldier"). A Nāḍālvāra would thus be the leader of the troops of a particular district.

⁴ Rāyara is a title which according to O. SCHRAEDER, corresponds to skr. rajanāḥ. Canarese rāyara.

five combats and after fighting nine battles¹ he fought² in the tenth against the six officers Silāmegha, Naratuṅgabrahma- 98 mahārāja, Ilaṅkiya-rāyara, Añcukoṭṭa-rāyara, Phaḷudhiya-rāyara 99 by name and him called Panasiyarāja³, as well as the five 100 officers named above who had advanced with great forces. He bore away the victory, seized many horses⁴, slew the Damiḷas 101 and penetrated from Rāmissara a distance of four gāvutas⁵ to Kundukāla which lies between the two seas. The many 102 Damiḷas who had fled through fear, took refuge in the forest; he captured several of them and had them impaled there. Some of these, at the command of the Ruler of Laṅkā who 103 thought to have all the cetiyas formerly destroyed by the Damiḷas rebuilt by them, he had brought to Laṅkā and the 104 work of restoration begun on the Ratanavāluka-cetiya⁶. The 105 Sovereign of Laṅkā had the thūpa which had been destroyed by the Damiḷas restored, and in order at the close to celebrate the festival of the crowning ornament⁷, he betook himself 106 with his ministers and the court to Anurādhapura and assembled

² The verb governing the accusative in vv. 59–100 is guddhaṃ katvā in v. 100 c which is treated as in 38. 86, as a transitive verb.

⁴ The organization of the Damiḷa army evidently differed materially from that of the Siḥalas in the greater number of its cavalry. In all accounts of victories gained (see already above v. 96) horses are always mentioned as the principal booty.

⁵ That is about 8 miles. Kundukāla was situated on the tongue of land jutting out from the continent to the island of Rāmeśvara.

⁶ Name of the Mahāthūpa in Anurādhapura corresponding to what is now known as the Ruvanvālī. It is used here for the first time. The allied designation Hemavāluka-cetiya occurs already in 51. 82.

⁷ P. thūpikāmāha. By thūpikā is understood the pointed cone resting on the cube-like structure which forms the apex or finial of the thūpa.

107 the great bhikkhu community on the island of Lankā. He provided the community with the four articles of use and when the fourteenth day¹ had arrived he had made known in 108 the town by beat of drum: "The town shall be decorated; and provided with perfumes, flowers and other offerings shall the people come to the place of the Mahāthūpa." After he had then on the day of the full moon performed in right 109 manner all the old customs, he himself came as the shadows grew longer, from the royal palace². In divine beauty he was adorned with costly ornaments, with crown, necklace³, bracelets 110 and the like, (all) richly set with jewels. In front of him went the ladies of the court many hundreds in number, with the 111 grace of heavenly nymphs, their bodies decorated, and there followed him⁴ numbers of distinguished officers with richly 112 decorated garments and resplendent in bright clothing. With the mass of the elephants and horses gleaming with their golden harness, doing reverence⁵ to the cetiya with a gift of 113 lamps distributed over their bodies, and with the burden of the mass of human beings he pressed as it were, the earth together. With umbrellas, whisks and banners he veiled in 114 a sense the countenance of the firmament. With the sound of the manifold instruments of music he cleft asunder the mountain ravines, with the splendour of his majesty he completely bewitched the eyes of the laity⁶ and with the beams of

² This is the final sentence, taken up from v. 116 a b. In 116 d we have the finite verb atthāsi of the whole sentence beginning with v. 107 which I have split up into its component parts, translating the participles and gerunds by principal verbs.

³ P. mālā means like skr. mālā also necklace, neck-chain.

⁴ In v. 110 and 111 purakkhato and aseito are in opposition.

the golden utensils, chests, banners, vessels, fans, jars and the like he steeped the place in radiant glory¹. Thus on he came 116 and took his place with the splendour of the King of the gods in the court of the cetiya. Many hundreds of bhikkhus who 117 had come hither, surrounded the cetiya, closing it round, as it were, with a railing of coral². The King then had the 118 golden point placed on the thūpa and showed the world there-with the beauty of the Kelāsa mountain with the sun on its summit. On this day too there reigned in the town also dur- 119 ing the night great brightness with the lamp festival of the King and because of the point placed upon the thūpa. When 120 thus the Monarch Parakkamabāhu had celebrated the great festival of the sacred thūpa, he betook himself again to Pulatthinagara.

But the general (Laṅkāpura) had a strong camp called 121 Parakkamapura built at Kundukāla, and as he wished to make it last long, he erected three high walls of stone, two thou- 122 sand, four hundred cubits long³ and twelve gate towers, and a 123 building with a hall square⁴ and three trenches in such a way that the waters flowed from ocean to ocean⁵. While he tarried 124 in this stronghold he subdued officers like Kaṇṇakudḍiyarāja⁶ by name, Coḷagaṅga and others. Since in this way the power 125 of the Sthalas waxed from day to day, King Kulasekhara sent again Sundarapaṇḍurāja⁷ and Paṇḍurāja by name and 126

² P. parāḷavedikāyo. Here vedikā has again clearly the meaning of railing. Cf. note to 73. 88. The coral colour is supplied by the reddish yellow colour of the monks' robes.

³ As ratana means the same as kattha (see 37. 172) that is roughly about 1½ ft. thus the wall was 3600 ft. in extent.

⁴ See note to 73. 23. Here there were evidently as W. supposes, barracks for the soldiers.

⁵ The fortifications were spread right across the whole of the peninsula and thus safeguarded it and the camp from the mainland. Tathā belongs of course to kāreteṇ parikkhatayaṇ and yathā (gacchanti) refers to tathā.

⁶ We have to read here and in v. 130 *So Kaṇṇakudḍiya*²; so refers each time to Laṅkāpura. Cf. note to 76. 170.

⁷ Is mentioned again 76. 174.

127 many other officers with troops to drive them thence. Laṅkā-128 pura fought with them three combats, put them to flight and and fought with these same officers as well as with the Damiḷa 129 Ālavandapperūmāla¹ a great battle, carried away the victory and captured the villages by name Koḷuvura and Maruthūpa.
 130 In the district Kaṇṇakudiya and in the district named Koḷūru 131 the general subdued the soldiers called Maravara². In the district of Viragaṅga the mighty (general) plundered many villages and market towns such as Kuṇappunallura and others, 132 and after subduing the powerful officer called Mājava-rāyara³
 and thousands of Damiḷas, he took up his abode there.
 133 Thereupon he returned and betook himself to Parakkamapura 134 to satisfy his troops by the distribution of food and pay⁴. On the march thither he gave battle to Ālavanda who had his position at the village called Vaḍali and slew him.

135 Since now the powerful king Kulasekhara — who possessed the courage of a lion, whose great army was war-tried, 136 who well understood the expedients of war — although he had sent forth his great dignitaries with big army and train had not been able to win the victory, he himself set forth 137 to fight. Mājava-cakkavattin, Mājava-rāyara by name, Pa-
 138 rittikkupḍiyāra⁵ and Toṇḍamūnāraya by name; Tuvarāḍhipati-

³ Cf. below in v. 137 Mājava-cakkavattin and Mājava-rāyara. The first name again in 76. 235, 265, 274, 284; 77. 27, the second 76. 210, 267 f. Mājava is the name of a tribe. See Epigraphia Indica VII, Appendix, nr. 10, 64, 409.

⁴ A veiled allusion to certain difficulties with which Laṅkāpura was faced during his advance. Note too that the place Vaḍali named in v. 134 is later on again occupied by him (see v. 169) and that only after severe fighting.

⁵ For Mājava see note to 76. 132. Parittikkupḍiyāra is again mentionvelāra, Virapperaya-rāyara, Seṅkuṇḍiya-rāyara and Nigaladharāyara by name, Karummaḷatta-rāyara and Nakula-rāyara, 139 Puṅkoṇḍa-nāḍālvāra and Karamba-rāyara by name, Kuṇḍiyūru 140 and Athalayūru-nāḍālvāra¹ by name, Kaṅgayara, the two Viragaṅgas, Muva-rāyara, Aḷattūru-nāḍālvāra, the three Maṇṇa- 141 ya-rāyaras, Kaḷavaṇḍiya-nāḍālvāra and Keraḷasihamuttara — these and other officers, as well as those named above he 142 took with him, further the remaining troops in the province of the Paṇḍu King Parakkama, the whole forces of his mother's 143 brothers in the two Koṅgu districts and the whole of his own forces in the kingdom of Tiripaveli². Also Niccavinodavāṇava- 144 rāyara³, Paṭṭi-rāyara, Tanḱuttara-rāyara and Tompiya-rāyara by name, Ālavandapperūmāḷa, him called Coḷakonāra as well 145

 as Tāṅgipperūmāḷa and Aḷakhiya-rāyara by name, him called 146 Mānābharaṇamahārāja, Avandiya-rāyara, Muṇayadha⁴-rāyara by name and the Damiḷa Viṭṭāra: also these officers with vast 147 army and train he took with him and marched near to Pa-ed in 76. 221. As regards the other names mentioned in 137—141, Toṇḍamānāraya occurs again in 76. 315, 77. 1 ff., Tuvarūḍhipati again in

 76. 315, 77. 67; Virapperaya again in 76. 315, 77. 6 f., Seṅkuṇḍiya 76. 221, 77. 7, 35; Nigaladha again 77. 16 ff.; Karummaḷatta again 76. 216; Puṅkoṇḍa again 76. 240, 273 ff., 77. 57, 92; Athalayūru again 76. 260. 77. 27;
 Kaṅgayara again 76. 260, 316, 77. 15; Viragaṅga again 76. 131, 179 ff.;
 Muva again 76. 216; Aḷattūru again 76. 184, 214 ff., 305; Maṇṇaya again
 77. 7, 35 (cf. note to 76. 220); Kaḷavaṇḍiya again 76. 267, 316, 77. 10 ff.; Keraḷasihamuttara again 77. 7. Nakula, Karamba and Kuṇḍiyūru do not occur again.

¹ The Col. Ed. has contrary to the MSS. “tha”anḍūru.

² Now Tinneveli, the district filling out the extreme south-east corner of the Indian peninsula. The correct form of the name is Tirunelvēli. See Imp. Gazetteer of India s. v.; W.'s note to the passage.
 The two Koṅgu districts are according to 76. 268, Tenkoṅgu and Vaḷakoṅgu.

³ Of the officers named here Niccavinodavāṇava occurs again in 77. 76.
 For Ālavandapperūmāḷa see note to 76. 128; a Coḷakonāra is mentioned again 76. 163, 181, 188, 77. 77, 86. Tāṅgipperūmāḷa 76. 190; Muṇayadha 77. 40. The other names are only mentioned here.

⁴ Again the Col. Ed. changes the name, contrary to the MSS. into Mundiya.

148 rakkamapura. "Only when I shall have cut off the heads of the Sihalas shall this time my sacrifice to the gods in holy 149 Rāmissara take place!" Letting such lion-like cry sound forth, he occupied a strong encampment at the village of Erukāṭṭa 150 and Idagaḷissara. Now in order to destroy the strong encampment of Parakkamapura, Kulasekhara sent forth a great army from the land side and another embarked in numbers of ships 151 from the ocean. When thus the mighty force coming from different sides began the fight it was as if two seas overflowed their 152 shores. Laṅkāpura made his great army put on their armour, advanced from his strong encampment and began the battle 153 with the others. But the army of the Damiḷas suffered fighting in the battle (heavy loss by) sword blows and arrow shots.
 154 It weakened, turned tail and withdrew to its own stronghold.
 In this way it fought in the offensive three and fifty actions.
 155 But when King Kulasekhara saw this disaster in every combat, 156 he himself set forth and sent out his troops to fight. Laṅkāpura had all the gates opened and placing his army like a 157 great mountain in front of him, he came forth. He slew in combat numbers of Damiḷas¹, took away their horses, gained the victory and pressed forward in pursuit as far as Kurum-158 bāḍṇanakāḷi. While he was beginning here to build a strong encampment², Kulasekhara gathered together his great army 159 which had been shattered in the fight, took also his picked troops³ whom he cherished as his life, marched hither himself 160 and opened fight awaking terror among the foe. With thousands of fish, namely the (glittering) swords, with hundreds of waves, namely the horses, with the mass of the waters, namely the infantry, with the lines of surf namely the um-161 brellas⁴, with the flowing of the streams⁵, namely the arrows,

¹ Of course we must read Damiḷe 'neke.

² Loc. abs. It must be supplemented by tena. "When by him (Laṅkāpura) was begun the building of a strong encampment."

³ P. sārabhūtaṃ mahāsenam. By sāra is meant the duramen (heart-wood) of a tree.

⁴ The white umbrellas are the badges of the officers.

⁵ P. āpāṇipātena. What is meant are the streams flowing into with the clamorous din, namely the drums, the whole battle-field was terror-striking like the ocean. When thus the great battle was fought, the Sihalas endowed with great courage, stilled the twitching in their arms¹. They slew Villava-rāyara by name and Coḷakonāra and the mighty officer, Yādhava²-rāyara, many hundreds of soldiers and officers of the king; also they wounded the horse on which King Kulasekhara was riding. Kulasekhara with his army turned to flee in order therewith to give the Sihalas, as it were, occasion for yet more furious sword strokes. When in fight he fled, he not only surrendered his courage but also his throne, his umbrella, his ornaments and all else. Laṅkāpura marched to the fortress called Erukkāvūra where his enemy King Kulasekhara had resided, burned it down and then after erecting a new stronghold, Laṅkāpura³ tarried there some time. Then he set forth and marched to Vaḍali⁴. Thence he advanced farther and hereupon took Deviyāpattana by force. Then he betook himself to Siriyavala and after completely vanquishing in bitter combat the well-armed Khuddakañcakupḍa-rāyara⁵ commanding the stronghold named Koḷuvukkoṭṭa, he put to flight in battle numbers of dignitaries of King Kulasekhara, captured also this strong place and burned down seven and twenty large villages in (the district) Dantika. Hereupon he fought with the ocean. The comparison of the combat to the raging sea is described exactly in accordance with the rules of Indian poetics.

² The first two names occur already in 76. 94, 145, but are also mentioned again later on (Villava 76. 178, 185; a Coḷakonāra 76. 178, 181 and 188, 77. 77 and 86, also a Yādhava 76. 178, 177). Cf. note to 76. 180. Yādhava is a South Indian clan name. See EI. vii. Appendix, nr. 331, 332, 334 etc.

³ All the MSS. have here laṅkāvidū which should be adopted on principle in the text. W. supposes it might be a corruption of kālavida. Not impossible.

⁴ See above note to v. 183.

⁵ The same as Cullakañcakupḍa "the small Kañcakupḍa" in 76. 185 ff. 217 ff. The name is most closely connected with that of the district Kañcakupḍiya 76. 180, this again with the proper name Kañcakupḍiyarāja, 76. 124.

173 the Damiḷa Paṇḍiyāṇḍāra¹ dwelling in Koḷuvukkoṭṭa who was of terrible courage, with both Coḷakonāras, with the officer
 174 Yādhava-rāyara and with Villava-rāyara, with the Damiḷa
 Kāliṅga-rāyara with Sundarapaṇḍu-rāyara, with Narasimhadevara 175 and with Paṇḍiya-rāyara as well as with the (officers) in the village of the brāhmaṇas, shattered them and slew many 176 Damiḷas. He took (as booty) many horses and armed with troop and train, took up a position at the place named 177 Kuṇḍayamkoṭṭa. He brought into his power the three Damiḷa officers, Kuṇḍayamutta-rāyara, Kaḍiliya-rāyara and Yādhava-178 rāyara and took up a position at that place, well understanding right places. Further the great hero brought into his 179 power Paṇḍiya-rāyara in the fortress of Vikkamacoḷappera 180 and the three, Paṇḍimaṇḍala-nāḍālvāra, Viragaṅga-rāyara and Kaṅgakoṇḍapperayara, who were in Kāmānūkkōṭṭa and advanced to Maruthukoṭṭa with the object of fighting a decisive battle².

² Verses 170-180 form one sentence. The principal verb is pāyāsi (180 c), subordinate to it are the gerunds in 170-172 and the gerunds and pres. part. in 175-6 as well as those in 178 and 180 a. The nominatives in 172 c—174 d, in 177 a—c and in 178 c—179 c are independent of the construction of the sentence and are summed up with iti (icc-etcē 175 a, iti sāmante tayo 177 c d, icc-etc tayo 179 d). Note how in the account of the contests in Southern India the names of the Damiḷa officers repeat themselves. Only once in this passage are Kaḍiliya, Paṇḍiyamaṇḍala and Paṇḍiyāṇḍāra mentioned, as well as Kaṅgakoṇḍapperayara, with which Kaṅgakoṇḍakalappa 77. 75 may be compared. Paṇḍiya-rāyara is mentioned twice in this passage but not otherwise, Yādhava here in v. 173 and 177, before in v. 163. In v. 163 a Coḷakonāra, a Villava and a Yādhava are mentioned as having fallen. Possibly these may often be place names as above in the case of Añcukoṭṭa (see v. 235) rather than names of persons, Villava-rāyara meaning for instance, the rāyara of Villava (see note to 77. 9). Kuṇḍayamutta and Narasimhadeva occur already in 76. 94-95, Viragaṅga already in 76. 131, 140 and and later repeatedly (76. 181 ff.). Sundarapaṇḍu 76. 126. It is expressly stated that there are two Coḷakonāras (76. 173). It is the same below with Tondriya (181). The same with Aḷattōru-nāḍālvāra (184, 214) and with Viragaṅga (140). In v. 141 three Maṅṅaya-rāyaras are mentioned.

There he gave the Coḷakonāra, the other Tondriya, the officer 181
Suttāṇḍāra, the Damiḷa Viragaṅgara, Kuttāṇḍāra and others a 182 severe combat. He robbed Tondriya of his life, took his horses 183 away from him, slew many Damiḷas and occupied besides the fortress known by the name of Kaṅgakoṇḍāna. Then he set 184 from there, took up a position at the place named Paṇiṇa, fought there with the two Aḷattūru-nāḍālvāras, with Pandriyarāyara, Villava-rāyara and Cullakaṇṇakupḍa-rāyara¹ a great 185 battle, shattered them and captured Paṇivakkoṭṭa. Then he 186 turned and betook himself to Kaṅgakoṇḍāna² where he had stood formerly. Hereupon he marched to Vālakkoṭṭa³ to fight 187 there, fought there against Kaṇḍadevamāḷava-rāyara, against the two Viragaṅgaras and the Damiḷa Coḷakonāra a great battle, 188 shattered them all and slew numbers of Damiḷas, seized from 189 them many horses and captured with this fortress (Vālakkoṭṭa) also (the fortress) Neṭṭūru⁴. He himself took up a position there, brought Kuttāṇḍā(ra)⁵, Viragaṅga and Tāṅgiipperūmāḷa 190 and the Damiḷas dependent in him, many hundreds in number, as well as Ilaṅkiya and Aṇcukoṭṭa-rāyara under his influence, 191 gave them earrings and other ornaments. But on Ilaṅkiya- 192 rāyara he conferred the well-known and coveted title of Rājavesibhujāṅga-Silāmegha⁶.

Meanwhile Laṅkāpura learned that the very youngest son of 193
the Paṇḍu King Parakkama, Prince Virapaṇḍu by name, at the 194 murder of his unhappy royal father — who had fallen with wife and child into the power of the enemy — by some wile or other 195

² W. translates paccāvutto wrongly by "he proceeded to . . ." Its meaning is far rather "he returned to . . ." Cf. skr. jvati-ū-rari. Evidently the attack on Paṇiṇa had not the wished-for success.

³ The text here is very corrupt, but the name Vālakkoṭṭa is assured

⁵ Cf. above v. 182.

had been saved from the hands of the foe and now, since through fear he dared not come near, was sojourning in the province of 196 Malaya¹. He (Laṅkāpura) sent a messenger to him: "I have here in war again and again completely vanquished Kulasekhara
 197 together with his dignitaries and am now standing, after capturing a part of the realm, not far from Madhurā at a distance
 198 of two or three gāvutas². But my Master who had in view the protection of thy royal father, has since the murder of 199 this Ruler by his foes, at the tidings of this, given me the following charge: 'he has placed himself under my protection, if now he has been slain by the hostile king, ye shall now
 200 slay the latter and make over the realm of the Paṇḍu King Parakkama to a scion of his house, if such there be'. Therefore come without fear in haste hither, and take over the 201 dominion in thy father's kingdom." Thus ran the friendly message in accord with the truth³. When the Prince heard of this matter in the right manner, he betook himself to him 202 without delay. Hereupon Laṅkāpura sent a letter to Laṅkā to the Great king with the news that the prince had arrived 203 destitute. When the Great king had attentively heard this report, he sent joyfully many golden and silver vessels worthy 204 to eat from, as well as many gold and silver lamp-stands and exquisite garments from his own stock, worthy to clothe 205 himself with, earrings and chains and bangles set with jewels and the like as a gladdening gift. And the Prince accepted the whole of the heart-ravishing gift reverently making obeisance in the direction in which the King was.
 206 Hereupon Laṅkāpura fought with great might against Kaṇḍadevamūḍava-rāyara in Muṇḍikkāra, drove him from this 207 place and brought the Damiḷas into his power in the two districts Kilamaṅgala and Melamaṅgala¹ while he tarried there. Then by restoring Mupdikkāra to Mālava-rāyara — whose 210 heart was overwhelmed with fear and who bereft of all defiance, had placed himself under his protection — he placed 211 him in his (old) position and appointed him chief of the two districts of Maṅgala. When then Lankāpura, while tarrying 212 in Anivalakkoṭṭa, had appointed the colonel Gokappanāṇḍa who was in Muṇḍannānapkoṭṭa as chief², he set forth from there 213 and surprised Neṭṭūru³. He fought with the officers quartered in Mānavīramadhurā, with the two Aḷattūru-nāḍālvāras, with 214 Kāliṅga-rāyara⁴ and Kalikāla-rāyara a great battle. The 215 mighty one slew many Damiḷas, as well as Kalikāla-rāyara and brought Madhurā into his possession. He brought here- 216 upon many Damiḷas, as well as Muvaraya and Karumbūḷattarāyara⁵ into his power, marched then with his troops to the 217 castle of Aḷattūru-nāḍālvāra, fought hard to subdue, with Kāliṅga-rāyara and Cullakaṇṇicakuṇḍa-rāyara a great battle, 218 drove them with terrible courage from this place, and after 219 he had then burnt down many well-known villages, the great hero betook himself again to Neṭṭūru⁶. Now there came 220 from the south hither Cullakaṇṇicakuṇḍa-rāyara, the two Aḷattūru-nāḍālvāras, Mannāya-rāyara⁷, further Parittikuṇḍiyāra 221

² The loc. Anivalakkoṭṭe (cf. below note to v. 235) belongs equally to vasam and to (nāyakaṃ) kavā. The supplementing of the word nāyakaṃ is to be inferred from gokappanāṇḍanāyakaṃ and nāyakaṃ vidhāya in v. 211. W. has quite a different rendering but hardly a correct one "and made him (the Mālava-rāyara) chief of Gokappanāṇḍa in Muṇḍannānapkoṭṭa."

³ Mentioned already in v. 189, a proof that the fighting went on with alternate vicissitudes round about Madhurā.

⁶ Verses 208—219 form one sentence. They show how rapidly one event followed another. Neṭṭūru formed, as is shown also by verses 285-7, 294, 303 ff., henceforth a main centre for Lankāpura's operations.

⁷ Perhaps the same as the Mannāya-rāyara mentioned in 76. 141, 77. 7 and 35. For the other names in 221—223 see note to 76. 170 (Cullak²); n. to 76. 180, 184 (A)-u, 76. 187 (Par. and Senk.).

and Senkuppū-rāyara and many other war-skilled Damiḷas, 222 officers from the immediate retinue of King Kulasekhara:
 223 Kāliṅga-rāyara, Tennavanappalla-rāyara and Āḷavandapperūmāla¹, all people hard to vanquish who after equipping their army, 224 came to the place Pāṭapata by name, their heart full of fury 225 and firmly determined this time to conquer the foe. When Laṅkāpura heard of the matter he, the expert, sent officers 226 thither with a big army and train. They marched thither, invested the fortress from all sides, burned down a score of 227 large villages near the stronghold and after making their report, sent a messenger to Laṅkāpura to ask if they were 228 to take the fortress or not. At such tidings Laṅkāpura once more sent forth a great army and gave the charge to capture 229 the fortress. When now they received the command sent to 230 them, they began all of them to open a fearful fight. There raged between the two armies a battle — hardly bearable, awful, exasperating — like to the raging of the storm at 231 the destruction of the world. Damiḷas thousands in number they deprived of life, besides that the Tennavanappalla-rāyara 232 from the immediate retinue of the King. When Āḷavandappe-rūmāla after receiving a wound, took flight, they slew the horse he had mounted and seized this and many other steeds, 233 and while they brought joyous laughter to the lotus countenance of the goddess of fortune of heroes, the Siḥalas shatter-234 ed with a lion's courage the army of the Damiḷas. After Laṅkāpura had taken possession of Pāṭapata he later on brought the troops standing there over to his side.
 235 Laṅkāpura betook himself thereupon to Anivalakkikoṭṭa² 236 and subdued Māḷava-cakkavattin in Aṇcukoṭṭa. After he had in like manner captured Toṇḍi and Pāsa³, he advanced to Kurundaṅkuppūya to clear the region lying northwards of the enemy. After he had there subdued Valuṭṭhi-rāyara, he 237 bestowed on him as a gift of favour, a golden bracelet and the like. Then he marched thence and betook himself to 238 Tirivekambama¹. Here he subdued Silāmeghara, Kanasiyarāyara and Añcukoṭṭa-nāḍālvāra² and showed them all 239 marks of favour as before (to Valuṭṭhi). Thereupon the great 240 hero whose word was to be trusted³, sent a message to Puñ-koṇḍa-nāḍālvāra⁴ in order to bring him under his influence.

 But when the latter without showing himself, went to 241 Semponmāri, Lañkāpura betook himself thither in order to capture Semponmāri. To capture this fortress a Coja army 242 had once upon a time marched hither and could not take it in spite of a four days' fight. This inaccessible stronghold 243 the Sihalas with their lion-like courage, captured⁵ without allowing more time than half a day to pass. After they had 244 broken through two outerwalls and four gate-towers, they penetrated like singly marching elephants⁶ into the interior of the fortress, slew there the Damiḷas, many thousands in 245 number, and conquered thus in a moment the stronghold Semponmāri. Thereupon (came) the troop of the Kallaras, the 246
 Maravaras⁷, as also the Goḷihaḷas and the Kuntavaras, the army 247 of Vallakkuttāra and the troop of Ūcena, as also the mighty army in the district of Añcukoṭṭa: these exceeding brave, hot- 248 headed forces of the Damiḷas, numbering some fifty to sixty 249 thousand, surrounded thereupon the fortress occupied by the Siḥalas and opened at once a most embittered fight. Then 250 the Laṅkāpura Deva¹ and the Laṅkāgiri Sora opened the gate 251 by the southern tower, accompanied by their troops (and) with a courage scarcely to be surpassed, robbed Damiḷas thou-252 sands of them, of their life, shattered with lion-like courage the unruly Damiḷa army come from that direction hitherward, 253 as lions a herd of elephants. From the southern door there broke forth at this moment the general Gokappa and the 254 Kesadhātu Loka by name, slew many soldiers of the enemy on the battlefield and shattered to the last man the hostile 255 forces which remained over from the slaughter. From the northern tower-gate came the mighty Kesadhātu Kitti and the officer named Jagadvijaya for which scarce any man was 256 a match. The heroes shattered in no time the Damiḷa army 257 after robbing many Damiḷa warriors of their life. Thus the Siḥalas destroyed at once in a moment the whole forces of 258 the Damiḷas, put them to flight, captured many steeds and found themselves — the victory gained, famous by reason of many deeds of heroism — again together in the fortress far-259 famed under the name of Semponmāri. Thereupon he subdued² the Kuntavaras, the soldiery of the Kallaras, the army of the 260 Goḷihaḷas and the troop of the Maravaras, the army of Vallakkuttāra and the following of Ūcena, the Athalayūru-261 nāḍālvāra and Kaṅgayara³ and their shattered army, the dwellers in Tālayūrunāḍu, the army in Kalahayināḍu and the 262 dwellers of Athalayunnāḍu and those of Kākannāḍu⁴: all these Damiḷa forces all that lay (in a line) from the village 263 of Cellāru up to the frontier of the Coḷa region he brought 264 into his power and bestowed on them favours as before. He accepted the gifts which were brought him by the Vessas and the Yavanas¹ and distinguished these people also by countless marks of favour. To Mājava-cakkavattin who placed himself 265 under his protection he restored Semponmāri and appointed him to his (former) post. Then he set forth from there 266 and came again to Tirivekambama and starting hence he reached Kurundaṅkuṇḍi².

Now Kaḷavaṇḍi-nāḍālvāra had in battle with great forces 267 wrested Muṇḍikkāra³ from Mājava-rāyara. Then seeing no 268 other aid, Mājava-rāyara approached Laṅkāpura: "be thou my protection". Laṅkāpura at once summoned his best 269 officers, the two Kesadhātus, known to the people as Kitti and Loka, and the general Gokappa and charged them as 270 their commander, to open hostilities and restore Muṇḍikkāra to Mājava-rāyara. These betook themselves to the spot, began 271 a combat hard to withstand, drove the foe from Muṇḍikkāra, slew many Damiḷas and after they had placed Mājava-rāyara 272 once more in his former position, they returned thence to Laṅkāpura.

Another officer, Puṅkoṇḍa-nāḍālvāra⁴ by name, betook 273 himself to the place called Siriyavala, fought while there a 274 great battle with Mājava-cakkavattin, put him to flight and took the village known by the name of Jayaṅkoṇḍāna and 275 immediately after that Semponmāri itself. When the hero Laṅkāpura, best of steadfast men, heard of this event, he set 276 forth himself at once from the fortress Anivalakki and advanced, in order to take Semponmāri, to Tirivekambama⁵. When 277 Puṅkoṇḍa-nāḍālvāra learned of this event, he left Semponmāri and betook himself from there to Siriyavala. Thereupon the hero 278

⁵ The continued recurrence of place names previously mentioned (cf. 76. 170; 76. 241, 258; 76. 212, 235; 76. 238, 266) shows again that all these contests were waged within a fairly circumscribed area.

Laṅkāpura marched to Semponmāri and when now Puṅkoṇḍa-279 nāḷālvāra came thither with the intent to surrender, but without presenting himself, betook himself again to the place
 Siriyavala, Laṅkāpura also marched to the village of Siriyavala 280 and began from all sides an embittered combat. Now Puṅkoṇḍa-281 nāḷālvāra sent the following message: "I will submit to thee, if safety is vouchsafed me, since I am mastered by great fear; 282 if not, I dare not come." At the tidings of this Laṅkāpura who was himself free from fear, sent a return message with 283 the purport that he should come. At the message of the hero Laṅkāpura whose word was to be relied on, the former 284 free of all dread, betook himself to him. Thereupon Laṅkāpura bestowed on him many favours, summoned also Māja-285 va-cakkavattin to him, reconciled the two and after he had placed them both in their former positions, the great hero 286 betook himself to Neṭṭūru. The two villages which had been laid waste, Rājasihamahāḷa and Vālugāma by name he rebuilt 287 and after he had dammed up two tanks in Siriyavala and two tanks also in Perumpalaya, he had the tilling of the fields taken in hand.

288 The Ruler Kulasekhara took the troops in Tiriyaveli¹, as well as the troops of the two brothers of his mother in Ten-289 koṅgu and Vaḍakoṅgu², and versed in the various expedients of statecraft, such as the distribution of honours and the like, he made deserters of many Damiḷas who had already been 290 subdued and began now, equipped with forces to march forth to battle. When the prudent Laṅkāpura heard trustworthy 291 tidings of this he destroyed the traitorous Damiḷas root and branch, true to the command of his Lord whose task it was to subdue the miscreants.

292 Thereupon there came sent by the Great king to cover his rear, the hero Jagadvijaya³ by name whose courage ex-293 ceeded that of the whole world, accompanied by many foot māri, it may be assumed that Laṅkāpura had sent him to Laṅkā for soldiers and steeds to Anivalakki after crossing the ocean. The far-famed Laṅkāpura likewise left Neṭṭūru and betook 294 himself to Anivalakki. He sought out the newly-arrived (Jagadvijaya), embraced him and having conversed with him 295 in heartfelt and friendly manner, the foe-crusher returned to Neṭṭūru. Setting forth from there, he came, having knowledge 296 of the right places, to the place known by the name of Mundrannaddbāna and took up far-famed for his courage, his position there. At the place called Kijakoṭṭa and at the place 297 by name Maṅgalama¹ he fought with the Damiḷas, slew many soldiers, took such foes as one was obliged to seize, alive and 298 captured many horses which had been left on the battlefield. Then he set forth from there, came to Orittiyūrutombama and 299 endowed with a surplus of invincible courage, he fought with Puṅkoṇḍa-naḍālvāra, Silāmeghara and Aṅcukoṭṭa-nāḍālvāra² 300 a great (and) terrible battle. After cutting down many Da- 301 miḷas he betook himself to Siriyavala, burned down the two-storeyed palace of Puṅkoṇḍa-nāḍālvāra who had not submitted 302 to him and marched from the place Tirikkūnappera farther. The general Jagadvijaya now advanced from Anivalakki to 303 Neṭṭūru, set forth from there and shattered, himself un- 304 approachable³, the fortresses called Madhurammāvīra, Pāttanallūru and Sorapḍakkotṭa. Returned to Neṭṭūru he tarried 305 there and brought the two Aḷattūru-nāḍālvāras and Cullakaṇṇa-kunḍa-rāyara⁴ to submission. When once the hero with great 306 forces came to Pāttanallūru, he sent to Laṅkāpura the following message: "Thou must come with greatest haste to the 307 river called Vayiga; I must needs see thee, there is something to report." When the hero Laṅkāpura received these 308 tidings, he set off with all speed thence and began the march with large forces. The hostile army which was standing at 309

310 the place called Tirippāluru, saddled its numerous horses, came hither and halfway began to fight a terrible combat with the 311 Laṅkāpura Deva and the other heroes who were present in the battle. Thereupon the heroes dispersed the great 312 army even as the beams of the sun spreading forth (disperse)
 the mass of the darkness. Thus did Laṅkāpura whose bravery was as the fire of the last day, capture in a moment 313 Tirippāluru and took up his abode there. The officer by name Jagadvijaya, versed in good counsel, shattered the great army 314 of Damiḷas dwelling in Pannattāṅkoṭṭa, capable of starting a battle on the battlefield, brought the fortress into his power and halted there.

315 King Kulasekhara in his exceeding fury took Tuvārādhi-316 pativeḷāra, as well as Toṇḍamānara, Virapperayara and Nigaya-rāyara, Kaḷavaṇḍiya-nāḍāḷvāra and the other Kaṅga-317 yara¹, made his many soldiers ready for battle and betook 318 himself, his loins girt for battle, to Rājīnā. The great general of terrible courage charged his terrible army to give battle 319 to Laṅkāpura. The hero Laṅkāpura thereupon, expert in 320 affairs, explained the affair to Jagadvijaya: "In order together with me to put to flight the Monarch Kulasekhara, thou must so as to attack from the one side, make thy troops ready for 321 battle and come hither with all haste." After he had sent him a message of such purport and had at the same time 322 equipped his own strong army, he set forth from there and fought a great battle with the Damiḷas. They were van-323 quished, withdrew at once to Rājīnā, closed the tower-gates with the small and the great gates and the Damiḷas
 now with their Monarch kept to the centre of the town.
 324 Thereupon the heroes at the head, the general Gokaṇṇa, the 325 Kesadhātu named Loka and the Laṅkāpura Deva, who had arrived at the west gate, began to tear down the walls and 326 to blow up the tower-gates. The Laṅkāpura Deva and the general Gokaṇṇa after shattering walls and tower-gates, penetrated within. But the haughty Kesadhātu, the mighty Loka 327 by name, thought: by the way the others went I go not;

 he slew numbers of heroic warriors, brought down many steeds, 328 blew up the southern gate and at once penetrated within.
 Thereupon Kulasekhara fled, his heart overwhelmed with fear, 329
 no longer even master of the clothes he wore, by the postern of the eastern tower-gate¹ which he had had opened, and 330 by a lucky chance he escaped out of the hands of his foes.
 These all cut down numbers of soldiers of the Damiḷas, took 331 away many horses and much treasure of many a kind, and 332 shaking their garments, dancing around, clapping their hands and rejoicing, they celebrated the festival of victory. There- 333 upon Laṅkāpura and the general Jagadvijaya entered Rājīnā along with the other heroes.

Thus thrives ever more and more the state of those who 334 have done good, who are endowed with a keen understanding, who understand statecraft and moral discipline, whose riches are their terrible majesty, whose manliness fails not, even as the moon in the light half of the month (waxes) from day to day.

Here ends the seventy-sixth chapter, called «Account of the Capture of the Town of Rājīnā», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

CHAPTER LXXVII

THE CONQUEST OF THE PAṆDU KINGDOM

1 The Monarch Kulasekhara who had fled thence through fear found again a firm footing in Toṇḍamāna's¹ mountain fortress.
 2 The forces of Viranukkara and other (soldiers) from Kakkola, 3 the forces of Madhuraddhamakkāra² came to Rājina, related the whole story of King Kulasekhara and persuaded Laṅkā-4 pura to betake himself at once to Madhurā. Thereupon Laṅkāpura and the general Jagadvijaya equipped with great luck,
 5 set forth for the town of Madhurā, gave over to the Prince Virapaṇḍu the dwelling of his royal father, which was his 6 birthplace, and took up their abode in the town. They had summoned to them the three Virapperayaras: him called Sirivallabha, Rājā Nārāyaṇa, and him called Parakkamapaṇḍu, 7 (further) the officer Maṇṇaya-rāyara and Senkuṇḍi-rāyara, the 8 other Virapperayara Keraḷasīhamuttara³ and bestowed on them ornaments and the like. To Coḷagaṅgara who had submitted, 9 they made over the supreme direction of the district Parittikkuṇḍi⁴ formerly administered by him, and restored him to his 10 former position. Kaḷavaṇḍiya-nāḍālvāra⁵ came indeed with the intention of submitting⁶, but when he had entered Madhurā,

² Evidently local troops which had voluntarily submitted to the victor.

³ Virapperayara is clearly a title here. Cf. 76. 138 and 316. Of the other names Maṇṇaya is mentioned 76. 141, 77. 35, Senkuṇḍi 76. 138 (q. v.) and Keraḷasīhamuttara 76. 141.

⁴ Coḷagaṅga(rā) is mentioned 76. 124. The place name Parittikkkuṇḍi is met with in Parittikkkuṇḍiyāra 76. 137 and 221.

⁵ See 76. 141.

he thought; I fear to let myself be seen, and returned without 11 presenting himself, to his place. Thereupon Laṅkāpura marched into his district to take it. The unrivalled one, equipped 12 with great power and courage, offered him battle, defeated him and captured Aḷagvānagiri. Kaḷavaṇḍiya-nāḍālvāra and 13 another named Sūradeva submitted and besought the general for (the restoration of) his district; at his request Laṅkāpura 14 handed over to him the district. Then the far-famed betook himself to the district of Kurumba-rāyara and after he had 15
 also subdued Kurumba-rāyara and likewise brought Kaṅgayara in Niyama into his power, the hero betook himself later to 16
 the place called Tiripputtūru in order to make subject to himself also Niḷaḷadha-rāyara¹.

Niḷaḷadha-rāyara gathered together his own army, took 17 with him also the Coḷa officers, Akalaṅka-nāḍālvāra and Kaṅcamba-rāyara, Malayappa-rāyara and Kiccārattarayara² as 18 well as their numerous troops and the many horses in their 19 possession, marched thence and began a combat hard to withstand. But the army of the Sīhalas transformed the 20 hostile host together with steeds and infantry — stretching 21 three gāvutas wide³ from Tiripputtūru to Ponaamarāvati, along the highway between the two places — into a single mass of flesh. After it had shattered these vast forces it came to 22 Ponaamarāvati, burned down the three-storeyed palace built there, and after setting fire to many other houses and well- 23 filled granaries of rice, the hero (Laṅkāpura) in order to rob the inhabitants of their fear, had the drums beaten, took the 24 people who were settled in the district under his own dominion and returned to Madhurā⁴.

¹ Of the names mentioned in vv. 13—16 those of Sūradeva and Kurumba do not otherwise occur. For Kaḷavaṇḍiya see 76. 141, for Kaṅgayara see 76. 140, for Niḷaḷadha 76. 138.

² Akalaṅka, Mayalappa and Kiccārattarayara are mentioned again later (77. 55 ff)

³ The front extended thus over a distance of something like six miles (cf. 73. 154 and note).

⁴ The subject changes in this sentence. In the principal sentence

25 Now the Monarch (Parakkamabāhu) whose commands stand firm, sent the order to hold the festival of the coronation for 26 Prince Virapaṇḍu. When Laṅkāpura heard of this command of the King's which could not be gainsaid, he set about mak-27 ing the preparations for the consecration. He then charged the 28 Lambakappas Mālava-cakkavattin, Mālava-rāyara and Athalayūru-nāḍālvāra to carry out the duties of the Lambakappas¹, had then as one whose commands are scarcely to be evaded, 29 the drums beaten in the kingdom and gathered together all the officers in the Paṇḍu realm at the head of their own 30 troops and adorned with all their ornaments. Then in a temple of the deities to the north of the palace of former kings, 31 adorned with the drums of victory captured aforetime, the highly-famed one carried out the consecration of the Prince and made him in accord with tradition, walk round the town, his right side turned towards it.

32 Meanwhile the Ruler Kulasekhara who had fled to the mountain fortress of Toṇḍamāna, had brought Toṇḍamāna 33 round to his side. He took his army as well as his own troops, and together with Anujvisamiddha, a man of terrible 34 courage, he set forth from that hill fortress and reached the important stronghold called Maṅgalama into which he entered.
35 With Maṇḍapaya-rāyara and Senkuṇḍiya-rāyara who had sub-36 mitted to the Siḥalas² he fought a great battle; he captured their fortress and took up a position there. When Laṅkāpura heard of the matter and how it had happened, he thought:
37 "Only when I shall have driven the hostile Ruler from this

(v. 24) vīro is the subject and āgañchi the finite verb. The gerunds occurring in vv. 21–23 have as subject senā Siḥalādāhinā. They are thus again treated as absolute locatives. Cūlava. ed. I. Introd., p. XVI.

¹ We learn two things from this passage: that a Lambakappa clan existed also in Southern India and that the members of this clan performed particular functions at the festival of the king's consecration. For the three names see notes to 76. 132 and 137.

² Thus according to 77. 7. It must be assumed that the Toṇḍamāna named in v. 32 who figures in 76. 815 as one of Kulasekhara's followers, had submitted to the Siḥalas, but under Kulasekhara's influence had again deserted them.

place and cleansed this district so rich in mountain and forest strongholds shall I return." He left the town of Madhurā, 38 put up a stronghold near Maṅgalaṃkoṭṭa¹ and took up his position there. With mighty forces they fought a great battle 39 with the three brothers of the wife of Toṇḍamāna: Kallakka- 40 veḷāra, Muṇṇayadha-rāyara and Kāliṅga-rāyara², captured the 41 fortress, slew many Damiḷas and after later on taking Sivali-puttūru also the highly-famed ones³ took up a position there. 42 Thereupon the hostile Monarch Kulasekhara gathered together the troops standing in Tiriṇaveli⁴, sent also to the two brothers 43 of his mother a message and took the troops in Tenkoṅgu and Vaḍakoṅgu⁵ and after the great general had brought 44 this whole army together, he gave the order to halt at the fortress called Sāntaneri. Now Laṅkāpura and the general 45 Jagadvijaya immediately set forth on the way to take this strong- hold. To bar the way to the enemy Kulasekhara versed in the 46 right expedients, had the great tank pierced. When the hero 47 Laṅkāpura heard tidings of this he said: "When one goes forth to fight a decisive battle with the foe the sight of a pierced 48 tank on the way is not good." So the mighty one immediately had it dammed up again. Thereupon he advanced with great 49 forces and courage against yonder strong fortress, fought a bitter fight, broke quickly into it, slew him called Kallakka- 50 veḷāra and many other Damiḷas and captured numbers of horses of the Damiḷas. Then they pressed forward into the two vil- 51 lages belonging to Toṇḍamāna, called Tirimalakke and Kattala, burned down the village called Tirimalakke so that nought 52

¹ Of course the same as the fortress Maṅgalama mentioned in v. 34, and which also occurs in 76. 297.

² For the two last names cf. 76. 146 and 76. 174 ff. The first occurs again 77. 50.

³ Instead of the sing. (Laṅkāpura v. 36 c) the new sentence (from v. 39 a b) has the plur. What is meant are Laṅkāpura and his generals. Sivaliputtūru is the present Srivillipatur (cf. also W.) in the Tinne- velli District not far from the borders of Travancore.

but its name remained, because it was there that the Paṇḍu 53 king Parakkama had been murdered¹. Then he set forth from there and after reaching the village Coḷakulantaka the highly-54 famed one tarried there for some time². King Kulasekhara now took the two brothers of his mother, also the troops of 55 the twain and their many horses, further Akalaṅka-nāḍālvāra, 56 and Pallava-rāyara, Malayappa-rāyara, Kaṇḍamba-rāyara and Kiccārattarayara who was endowed with great power and courage, and with all these Coḷa officers and their numerous 57 army as also with Kaḷavaṇḍiya-nāḍālvāra and his troops and 58 with Puṅkoṇḍa-nāḍālvāra³ at the head of his army, the mighty one came himself to the place called Palaṅkoṭṭa and ordered 59 his great army to Paṇḍunāḍukottāna and the place called Ūriyeri⁴, this time firmly determined on the vanquishing of 60 the foe. Thereupon Laṅkāpura and the general Jagadvijaya 61 went forth from the village of Coḷakulantaka to battle. They so planned it that the hostile army which had occupied the two great fortresses⁵, were disinclined for giving battle in the open 62 field, had then a great entrenchment made at the village of Ūriyeri above the tank and took up a position there during 63 the night. But the hostile army which had occupied the two fortresses, dispersed and went thither where the Ruler Ku-

¹ W.'s happy suggestion of ettha hato is certainly correct. I may remark that all the MSS. have etthā gato; etthāgato as read by the Col. Ed. occurs nowhere.

² There is a change again in number, this time from the plur. (pa-viṣṭhā) in v. 51 c to the sing. (niśidittha) in 53 c.

⁴ The locatives Paṇḍunāḍukottāne and Ūriyerihaye ṭhāne are directly dependent on niyaṇesi. The skr. niyaṇayati is also used with the locative of that to which anyone is determined or commanded. In 72. 207 we have the same as in this passage Kyānagāme niyaṇetvā. Cf. further 77. 82. It is therefore quite unnecessary to change ṭhāne into ṭhātun as is done by the Col. Ed. — Palaṅkoṭṭa (see also W.) is the present Palam-kotta in the Tinneveli District.

⁵ That is Paṇḍunāḍukottāna and Ūriyeri.

lasekhara was standing. Now Laṅkāpura and the general 64 Jagadvijaya well discriminating between favorable and unfavorable places, marched to Palaṅkoṭṭa. The heroes fought 65 a terrible battle with the hostile sovereign, slew many warriors captured many steeds, put the Monarch Kulasekhara at once 66 to flight and took Palaṅkoṭṭa. Then they set forth from there, came into the domain of him called Tuvārādhipativēlāra and 67 received the horses and elephants supplied by him¹. But when 68 they heard: the Monarch Kulasekhara has come to Madhurā², they in order to drive him from this place, hereupon marched 69
 to Adharaṭṭeri, subdued there Nigaya-rāyara and showed him many marks of favour. Now when they again set forth from 70 this place the Ruler Kulasekhara smitten with fear, betook himself to the Coḷa country. Hereupon Laṅkāpura charged 71 the dignitary by name Jagadvijaya, to take up a position at the place called Pāttanallūru. He himself went at the head 72 of his troops to Tirikkūnappera. But King Kulasekhara had meanwhile by various entreaties won over the Coḷa King to 73 his side and at the command of this king he took the army and the many horses of him called Pallava-rāyara, also 74 him called Inandapada together with Toṇḍamūna, the rāyara called Rājaraṅgalappa, further Kaṅgaṅḍakalappa-rāyara, as 75 well as the Nakāranibhūpa-rāyara, the hero Niccavinodavāṇava- 76
 rāyara, Narasihapadma and Sekirapadma-rāyara, Rājinda- 77
 brahmamahārāja and Mādhava-rāyara . . . as also Coḷakonāra, Janābrahmamahārāja and Coḷatirikka-rāyara — these troop 78 leaders in Uccanḱuṭṭha he took with him, with these he took also 79 Niyarāya and Kappiṇcimpekula, further Mādhava-rāyara and Kaṇḍaveṭṭi, further Koṅgamaṅgala-nāḍālvāra, Akalaṅka-nāḍālvā- 80
 vāra and Kaṇḍamba-rāyara, as also Kiḷamaṅgala-nāḍālvāra, Viśālamutta-rāyara³ and their many horses and sent them to 81

¹ The context shows that Tuvārādhipativēlāra (for whom see 76. 138, 315) had submitted voluntarily.

² The fact that Kulasekhara can dare to attack Madhurā which was formerly (see v. 38) in Laṅkāpura's hands, shows that so far he had suffered no overwhelming defeat. He even succeeds in enlisting the Coḷas in his cause.

³ Of the numerous names mentioned here six occur earlier: Pallava

82 Toṇḍi and Pāsa¹. When Laṅkāpura heard of the matter he was minded to so destroy them that only their name should remain. The hero ordered the general Jagadvijaya by name to Madhurā, he himself then set forth from Tirikkānappera 83 and marched to the town of Kīṇilaya situated on the borders of Madhurā. Now the mighty Coḷa army opened the great 84 combat. For a distance of four gāvutas² he filled the road with corpses, he also slew many soldiers who had flung them-85 selves into the sea and dyed the water of the ocean ruddy with the blood of the foe³. He took (as booty) many horses 86 and captured many Damiḷas alive — Rājindabrahmamahārāja and Nandipadmara⁴, Narasiḥapadmara and Coḷakonāra — and again
 87 with great forces, burned to the ground Vaḍamaṇamekkunḍi, 88 Maṇamekkunḍi and Maṇcakkunḍi. Then having laid waste by fire a strip of the Coḷa country seven gāvutas in extent⁵ and 89 thus quelled the Coḷas, he returned thence, and when he came to the village called Velaṅkunḍi under the dominion of Nigaladha-rāyara⁶, he sent to him the message to appear 90 before him. But as Nigaladha-rāyara was at that time under the sovereignty of King Kulasekhara he took the Monarch

Three occur later: Narasiḥapadmara 77. 86, Rājindabrahma 77. 86, and Visālamutta 77. 91. Cf. with Kaṅgakoṇḍakalappa, Kaṅgakoṇḍapperayara 76. 180 note; with Kīḷamaṅgala-nāḍālvāra, the name of the district Kīḷamaṅgala in 76. 209; and with Kaṇḍuveṭṭi the name of Narasiḥa's capital Kaṇḍuveṭṭi in 47. 7.

³ The description is extraordinary. From what has gone before the battle must have taken place in the neighbourhood of Madhurā, therefore not near the sea.

the government and sent with speed to Sihala the many horses, men and elephants captured from the Coḷa country and from the Paṇḍu land¹.

- 104 Now King Parakkamabāhu that lion among royal princes, founded in memory of the conquest of the Paṇḍu country the 105 splendid village Paṇḍuvijaya by name, which prospered through all time. But to the Brahmans he whose joy was in giving, gave an alms.
- 106 Parakkamabāhu, the first in the race of rulers of the earth, whose mind was endowed with discrimination between what was statesmanlike and what was unstatesmanlike, who was an abode of every virtue, gifted with the gracious beauty of the god of love ruled a long time alone over the ocean-bounded earth.

Here ends the seventy-seventh chapter, called "The Conquest of the Paṇḍu Kingdom", in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

¹ The narrative ends abruptly. One is faced by a series of questions which remain unanswered. What becomes of Kulasekhara? What of the great coalition of South Indian princes Coḷas and Paṇḍus described in v. 72 of whom at the most only a few individuals were conquered? Does Viṛapaṇḍu succeed in maintaining his power? Since Kulasekhara did not fall in battle he will scarcely have left his rival in peace. What is Laṅkāpura's after fate? It is curious that his return to Ceylon is never mentioned and that there is no word of the distinctions bestowed on him by Parakkamabāhu. It is pretty clear that the chronicler has concealed the failure which overtook the expedition after its initial success. The ideal figure of Parakkama which he has in mind, must not be dimmed by association with any misfortune. South Indian inscriptions relate that Laṅkāpura was defeated and that his head with those of his officers was nailed to the gates of Madhurā. In the 4th year of Kulottuṅga Coḷa III (1181-2) Viṛapaṇḍu was driven out and the Sinhalese troops finally defeated. H. W. Соловьев, HC., p. 62. See also note to 76. 80.

CHAPTER LXXVIII

THE BUILDING OF VIHĀRAS

Now after the sovereign of Laṅkā, Parakkamabāhu who 1 had received consecration as king, who was experienced in statecraft, had thus made peaceful the land of Laṅkā, he 2 cherished, full of zeal, the wish to further the advancement of the Order of the Master for which he had striven when attaining the royal dignity, since it was a most excellent merit. Since he perceived that the few loyal bhikkhus — apart 3 from the maintenance of wives and children and so forth by the community in the villages belonging to the community, in 4 which they saw their sole duty, beyond which there was none — did not wish to have ceremonies in common, nor even to see one another¹, he desired even before the purification of 5

¹ The sentence is difficult. I think the meaning is this that the attitude of the few loyal bhikkhus (susīle keci bhikkhavo) who would not hear of intercourse and of common action with the others, shows the evil conditions existing in the Saṃgha. The dussīlā bhikkhavo were in the majority, the susīlā were isolated. As regards the construction of the sentence, I believe that puttadārādīposanaṃ is governed by thapetvā (4a) and ekakammādiṃ dassanaṃ pi by v'ākaṅkhaṇte. By saṃghagāma are meant the villages in which the men were active as ārāṃikā. Wives and children of the ārāṃikā were supported by the monastery and this was the only duty from which the susīlā bhikkhavo did not absolve themselves and the one which brought them into contact with the others. W's version according to which the priests had only thought of the feeding of their (former) wives and children I consider impossible. The text reads: saṃghassa puttadārādīposanaṃ. But one cannot say that the Saṃgha has children and wives. Only the individual bhikkhu has these. Thus the gen. saṃghassa does not belong to puttadārādī but to posanaṃ. Note too the ādi. This refers to sick the Order¹, for the purpose of furthering the Order of the Victor, to achieve unity² among the bhikkhus of the three 6 fraternities. Even as the Ruler of men Dhammāsoka (with) Moggaliputtatissa, so he entrusted the Grand therā Mahā- 7 kassapa by name, with the task — an experienced man who knew the Tipiṭaka and was exceedingly well versed in the Vinaya, a light of the race of theras, conciliatory, long since 8 consecrated. He made the therā Nānapāla in Anurādhapura together with his pupils and the bhikkhus in the province 9 of Sapara³ come to Pulatthinagara, further together with the therā Moggallāna, the therā Nāgindapalliya and all the other 10 bhikkhus in the province of the Yuvarāja⁴, as well as those belonging to the three fraternities in Rohaṇa after he had placed at their head the distinguished therā Nanda who dwelt people and those incapable of work who must of course also be looked after in the saṃghagāma of the monastery.

² An account of the church reforms of Parakkamabāhu is found already in 73.12-22. That this should be followed by a second detailed account is probably due to the fact that the compiler of the Cūlavamsa had two different sources both of which he employed for his narrative. In a similar way the building activities of the king are dealt with twice over (in 73.23 ff. and 78.28 ff.). As regards the reform of the Order I have already referred in the note to 73.22 to the Gal-vihāra inscription of Parakkama and to certain similarities in form between it and the account of the Cūlavs. A further similarity occurs in the second narrative (78.2 ff.). The name of the Grand therā Mahākassapa is mentioned as spokesman in the negotiations in which capacity he is also mentioned in the inscription. Then too in both sources a parallel is drawn between King Dhammāsoka and the head of the Third Council, Moggallāna (Mhvs. 5.228 ff.) on the one hand, and Parakkamabāhu and Mahākassapa on the other. According to the inscription, Mahākassapa was an inmate of the Udumbaragiri-vihāra, that is Dimbulāgala, now Gunner's Quoin Hill on the right bank of the Mahaveliganga about 5 miles SSE. of Mahaganātota near Polonnaruwa. Cf. WICKHEMASINGHE, EZ. II. 184 ff.; the same, Catal. of Sinhalese Mss. in the Brit. Museum, p. XV.

³ Apparently the present province of Sabaragamuwa.

in the Selantara monastery. Hereupon the Ruler sent a summons 11 to the bhikkhus dwelling in the Mahāvihāra for (bringing about) the mutual concord.

Since the shamelessness had passed all bounds and the 12 schism had lasted a long time, many bhikkhus would hear nothing of conciliation. Many began departing to foreign lands, 13 others left the Order, some wished for a sitting in the secret court of justice¹. Hereupon one approached the great (and) 14 exceedingly difficult task: conciliation seemed as difficult as the hurling of the Sineru² mountain. But the Ruler, impartial, 15 firm in his resolves and just, encouraged the bhikkhus and with great pains persuaded them to agree. He had the single 16 points in dispute as they arose settled by the bhikkhus among whom Mahākassapa was the oldest. He was himself present 17 as protector of the court together with those lions among teachers who knew the three Piṭakas, and while according to 18 precept he led those bhikkhus capable of being cured to purification, he established harmony among the bhikkhus of the Mahāvihāra. But the undisciplined he excluded from the Order, 19 and that they might not by striving after gain do harm to the Order, he assigned them lucrative positions. After he had 20 thus with great pains purified the Mahāvihāra, he set about bringing the bhikkhus of the Abhayagiri — who since the 21 time of Abhaya³ had formed a separate group — as well as the inmates of the Jetavana — who had separated themselves 22 from the days of the Ruler of men Mahāsena¹, (they) who gave out as Buddha's word the Vetulla-Piṭaka² and the like which were no words of Buddha and who had turned away 23 from religious duties — into concord with the inmates of the Mahāvihāra who were rich in all virtues, even as glass stones 24 with jewels. But as they lacked inward virtue as moral discipline and the like, they came even through the influence of the Great community and of the King to no joyful ac-25 ceptance of the Buddha teaching. And while the just King together with people versed in the right method held the trial, he found not a single member of the Order that had 26 kept himself unspoiled³. He caused many ascetics to be received as sūmaṇeras, the undisciplined he dismissed and gave them 27 lucrative positions. While thus within a short time achieving purification and unity, he with great pains established again

² Cf. note to 54. 43. One may compare sinerukkipanoma with sakkarākhīpana "the hurling of stones" (as an accomplishment, sippa, JaCo. I. 418³⁰).

³ Vaṭṭagāmaṇī Abhaya. The story of the separation of the monks of the Abhayagiri-vihāra from those of the Mahāvihāra is related in Mhvs. 33. 95 ff.

 the community as it had been in Buddha's time.

28 Every year he brought the Great community to the river
 bank⁴, made them take up their abode in a garden there 29 while he with his dignitaries paid them respect. Then after firmly anchoring ships in the stream he had a charming 30 maṇḍapa of beautiful proportions erected on them. Then when he had given to the bhikkhus costly robes and all kinds of articles of use, the wise Prince made them hold the ceremony of admission into the Order⁵.

² For the heretical Vetullavāda to which the Dhammarucika monks living in the Abhayagiri monastery adhered, see Mhvs. 36. 41, 110 ff. and 37. 1 ff.; Nik. s., p. 12. A. M. Hocart, Mem. ASC. I, 1924, p. 15 ff.

³ P. paṇatatta, lit. "with the original self (being, character)". In Vin. I. 280¹² the word means "in the original condition, restored, cured"; In JāCo. I. 236²⁰ it has a similar meaning to that in our passage as attribute of bhikkhu along with stlavā vipassanāya yuttapayutto.

⁴ On the bank of the Mahaveliganga.

⁵ Even to-day the monks in Ceylon in order to be quite undisturbed, are fond of performing their rites in a pavilion built on piles in a sheet of water about a stone's throw from the bank.

Now for the bhikkhus increased in this manner to many 31
 hundreds the King was desirous of building in goodly fashion large vihāras, suitable for dwelling in. He (therefore) founded 32 the great monastery by name Jetavana¹, making as it were visible to the eye the beauty of the Jetavana (in Sāvatthī²).
 For the theras dwelling there in the sacred district, firmly 33 persevering in discipline, he built eight costly pāsādas, three storeys high. For the thera named Sāriputta who persevered 34 firmly in discipline, he erected a vast (and) glorious pāsāda with rooms, terraces and chambers. Also nine incomparable, 35 three-storeyed image houses (he built) furnished with all appurtenances³ and diversely adorned with images. For the 36 seventy-five pariveśas (he built) as many long pāsādas with charming figures (painted), two storeys high; (further) one 37 hundred and seventy-eight small pāsādas, thirty-four gate-towers and two houses for books; huts, grottoes, halls and many 38 sleeping-houses with ornaments of flowers and creepers and with figures of gods, Brahmas and the like. Creating out of 39 brick and stucco an elixir for the eyes⁴ (he built) the Tivaṅka house for the Tivaṅka image⁵, shimmering with rows of figures 40

¹ What is meant here is without doubt the group of monastic buildings within the city to the north of the citadel, on the so-called Quadrangle. Cf. above all H. C. P. B&A., Rep. ASC. 1903 (= LXV, 1908), p. 6 ff., as well as A. M. Hocart, Mem. ASC. II, 1926, p. 4 ff.

² The monastery was like its namesake in Anurādhapura, called after the celebrated park in Sāvatthī which Anāthapiṇḍika presented to the Buddha and the Order. See OLSEN, Buddha, p. 166; H. Kern, Manual of Indian Buddhism, p. 28.

³ For paṭiyatta as substantive in the meaning of "equipment, articles of clothing or of general use", cf. Mhvs. 29. 22. The alteration by the Col. Ed. into sattatimatte I cannot approve of. The numeral adj. is sava in savāppaṭisaṃmate — as is proved by all the MSS. — which S and B likewise felt obliged to alter. The Col. Ed. treats the text too arbitrarily. I believe that paṭiyatta here means all the ornaments and garments belonging to a Buddha image with which it is decked out on festive occasions. Cf. note to 38. 64 (towards the end) and to 38. 66.

⁵ It is difficult to say what is meant by tivaṅka in t-ghara and

41 of lions, kinnaras¹, geese and the like, with many diversely perforated balustrades² and with railings. (Further he built) a beautiful round temple wholly of stone for the Tooth Relic³, adorned with glorious pillars, staircases and outer walls⁴ and so forth. (Further the built) three sermon halls, a cetiya⁵, 42 eight long cloisters and a refectory of (great) length and breadth, eighty-five fire-houses covered with bricks and one hundred and seventy-eight privies.

t-paṭimā. Mr. PARANAVITANE, the epigraphist of the ASC. (letter of 25-4-28) assumes that the term means the same as tribhāṅga. This is the name given in Indian Iconography to a statue with "three bends", that is in the posture in which Viṣṇu or the Nāgas are often represented. He refers to Selalihiniśandesa 68, where there is a mention of Tivaṅka images in the Kelani-vihāra and believes that this passage in the Mhva. refers to these very statues in Kelaniya. It cannot be a Buddha image which is meant in this case. It seems to me certain that the tivaṅkaghara of our passage refers to a building in Pulatthina-gara and in the Jetavana-vihāra. But cf. note to 85. 66. The most likely seems to be the Heṭṭa-dā-gē, an image house on the Quadrangle with three Buddha figures (cf. Hocart, l. l., p. 5) or that building known as the Thūpārāma also situated there. The first seems however, to be a work of Nissaṅka-Malla (80. 19 and note), while the other belongs to the time before Parakkamabāhu. The expression tivaṅka remains however in both cases inexplicable.

² P. jālakavāṭa, lit. net-enclosure.

³ Without doubt the Vaṭṭa-dā-gē situated on the Quadrangle opposite the Heṭṭa-dā-gē. BALL, l. l., p. 21 ff. and Rep. ASC. 1904, p. 5 ff. Hocart, l. l., p. 4. It is a circular building consisting of two concentric terraces. On the upper terrace was a cetiya in which the relic was preserved. In an inscription on the outer stairs Nissaṅka Malla boasts that he has had the building made. It is however evidently a case of restoration. The outer staircase is indeed of later origin.

⁴ I take bhūṭi "outer wall" to mean the railings leading round the terraces.

⁵ There is no stūpa in the domain of the Jetavana. One must assume therefore that the terraced tower Sat-mahal-pāsāda on the Quadrangle was built as a cetiya. It could not serve as a dwelling, for it is as massive as a dagoba with nothing but a tunnel-like circular passage in the basement.

After he had thus by cleansing the Order, cleansed the 44 inward impurity of the bhikkhus, in order to cleanse the outward impurity, that one might be able to bathe in great heat he had eight bath-houses of stone erected, named 45
Vaṭṭanahānakoṭṭha, Gubhānānakoṭṭha, Padumanahānakoṭṭha, Bhaddanahānakoṭṭha¹ and so forth, adorned with pillars, 46 staircases and railings. There also the Great king had many walls built. Thus there were in Jetavana in all five hundred 47 and twenty buildings. With the distribution of abundant articles of use, he made the community take up its abode there.

Further the Prince had built there the Ālāhana-pariveṇa² 48 which had all the distinguishing marks (belonging to such a building), being not too far away and the like, and which was universally acknowledged as beautiful. There he built for 49 the thera a splendid pāsāda with rooms and terraces, with a choice of various apartments, embellished by turrets, three storeys high. Further forty long pāsādas and as many privies, 50 eight small pāsādas and six gate-towers, thirty-four fire-houses 51 and two larger outer walls, the Subhaddā-cetiya and the Rūpavātī-cetiya³; besides that a charming image house of five 52
storeys for which — as it was adorned with ornaments of flowers and creepers and with figures of gods and Brahmas 53
and embellished with buildings, with turrets, grottoes, apartments

³ To the group of buildings which we assume formed the Ālāhana-pariveṇa there belonged in fact several stūpas. The largest of these is popularly known as the Kiri-vehera. More to south lies the Rankot Dagoba. This has, however, nothing to do with the Ālāhana-pariveṇa,

54 and halls¹ — the name of Laṅkātilaka was befitting². In this (temple) he had erected a standing image which was an elixir for the eyes³, which had the size of the living Buddha⁴, 55 which (likewise) was called Laṅkātilaka. (He) also (built) the twelve-storeyed Uposatha-house which bore the name of Baddhasīmāpāsāda, which was furnished with numbers of 56 turrets, with buildings containing apartments and halls and with cells as dwelling-places⁵. To determine the boundary⁶ but is identical with the Ratanāvalī-cetiya built or completed by Nissanka Malla (80. 20). The Mhva. expressly states that this King adorned it with a surayyathūpikā, "with a golden pointed cone". The name Rankot means "golden point".

² The name still sticks to the image house of the Ālāhana group. It is proved besides by an inscription on the building itself in which Parakkamabāhu is named as its builder. See H. C. P. BELL, Rep. ASC. 1910—11 (= X. 1914), p. 80 ff. Lately an exact description of the plan of the building has been given by A. M. Hocart, Mem. ASC. II, 1926, p. 11 ff. This plan agrees on the whole with that of the Thūpārāma (see above note to v. 45). As regards the name of the temple, tilaka means "a patch of coloured stuffs worn on the forehead as ornament... or as emblem of a sect" (BR.); at the end of a compound it means "ornament of something", here therefore "ornament of the Island of Laṅkā". — The construction of the sentence is as follows: yattha in v. 53a stands for the loc. yamhi (paṭimāgehe) and to this then belong the locatives °rūpini and sobhite in v. 52.

there the King betook himself, adorned with all his ornaments, with the dignitaries and the ladies of the court, with a vast 57 army and with his train in the splendour of the King of the gods, to the great vihāra. At the invitation of the Great community of whom Mahākassapa was the oldest, the 58 Monarch — with the tune of songs of praise, with the sound of musical instruments and the noise of the shouts of greeting filling the four regions of the heavens, surrounded by many people bearing golden and other jars and baskets and many 59 banners and umbrellas — took with great solemnity the golden 60 plough before which was harnessed the elephant of state and went forth ploughing the furrow¹. To remove² all scruples 61 regarding landmarks formerly drawn at this spot, the bhikkhu community took up a position at different points, after pre- 62 viously by a solemn act, bound to bring full success, removing in due order the ancient landmarks³ and made known to the King the landmarks along the furrow (which he ploughed). The King drew three partial boundaries and a main boundary. 63 The boundary stones set up in the eight regions of the heavens, east and so forth, were distant (measured) with a staff five cubits in length⁴ from the Laṅkātilaka temple forty- 64

Devānarpiyatissa how he draws in person the stūā of the Mahāvihāra, just as Parakkamabāhu that of the Ālkhana-pariveṇa. The two descriptions have a considerable resemblance to each other even in the wording (cf. 78. 56-7 with 15. 189; 78. 58 with App. B, v. 6 of my edition of the old Mahāvamsa). This may be due either to the stereotyped character of all these descriptions or to Dhammakitti's conscious borrowing from the older work.

² It was strictly forbidden to encroach on an existing boundary by a new stūā. The old boundary had first to be removed by a kamma-rācā (v. 62 d), that is a solemn act of the community. Cf. note to 37. 56.

³ I think that the two lines of v. 62 should be reversed.

⁴ P. pañcavatthāya yaṭṭhiyā. For vatthā see note to 37. 172. The standard of measurement had thus a length of (5 × 18 in.) roughly four, forty-nine, thirty-eight, thirty-six, thirty-five, fifty-seven, 65 forty-five, sixty-six staves respectively. The boundary stone set up in the southern region of the heavens was distant from 66 the Gopāla rock¹ fifty-eight staves², and the boundary stone that was set up in the northern region of the heavens, was 67 fifty staves from the Vijjādhara cave³. These stones served for the marking of the main boundary. At the Baddhasīmā-pāsāda there was a fixed boundary of thirty-five staves in 68 length and breadth⁴. At the sacred space called Khaṇḍasīmā⁵ the boundary was fixed at fifteen staves in length and six 69 staves in breadth⁶, and at the pāsāda of the thera the fixed boundary was eighteen cubits in length and twenty cubits in 70 breadth⁷. This vihāra the King dedicated to the bhikkhus along with the (necessary) articles of use.

In the same way the Ruler of men had the foundations

7½ ft. (= 2.55 m.). The distances were thus successively 330, 367½, 285, 270, 262½, 427½, 337½, 495 ft. Cf. for this A. M. HOCART, Mem. ASC. II. 1926, p. 5-7. By "main boundary" (mahāstūṇā) is meant that enclosing the whole of the buildings belonging to the Ājāhara-pariveṣa. Inside this there were according to 67c to 69, three smaller sections which were marked off by "sub-boundaries" or "part-boundaries" (khaṇḍasīmā). This distinction corresponds to the description of the fixing of the boundary of the Mahāvihāra Mhvs. 15. 193 which speaks of nimittāni "boundary marks" pure and simple and śīmantaranimittāni "inner boundary marks".

¹ This is probably the rock lying between the Baddhasīmā-pāsāda and the Rankot stūpa. According to the popular idea the chasm served as an abode for those bhikkhus who wished to give themselves up to meditation.

² Therefore 485 ft.

³ That is 375 ft. from what is now called the Gal-vehera. Cf. below note to v. 73.

⁴ Therefore 262½ ft. × 262½ ft.

⁵ Just as the main building took its name from the fixing of the main boundary (baddhā stūṇā) so one of the sub-sections from that of the sub- or part-boundary.

⁶ Therefore 112½ ft. × 45 ft.

⁷ Thus with the cubit (hatthā) calculated at 18 in. only about 27 ft. × about 30 ft.

laid of the Pacchimārāma¹. Here in the pariveṇas, which 71 were twenty-two in number (there were) just as many two-storeyed long pāsādas and twenty fire-houses, forty-one 72
 two-storeyed small pāsādas as well as thirty-five privies and 73 two cloisters; one sermon hall and ten gate-buildings. He dedicated this vihāra along with the (necessary) articles of use also to the bhikkhus.

Likewise the Ruler of men had the Uttārārāma² built. By 74 breaking down the rock not far from the Great thūpa he bringing into play every kind of skilled work, had three 75 grottoes made by expert craftsmen, namely the Vijjādhara grotto, the cave with the image in sitting posture and the grotto with the recumbent image.

The Ruler also had the Mahāthūpa³ erected which bore 76
 the name of the Damiḷathūpa because it had been built by

¹ The "West Monastery". HOGART (Mem. ASC. II, p. 6) supposes this building to be the unexcavated ruins adjoining the remains of the Ālāhama-pariveṇa on the west.

² There can be no doubt that what is meant is the so-called Galvehera. The front of a rock rising about 30 ft. above the surrounding region is polished. It stretches from SW. to NE. gradually sloping away on either side. The rock is about 16 chains (roughly 320 m.) distant from the Great Thūpa situated farther north. Hewn out of the rock wall just about its centre, is a grotto, 26 ft. wide, 12 ft. 9 in. deep and 9 ft. 9 in. in height. The massive rock above the cave is still some 12 to 13 ft. thick. This rock ceiling is supported on two pillars on the front side of the cave. In the background of the cave there is an image of the Buddha sitting on a throne. This cave is the Vijjādhara-guhā of our passage. To the left of it from the spectator's point of view, there is the figure of a sitting Buddha 15 ft. high, hewn out of the solid rock. To the right, also hewn out of the solid rock, there is a colossal figure of a recumbent Buddha about 49 ft. long, at its head the upright figure of Ānanda grieving over his dying master. It is probable that both the statues of the sitting and of the recumbent Buddha were originally contained in a grotto or niche made of rock and brickwork. These were the nisinnapaṭimalena and the nirānnapaṭimāguhā. These figures now stand uncovered in the open air. For the whole matter cf. H. C. P. BELL, Rep. ASC. 1907 (= V. 1911), p. 7 ff.

³ The "Great stūpa" evidently borrowed its name from the Mahā-thūpa (Ruvanveli Dagoba) in Anurādhapura. In its present state it is

77 Damiḷas who had been brought hither after the conquest of the Paṇḍu kingdom. It had a circumference of one thousand three hundred cubits¹ and was the largest of all thūpas, like to 78 a second Kelāsa², and (built) without the miraculous power of arahants and without the miraculous power of the gods, alone by kingly miraculous power.

79 Also he had built in the suburb called Rājavesibhujāṅga the Isipatana-vihāra³ which was a delight for the ascetics.
80 There (there was) one relic shrine and three three-storeyed image houses with costly images and resplendent with brightly
81 coloured painting, further a two-storeyed pāsāda whose ornaments called forth delight, two long pāsādas and four gate-
82 buildings, eight small pāsādas, a sermon house, a cloister as 83 well as eight fire-houses and six privies, a fine bathing-house wholly of stone, a boundary wall and a garden which belonged to the bhikkhu community.

84 Furthermore in the suburb of Sihapura the Ruler (gifted)
85 with a lion's courage had the Kusinārū-vihāra erected. There (there was) a relic shrine, three image houses of three storeys, 86 six long pāsādas, a sermon hall, a cloister, sixteen small pāsādas, three gate-buildings, eleven privies and six fire-houses.
87 In the suburb called Vijita King Parakkamabāhu also a great heap of ruins overgrown with jungle, looking like a natural hill over which run the paths of the wild elephant. The name of Damiḷathūpa has been preserved to the present day in the name Demaḷamahaseya which is however, erroneously given to another building (see note to v. 87).

¹ P. ratana = hattha = roughly 18 inches (according to FLUET, JRAS. 1912, p. 237). The circumference was therefore roughly 1950 ft. The circumference of the Mahāthūpa in Anurādhapura is 929 ft. (PARKER, Ancient Ceylon, p. 286, 306), that of the Abhayagiri 1115 ft.

² See note to 68. 41.

³ For the three suburbs and their monasteries cf. the earlier account in 73. 151-5. It does not quite agree with ours. If we follow it, the monasteries would be distributed thus: Rājavesibhujāṅga: Vejavana—Rājakulantaka (= Sihapura): Isipatana—Vijita: Kusinārū, so far as importance can be attached to the order in which they are given.

built the Veļuvana-vihāra¹. Therein (there were) three three- 88 storeyed image houses with beautiful images, gleaming with brightly coloured paintings, a thūpa and a cloister, a two- 89 storeyed pāsāda, four gate-buildings, four long pāsādas and eight small pāsādas, one refectory and one sermon hall, further 90 seven fire-houses and twelve privies. Gāvuta on gāvuta² (along 91 the road) the Ruler of men had vihāras³ erected, furnished with charming image temples, with gate-buildings, outer walls and sermon halls. For such bhikkhus as loved solitude 92 and had taken upon them the whole of the duties of the ascetic, he had the Kapila-vihāra built as a good abode.
There (there was) a costly two-storeyed pāsāda, four long 93 cloisters and four long two-storeyed pāsādas, further a dwelling- 94 house of brick with diverse coloured painting and adorned with turrets, built in honour of the sage Kapila, four small 95 pāsādas and three privies. Also these vihāras he dedicated along with the (necessary) articles of use to the bhikkhus.

Now in order to rebuild the vihāras in Anurādhapura 96
formerly destroyed by the Damiļas and which many kings had not restored because it was so difficult, he sent an official 97 and completed the three thūpas aforetime destroyed by the Damiļas, the Ratanavāluka-thūpa⁴ one hundred and twenty

¹ Some distance to the north of the Great thūpa there lies an image temple similar in plan to the Thūpārūma and the Laṅkātilaka, famous for the fresco paintings on its inner walls. I was told there that the priests frequently called this temple the Veļuvana. If one could trust this tradition we should have a clue to the position of the Vijita suburb. See however, A. M. HOGART's objections, Mem. ASC. II. 1926, p. 6. He calls the structure "the Northern Temple". The popular name of the building is Demaļamahaseya which however originally must have belonged to the Mahāthūpa or Damiļathūpa. I am also inclined to regard the Poṭṭul-vihāra situated to the south of the city, as one of the suburb monasteries of Puļatthinagara. According to an inscription discovered there (WICKREMASINGHE, EZ. II. 238 ff.) it was originally built by Parakkamabāhu, and it would be curious if such an important structure were not to be mentioned at all in the Mhvs. Cf. on the subject H. C. P. Bull., Rep. ASC. 1906 = XX. 1910, p. 14 ff.

² Cf. for this 78. 154 f. and note.

⁴ = Mahāthūpa. Cf. note to 78. 104. There are four thūpas mention-

98 cubits high, the Jetavana-thūpa one hundred and forty cubits high, the Abhayagiri-thūpa one hundred and sixty cubits high, 99 as well as the great Maricavaṭṭi-thūpa¹ eighty cubits high. These 100 were (all) overgrown with great trees, bears and panthers dwelt there and the ground of the jungle scarce offered a 101 foothold by reason of the heaps of bricks and earth. After having the forest hewn down and (the thūpas) built in the proper fashion, and faced with stucco, he also cleared the courtyard of the cetiya.

102 The Lohapāsāda destroyed by the Coḷas — which measured in every direction one hundred cubits², one hundred in length and breadth³ and as much in height, which was adorned with 103 many hundreds of apartments, with fine turrets and with rows of cells⁴ and which had several storeys, whose embellishment 104 called forth admiration — the Ruler of men restored by raising 105 again its thousand and six hundred pillars⁵. Sixty large pāsādas (like) the one named Sepaṇṇipuppha, as also the 106 destroyed pāsāda called Mahindasena he had renewed, also boundary walls and numbers of pariveṇas, and after erecting a house for alms he celebrated a great festival for the offering 107 of alms. In the ancient pariveṇas, the Thūpārāma and others, he saw to the restoration of whatever was decayed or had

ed in the text, not three, and it looks as if the Maricavaṭṭi had been added later.

¹ Taking the four stūpas in the order of their size (cf. above note to v. 77) we have for the Abhayagiri 240 ft., for the Jetavana 210 ft., for the Mahāthūpa 180 ft. and for the Maricavaṭṭi 120 ft. According to SMITH, Architectural Remains of Anurādhapura, p. 52, 47, 27 in his time the height of the three first thūpas lying in ruins was: 1) Abhayagiri (wrongly called Jetavana by Sm.) 245 ft., 2) Jetavana (by Sm. Abhayagiri) 232 ft., 3) Ruvanveli (= Mahāthūpa) 198 ft. The Maricavaṭṭi-thūpa measured then (p. 20) over 80 ft. It is now restored.

² = 150 ft. The surface area of the Lohapāsāda is in reality rather more than 231 × 232 ft. as is proved by the pillars still standing in the basement. P. M. Bunnows, The Buried Cities of Ceylon, p. 29.

³ So I understand hatthasatārukaṇi in contrast to uccato tattakam.

⁴ P. sāpaṇḍjara "lion's cage". The cells of the Baddhasīmā-pāsāda are also called paṇḍjara in v. 55.

⁵ That is in fact the number of the foundation pillars still standing.

fallen in. On the Cetiyaḡiri¹ he had sixty-four thūpas rebuilt 108 and had restored on the old buildings whatever was decayed or had fallen in.

What sensible man when he has thus realised that the 109 pure-minded, even if they live in the greatest happiness, find their supremest bliss in meritorious works — would grow weary in the works of virtue which procure every happiness in the world?

Here ends the seventy-eighth chapter, called «The Building of Vibāras», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

Chapter LXXIX

THE LAYING OUT OF GARDENS AND THE LIKE

- 1 As the King wished to make all articles (of food) needed by the townspeople easily attainable, he laid out gardens at 2 different places. He who was the delight of his subjects, laid out the garden called Nandana which was adorned with 3 hundreds of trees bearing fruit and blossom. The King planted coco palms, mango and bread-fruit trees, areka and Palmyra 4 palms and other trees, a hundred thousand of each kind and laid out in this way with great pains a large garden destined for the community, which because the name was appropriate, 5 was known generally as the Lakkhuyyāna. For the bathing of the bhikkhus in the hot season he had two charming ponds 6 made there beneath hollow rocks. The Monarch also laid out the Dīpuyyāna¹ resplendent in beauty which was to be glorified 7 by his own continual presence during the day; further the Mahāmeghavanuyyāna, the Cīttalatāvana, the garden called 8 Missaka and that called Rājjanārīyaya; the garden called Laṅkātilaka and the garden called Tilokanandana, that called Vā-9 narākara and that called Nayanussava; the garden Manohara by name and the Nimmitapura, the Jaṅghābhāra and the 10 Puṇṇavaddhana by name; the garden of the name of Saṃ-sārāphala and that called Phārusaka, that called Sālipota and 11 that called Somanātha; the Thānakoṅkaṇa and the Uttarakuru by name, that called Bharukaccha and that called Pulacceri; 12 the gardens called Kiḷākara, Paṇḍavāvana and Rāmissara, as well as the Sāmisarptosuyyāna, the Cintāmaṇuyyāna and the

In Rājaraṭṭha the King had ninety-nine new thūpas built 13 in many villages and market towns. On seventy-three relic 14 shrines the Ruler had what was decayed or fallen in repaired and the coating renewed. He restored six thousand 15 one hundred decayed image houses and built three hundred new image houses. He had four hundred and seventy-six 16 divers kinds of images made and ninety-one Bodhi Trees planted. For the community hailing from the four regions of the 17 heavens he had built as an abode for them when coming and going two hundred and thirty dwellings. He erected fifty-six 18 sermon halls, nine cloisters, as well as one hundred and forty-four gate-buildings; one hundred and ninety-two chapels with 19 altars for flowers, sixty-seven outer walls and thirteen temples for the gods¹. For the bhikkhus coming from foreign lands 20 he had twelve parks (laid out) and two hundred and thirty rest-houses² built. Further the Ruler saw to the restoration 21 of twenty-nine sermon halls, thirty-one grottoes and five parks; 22 likewise of fifty-one rest-houses and of seventy-nine decayed temples to the gods.

To put away the sufferings of famine from living creatures 23 that most excellent of men had many tanks and canals made in divers places. By damming up the Kāragaṅgā by a great 24 barrier between the hills³ and bringing its mighty flood of waters hither by means of a vast canal called the Ākāsagaṅgā⁴, 25 the Ruler created that king of reservoirs continually filled with water and known by the name of Parakkamasamudda⁵ 26

² P. āgantukasālā "house (or hut) for strangers".

³ So I understand mahatā girisetunā. W's translation "stone wall" I consider inadmissible, since "giri" is always "mountain" never "stone".

⁴ Skr. Ākāśagaṅgā, name of the Ganges river which is conceived as flowing in space until it descends to earth.

⁵ The Parakkamasamudda mentioned here is different from the reservoir of the same name named in 68. 40. This as we saw (note to the passage) is situated in Dakkhinadesa and was formerly known as Paṇḍavāpi the corresponding name for which is now Pandaveva. The Parakkamasamudda of 79. 26, which belongs to the river system of the in which there was an island resplendent with a superb royal 27 palace and which was like to a second ocean. He also built the great tank Parakkamataḷāka with a sluice¹ of a hundred 28 cubits², and which was made fast³ by stone construction. Further the Ruler of men built the Mahindaḷāka⁴ and the Ekāhāvāpi

Kāragāṅgā, is described in more detail in v. 40 ff. A canal starting from it waters the Mahūmegha park. In 79. 7 this park is named immediately after the Dīpuyyāna in Pulatthinagara among the parks laid out by Parakkamabāhu I. A sluice of the reservoir was situated according to v. 45 near the Caṇḍī gate. This name appears in 78. 161 among the gates of Pulatthinagara. One must therefore look for the Parakkamasamudda of 79. 26 at Polonnaruwa and it is evidently identical with the Topaveva. This was formerly far more extensive than now and was connected with the Dumbutuluveva situated farther south. See on the whole subject A. M. Hocart CJS. G. I, p. 161. In 79. 57 a Parakkamasūgara is mentioned. As it was also connected with the Kāragāṅgā, its name is probably merely a variant of Parakkamasamudda. But in v. 28 c Parakkamasūgara is mentioned along with the Parakkamasamudda and next to a Parakkamataḷāka. It is therefore possible that there were more than two reservoirs called after the King.

¹ That paṇḍāli means the sluice or the outflow from the tank is clear from v. 42, 43. The mātika, the water canals (called āla now in S.nh.) start from the paṇḍāli. In Skr. prayaḍāli or prayaḍāli means according to BR. a "drainage canal". The term paṇḍāli is explained by the construction of the sluices of the old tanks in Ceylon, as described by PARKER (Ancient Ceylon, p. 373 ff.). They consist of a walled culvert of about 2-4 ft. in breadth which runs across the whole dam, and is only slightly raised above the base of the dam. To this culvert there leads on the slightly sloping inner side of the dam a square shaft also walled in. This is called in Sinhalese disū-koṭuva. The shaft serves for regulating the wooden apparatus (p. āvaraṇa "lock", see v. 69 with note) by the raising and dropping of which the culvert is wholly or partially closed or opened and thus the outflow of the water regulated or completely shut off. The shaft with the lock thus divides the culvert into an inflow and an outflow channel.

² Therefore about 160 ft. The number can only apply to the length of the culvert.

³ P. dugga. I believe that here we must take the adjective in the meaning of "sure, fast" which has developed out of the meaning "difficult of access". In the same way the substantive dugga (originally "a place difficult of access") has become "a strong place", then a "fortress".

⁴ A Mahindaṭaṭa was already mentioned in 42. 29 as a work of tank, as well as the Parakkamasāgara whose flood-escape was walled up¹; also small tanks at different places a thousand 29 four hundred and seventy-one (in number). At three hundred 30 tanks the Monarch had as many stone sluices built. Ancient 31 tanks which had burst he again dammed up in great number: the great tank Maṇihīra, the Mahādāragallaka, the tank called 32 Suvannatissa and that called Dūratissa, the Kālavāpi tank and the one Brāhmaṇaggāma by name, the tanks called Nālikera- 33 mahāthamba, Rahera, Giritaṭṭaka and Kumbhīlasobbha; the 34 Kāṇavāpi, Padivāpi and the tank called Kaṭi, the Pattapāsāvāpi and the tank called Mahayya; the tanks with the names 35 Mahānāmamattbaka, Vajjhana, Mahādatta and Kāṇagāma; the tanks Vīra, Valāhassa and Suramāna and the tanks called 36 Pāsāṇagāma and Kālavalli; the tank by name Kāhalli and 37 that called Aṅgagāma, the Hillapattakakhaṇḍa and the Madagu².

Aggabodhi I. If the Mahindataṭṭaka is identical with this, it can only have been a restoration.

¹ P. koṭṭhabaddhanijjhara. By nijjhara (originally "waterfall") are meant the flood escapes or "waste-weirs" (PARKER l. l. p. 374) serving for the overflow of the water when the reservoir is too full. The weir of the Parakkamasāgara is walled in (koṭṭhabaddha). Note that in Skr. koṭṭhaka may also mean an encircling wall, and on the other hand that the corresponding Sinhalese word koṭura (see above v. 27 note) is also used in connection with waterworks. In Mhvs. 68. 16 Koṭṭhabaddha is the name of a causeway on the Jajjara-nadi.

² Of the tanks enumerated here six (Valāhassa, Mahādāragalla, Mahādatta, Kumbhīlasobbha, Pattapāsāva and Kāṇa) are mentioned in 60. 50 as having been restored by Vijayabāhu I. Cf. note to the passage. The Maṇihīra is the work of Mahāsena (Mhvs. 37. 47), likewise the Suvannatissa (WICKREMASINGHE, EZ. II. 28, called Rantisa in the Medirigiriya inscr.) and the Mahādāragalla (37. 47); the Dūratissa, one of Saddhātissa (Mhvs. 33. 9); the Giritaṭṭaka, one of Aggabodhi II. (42. 67; cf. note to 70. 312). Rahera is frequently mentioned now as locality, now as mountain apparently situated not far from Anurādhapura, (Mhvs. 21. 5; 41. 44; 44. 7), also as an irrigation canal (41. 31). Kāṇagāma was a place in Rohaṇa (45. 43) and Hillapattakakhaṇḍa is in 72. 41 the name of a ford of the Mahaveliganga. The remaining names occur only in this passage. Of these Padivāpi (v. 34) might be identical with the Padaviya tank in the north-east corner of the North Central Province, 40 miles from Anurādhapura. Cf. WICKREMASINGHE, EZ. I. 202.

38 These decayed tanks the Ruler had restored to their original state and in the same way four hundred and sixty-seven small 39 tanks which had been destroyed. In many tanks the King well aware of the right moment, had breaches (a total of) one thousand three hundred and ninety-five (in number) 40 dammed up so that they were firm again. The King also had a canal constructed, called Gambhīrā (the deep), which started at the flood-escape called Makara of the Parakkama-41 samudda. (He also constructed) the great canal by name Hemavati which branched off from the same (tank) in 42 the direction of the Mahāmeghavāna; in the same way
 the canal known by the name of Nīlavāhinī which started 43 from the sluice called Mālāṭīpuppā of the same (tank) and the canal Salaṭavati by name which branched off from the 44 Kīṭṭakaruyyāna sluice; further the great canal called Vettavati which took its start from the sluice known by the name of 45 Vettavati; the canal Tuṅgabaddā coming from the Dakkhiṇā sluice and the canal Maṅgalagaṅgā which branched off from the sluice called Maṅgala, as well as the canal called Campā 46 from the sluice near the Caṇḍī gate. (He built) also the Sarasvati (canal) which branched off from the Toyavāpi and led to Puppavaddhanavāpi and the Veṇumatī (canal) from its 47 western side; further the (canal) Yamunā which branched off from the Puppavaddhana tank to the west and the Sarabhū 48 (canal) which ran northwards; also the canal called Candabhāgā which flowed through the centre of the Lakkhuyyāna, and the Nammadā (canal) which branched off in the domain of the 49 Jetavana-vihāra; further the canal named Neraṇjarā which flowed from that tank in a northerly direction, and, the 50 Bhagīrathī, which started from the Anotatta tank; as also the (canal) called Āvattagaṅgā which branched off from there to the south and the Tambapaṇṇī (canal) which flowed from 51 the Ambāla tank towards the north; the Aciravati (canal) which ran westwards from the Mahāvālukaṅgā, fitted for 52 many a long year to prevent famine, and the Gomatī (canal) which branching off from there flowed eastwards, and the 53 Mālāpaharapī (canal) running northwards; also the canals flowing eastwards from the Aciravatī: the Sataruddhā, Nibbindā, Dhavalā and Sīdā; further the Kālindī canal which flowed 54 in a southerly direction from the southern overflow of the vast Maṇihīra tank; as also the canal called Kāverī which 55 flowed from the Giritaḷāka tank to the Kaddūravaḍḍhamāna tank, and the Somavatī canal running from the Kaddūra- 56 vaḍḍhamāna tank to the Arimaddavijayaggāma (tank). The 57 Monarch also constructed the Godāvarī canal which branched off from the Kāragaṅgā and flowed to the Parakkamasāgara.¹ (Lastly) the Prince had the ruined canal called Jayagaṅgā² 58 restored. It branched off from the Kālavāpi and flowed to Anurādhapura. Five hundred and thirty-four small canals he 59 had constructed and three thousand three hundred which had been destroyed he restored to what they had been before. In 60 the province of the Yuvarāja (Dakkhiṇadesa) the discerning Sovereign had numerous works of various kinds constructed at numbers of places. On the site of the house where he was 61

¹ The names mentioned in vv. 40—57 show how strong was the tendency to call new buildings and the like after ancient and sacred places. Mahāmeghavāna and Jetavana are of course called respectively after the park and the monastery in Anurādhapura. Hemnavatī is the skr. Haimavati, a name of the Ganges. Sarasvatī and Yamunā are well-known rivers in Northern India. Vetravatī is a tributary of the Yamunā, now called Betwa. Kālindī (v. 54) is a frequent name for the Yamunā (see BR. s. v.). Nammadā is the skr. Narmadā, now the Nerbudda whose valley bounds the Vindhya mountains in the south. Toṅgabhadra is the name of a river in the Dekkan, likewise Kāverī, Godāvarī and quite in the south in Tinneveli, the Tāmraparṇī. The Bhagīrathī (v. 49) is the name of one of the sources of the Ganges, and the Gomatī is a left tributary of the same stream. The Aciravatī is so named after a river which flows past Sāvasthī = skr. Śrāvastī, now the Raptī. The Nerañjarā is called after the river at the sacred place where Buddha received Enlightenment (Освещеніе, Buddha, p. 129). Campū (v. 45) is the name of an old Indian town in Aṅga near the present Bhagalpur in Bengal. Candrabhāgā, Āvartakā, Veṇumatī are Indian river names (BR. s. v.). Nibbindā (v. 53) corresponds perhaps to the Nirvindhya named in Meghadūta 28. Anotatta (v. 49) which was situated in the country of the mythical Uttarakuru was made sacred according to Vin. I. 28² by a visit of the Buddha.

² Now Yodi Ela.

born in Puṅkhagāma¹ he erected the Sūtigghara-cetiya one 62 hundred and twenty cubits high. He had twenty-two relic shrines erected, thirty-seven Bodhi Trees (planted), one hundred 63 image houses, fifteen caves, twenty-one dwellings for the community in the four regions of the heavens and eighty-64 seven rest-houses for strangers. He put up chapels with altars for flowers, twenty-nine in number, seven sermon halls as well 65 as five outer walls and forty-three images of divers kinds.
 66 He restored twenty-four ruined image houses. The Mahāgallaka tank² and the Tālaggallaka tank, the Rājini weir³, the weir 67 called Telapakka, the weir on the Jajjarā⁴ and the Vilattākhaṇḍa
 (weir) the Monarch made fast for the flourishing of the harvest
 68 in the land. Three hundred and fifty-eight damaged places 69 in tanks and the stone sluices on thirteen tanks as well as one hundred and sixty locks⁵ and small tanks which were damaged, thirty-seven in number — these the Monarch had repaired.

70 Also in the province of Rohaṇa the King who had delight in meritorious works, had divers buildings erected in villages 71 and market towns. On the site of his mother's pyre in Khīra-gāma⁶ the Monarch (erected) the Ratanāvali-cetiya, one hundred 72 and twenty cubits⁷ in height. Further (he founded) sixteen

¹ See note to 61. 26. The height of the tope was roughly 180 ft.

² Cf. Mhvs. 68. 34 and 43.

³ P. nijjhara. See note to v. 28. What is here called nijjhara is probably the same as vāri(sam)pāta Mhvs. 48. 148; 68. 35, 37.

⁵ P. ācarape. I believe this is meant for the shafts and the apparatus for regulating the outflow of the water at the sluices (see note 1 to v. 27).

⁶ See note to 74. 163.

relic shrines, seven Bodhi Trees and also vast Bodhi temples and seventy Bodhi Tree terraces¹ and two-storeyed image houses forty-three in number, two sermon halls and seventy-five images, thirty-seven dwellings for the community from the four regions of the heavens, forty-seven outer walls and twenty gate-buildings; also fifty-nine rest-houses for guests, four parks and three statues of the Metteyya. After the Sovereign had then built five dancing-halls, he had everything here and there which was broken down and decayed restored. Thirty-seven thūpas, twenty-two Bodhi Tree terraces, two hundred and seventy-four large image houses, one relic temple, seven temples for images in recumbent posture, forty caves and four brick houses; four long pāsādas, and six three-storeyed pāsādas, twenty-nine sermon halls and three cloisters, one hundred and twenty-six dwelling-houses, one hundred and twenty-eight houses for books and four rest-houses for guests, twenty-four temples to the gods, one hundred and three tower-gates, one hundred and twenty-six outer walls these all the Sovereign had restored. The Ruler also made fast two hundred and sixteen leaking tanks belonging to the community, like the great Uruvelā tank and the Paṇḍukolamba tank and others, further eighteen decayed sluice locks and two hundred and five ruined small tanks. On ten tanks he repaired the stone sluices and here and there he had forty-four canals dug².

By constructing in this way beautiful vihāras, gardens, tanks and the like he adorned with these numerous (works) the whole of Laṅkā.

Thus Parakkamabāhu, the Ruler of men, by whom were performed divers and numerous kinds of meritorious works, who continually found the highest satisfaction in the teaching of the Master, who was endowed with extraordinary energy and discernment, carried on the government for thirty-three years¹.

Here ends the seventy-ninth chapter, called «The Laying out of Gardens and the Like», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

CHAPTER LXXX

THE SIXTEEN KINGS

Thereupon the sister's son of this Great king, the wise 1
 poet sovereign King Vijayabāhu¹, became monarch in Laṅkā. 2
 When he had received consecration as king the prudent one 2
 in his great mercy released from their misery those dwellers in Laṅkā whom his uncle, the Sovereign Parakkama, had 3 thrown into prison and tortured with stripes or with fetters.
 By restoring at different places to various people their village 4 or their field he increased the joyfulness² of them all. As 5

¹ In Polonnarava there is an inscription of Vijayabāhu II. which supplements the account of our chronicle (WICKREMASINGHE EZ. II. 179 ff.). In it he also describes himself as sister's son of Parakkamabāhu. We know three sisters of this king, but I doubt if any of these three was the mother of Vijayabāhu II. WICKREMASINGHE thinks she was Bhaddavati, the wife of Gajabāhu, who would in fact be the most likely. But in 70. 333 (cf below note to v. 31) we have the distinct statement that Gajabāhu had no son. This is not easy to get over. I am inclined to think that there was a fourth unnamed sister of Parakkamabāhu's married to a Kalinga prince. Then it would be intelligible (cf. below, note to v. 18) that Vijayabāhu, the son of this prince and of a sister of Parakkamabāhu, should in his turn, appoint a Kalinga prince as his successor, and that the latter should describe him as head of the clan. The inscription relates further that Vijayabāhu was in Sinhapura, the capital of Kalinga, when Parakkama summoned him to Laṅkā. Parakkama's relations with the Kalinga dynasty are intelligible. He had himself Kalinga blood in his veins through his grandmother Tilokasundari whom Vijayabāhu I. fetched from this dynasty to secure the continuance of his house (Mhvs. 59. 29 ff.).

² Vv. 3 and 4 show Parakkamabāhu in a curious light. According to this account, he was a severe if not cruel ruler, who made his subjects slave that he might gratify his love of splendour. Vijayabāhu II. grants an amnesty at his accession.

- Alakā for (the god) Kubera and Amarāvati for Sakka, so was 6 Pulatthinagara for him the royal city. He himself composed in the Māgadha tongue a most excellent letter, sent it to the 7 monarch living in Arimaddana¹, concluded with this beloved (prince) a friendly treaty as aforetime his great grandfather 8 Vijayabāhu², and (being) highly famed, to increase the joy of the bhikkhus in the land of Laṅkā and Arimaddana, he made 9 the Order of the Buddha lustrous. As the Ruler departed not from any precept of the political teaching of Manu, he rejoiced the people through the four heart-winning qualities.
 10 Endowed with kindness, purity and other virtues, he found his highest satisfaction in the triad of the jewels, Buddha and 11 the like. Of most excellent character he, ever joyous in spirit, 12 provided the bhikkhus with the four articles of use. Manifesting great exertion, he like a wise Bodhisatta, everywhere 13 in every way interested himself in all beings. Shunning the four wrongful paths³ he in his great insight, practised in the exercise of justice, towards good and evil favour and severity.
 14 Thus this Monarch respected by the laity and the Order, performing many meritorious works, carried on the government for one year⁴.
 15 Now after a traitor, Mahinda by name, of the Kuliṅga
 clan⁵, who had won as his spouse a cowherd's daughter, Di-

¹ The capital of Rāmañña (Lower Burma, Pegu). Cf. Mhvs. 76. 38. We see from this passage that the Māgadha tongue, that is Pāli, was the medium of international intercourse, in the same way as Latin in the Middle Ages.

² Vijayabāhu I. is called not quite correctly, the grandfather (pitā-maha) of Vijayabāhu II. For his relations with Rāmañña see Mhvs. 60. 5 ff.

³ See note to 37. 108.

⁵ W. translates "Mahinda of Kuliṅga" and gives a wrong colouring to the affair. The MSS. have Kuliṅgo and also the Col. Ed. The clan name of the Kuliṅga occurs already in Mhvs. 19. 2. Pājāv. calls the usurper Kilinkesā Mihindāpāyo (kesā is kesadhātu). Rājaraṭn. and

pani by name, had treacherously slain the Monarch, (he) the 16 deluded one without gaining the consent of the generals, of the warriors, of the indignant inhabitants of the country and 17 of the whole of the dignitaries, carried on in most evil fashion the government in Laṅkā for five days.

After his murder the Uparāja of King Vijayabāhu, born in 18 Kālīṅga, Kittinissaṅka by name¹, became king. After he had 19 received royal consecration he had built in superb Pulatthinagara a beautiful temple of stone for the Tooth Relic². He had the 20 lofty Ratanāvali-cetiya made firm and embellished the splendid Nik.-s. Kilinkesdā Mihinda, and Rājāv. merely Kilinkesdā. Pūjāv. and Rājāv. like the Mhva. give him a reign of just five days.

¹ King Nissaṅka Malla has left many and ample inscriptions. Ed. MÜLLER has edited 15 of them in the AIC (nr. 143 ff.) WICKERMASSINGHE 18 in all, EZ. (I. 121 ff., II. 70, 84, 91, 96, 98, 123, 125, 128, 130, 134, 137, 143, 146, 148, 153, 157, 165 ff.). Their contents are very similar. With regard to his descent we learn (for ex. in the famous Galpota inscription in Polonnaruwa, EZ. II. 98 ff.) that he was born in the Kālīṅga country in the town of Siphapura as son of the King Jayagopa and the Queen Pārvatī. The Great king of Laṅkā the Chief of the clan (kuḍa-jēṣa) — without doubt Vijayabāhu II. is meant — had summoned him thither to take over the government. He had been at first prince and viceroy and had then ascended the throne in virtue of the law of succession. This right is frequently stressed in the inscriptions and justified by his descent from Vijaya, the first king of Laṅkā. Without doubt this right was much disputed and it looks as if the bombastic style of Nissaṅka Malla's inscriptions had the object of increasing the prestige of the new Kālīṅga dynasty in Ceylon.

² In the inscriptions (for ex. Galpota-I., C, line 1) and the Heṭa-dā-gū portico inscr., I. 19; EZ. II. 89 and 119) Nissaṅka Malla claims to have built the daḷudā-geya, which was named after him, as well as the vaṭa-geya. This last is evidently the so-called Vaṭa-dā-gū on the Quadrangle which was, however, in reality, a work of Parakkamabāhu I. and probably only restored by Nissaṅka Malla. See note to 78. 41. What the daḷudā-geya was and where it was situated is not certain. One is inclined to think first of the Heṭa-dā-gū situated opposite the Vaṭa-dā-gū. That is according to the inscriptions on the building itself, apparently a work of Nissaṅka Malla. But in spite of its traditional title, it was probably not a dā-gē, a "relic shrine" but an "image house". Cf. the note to 78. 39. As dā-gē the Sat-mahal-pāsāda might merit consideration, unless this is a work of Parakkamabāhu I. (note to 78. 42).

- 21 structure with a golden point¹. After building the vihāra² adorned with a hundred pāsādas which bore his name, he made it over to the bhikkhu community and supported it.
 22 The Jambukola-vihāra resplendent with walls and pillars shimmering in gold and silver, where the floor was of red 23 lead and the bricks of the roof were of gold, the wise (Monarch) had rebuilt and placed therein seventy-three golden statues of 24 the Master³. With the four-membered army the Ruler full of pious devotion, went forth to the Samantakūṭa and performed 25 there his devotions⁴, and everywhere on the island of Tamba-paṇṇī⁵ he had flower gardens and fruit gardens and numbers 26 of houses for the community laid down⁶. While in this way

¹ The tope is therefore called even to-day the Rankot-Dāgoba "Golden point dagoba". It has nothing, however, to do with the Mahāthūpa in Polonnaruwa with which it is associated in the index to my edition. The Rankot lies to the south of the Ālābana-pariveṣa. The height is given in the Galpota inscription C, line 2 as 80 cubits (= 120 ft.). The Rankot-Dāgoba Gal-āsana inscr. (EZ. II. 184 ff.), belongs to the time at which that Dāgoba was built. The expression baṇḍāpeti "has made fast or firm" is, as a rule, employed of the restoration of old buildings.

² Not yet identified.

³ The famous cave temples of Dambul are situated about 47 miles north of Kandy on the road to Anurādhapura. There is an inscription on the rock wall there of Nissanka Malla (WICKREMASINGHE, EZ. I. 121 ff.) in which at the end, he boasts of having constructed or embellished these caves and of having given them the name of Suvarṇagiriguhā. The 73 statues set up by the king are also mentioned in the Prītidānaka-maṇḍapa inscr. line 30 (EZ. II. 173).

⁴ The inscriptions mention repeatedly the journeys of the King to the sacred places of the Island. Adam's Peak (Samantakūṭa = Sinh. Samanaḷa) is expressly mentioned in the inscription on the vestibule wall of the Heṭa-dā-gū (I. 3 EZ. II. 94).

⁵ The ancient name for Ceylon, originally of that part in particular where Vijaya landed. See Mhva. 6. 47, 7. 38 f., 41.

⁶ In the inscriptions the King also boasts repeatedly of successful campaigns against the Coḷas, Pāṇḍyas and other peoples in Southern India. It is almost impossible to disentangle the historical facts from the exaggerations. In the kingdom itself he claims to have increased the prosperity of the people by lightening taxation, by the laying out of gardens and tanks and by a generous giving of alms. He claims also to have reformed the Church. The mention of the fixing of the day by day the Ruler accumulated many a merit, he carried on the government for nine years¹ in most excellent fashion.

His son, the King known by the name of Virabāhu², 27 hereupon ruled for one night and then fell into the power of death.

Thereupon the younger brother of that same king Kitti- 28 nissaṅka, King Vikkamabāhu³, enjoyed the royal dignity for three months. He was slain by the Ruler Coḍagaṅga, 29 a sister's son of King Nissaṅka, who carried on the government for nine months⁴. Thereupon the powerful general Kittī had 30 the eyes of this king put out, deposed him and had the government carried on for three years without mishap⁵ by 31 Līlāvatī, the first maheśī of the sovereign Parakkamabāhu.

gāvuta and of the setting up of milestones is interesting (Inscr. of the vestibule wall of the Heṭṭa-dā-gē, line 12; EZ. II. 94). Mr. H.W. Codrington has actually discovered a number of such gāvuta stones with inscriptions (letter of 1-4-28). They stand along the ancient high road (Mahāgūma-Kataragama-Buttala-Medagama-Bibile-(Mahiyāṅgaṇa).

¹ The same number in Pājāv. and Rājāv. These and the Rājaraṭn. ascribe the same merit to Nissaṅka Malla as the Mhvs. The Sinhalese chronicles distinguish like the inscriptions, between the temple of the Tooth Relic and the circular building. The number of the statues set up in the Dambul-vihāra is given in the Pājāv. as 72, in the Rājaraṭn. as 63.

² In the Galpota inscr. B, line 1-2 (EZ. II. 111) he is called the son of Nissaṅka Malla. Pājāv. also mentions that his reign only lasted one night.

³ Mentioned in the inscr. of the vestibule wall of the Heṭṭa-dā-gē line 13-14 as āpā "prince". Pājāv. and Rājāv. give him the same length of reign as the Mhvs.

⁵ Pājāv. like the Mhvs., Rājaraṭn. and Nik.-s. enumerates only the names Virabāhu, Vikkamabāhu, Coḍagaṅga, Līlāvatī without other details. Līlāvatī was the daughter of Sirivallabha and Sugala. Coḍagaṅga (in the form of Coḍagaṅga) and Vikkamabāhu (Vikkantabāhu) are named as princes (rājaputtā) who lived at the court of Gajabāhu (70. 238), but were not his sons (cf. 70. 333).

32 Thereupon King Sāhasamalla of the race of Okkāka, a lion in courage, carried on the government for two years¹.
 33 Then having deposed this Monarch, the general Āyasmanta², a man of almost unsurpassable courage, a supporter of his 34 royal family, prudently had the government carried on with wise policy for six months by Kalyāṇavatī, the first mahesī 35 of Kittinissaṅka³. This Queen Kalyāṇavatī, who was devoted to the Order of the Master, had a vihāra called after her, 36 built in the village Paṇṇasūlaka by name, for love of the village, and assigned it villages, fields, articles of use, slaves, 37 gardens and so forth. With her consent, the general Āyasmanta, who administered the government in all Laṅkā, who came of 38 the Khandbhāvara family, sent the Adhikārin Deva to charming Valliggāma, had a vihāra erected there⁴ and assigned to the 39 Great community. He built the pariveṇa known by his name
 40 of Sarājakulavaḍḍhana⁵ and caring for its support, he assigned

¹ Pūjāv. the same. In Rājāv. there is only mention of a king of the Okkāka family (without the name) who reigned 9 years. There is an inscription of Sāhasamalla in Polonnaruwa with the exact date of his coming to the throne in the Buddha era (WICKREMasinghe, EZ. II. 219 ff.), according to which FLEET has calculated the event as occurring on Wednesday, the 23rd of August, 1200 A. D. (FLEET, JRAS. 1909, p. 327, 331). This is the first absolutely certain date in the history of Ceylon. See E. HULTSCH, JRAS. 1913, p. 518; WICKREMasinghe, EZ. I. 123, note 4; II. 220; H. W. CODRINGTON, HC., p. 67. 75.

² Pūjāv. and Rājāv. call him Elaḷu Ābō Senevirat. This is the same general who appears in inscriptions as Lak Vijayasingu Senevi Ābōnāvan Tāvurunāvan (EZ. II. 112, line 15; 226, l. 19). WICKREMasinghe EZ. II. 191 shows that probably Āyasmanta is the same as the Kittī mentioned in v. 30 who calls himself in an inscription Lag Vijayasingu Kit Seniviyan and describes himself as the minister of Līlāvatī (E. MÖLLER, AIC. Nr. 157).

³ Kalyāṇavatī is mentioned in inscriptions of Nissaṅka Malla (for ex. EZ. II. 94, line 13 and 111, l. 2) under the form Kalyāṇa. A short inscription of hers is also preserved in Bopitiya (EZ. II. 190 ff.) in which she calls herself Kalyāṇavatī. Pūjāv. and Rājāv. give her a reign of 6 years.

⁴ See 90. 96.

it villages and fields surrounded by parks and the like and which could scarcely be visited by a bad harvest, together with articles of use and slaves male and female. Having 41 scrupulously separated the four castes who had become impure through mixture, he bent on doing good, had a text book compiled which had law as its subject.

Thereupon there reigned for one year¹ a royal prince 42 Dhammāsoka by name, who on coming to the throne was aged three months. The Mahādīpāda Anikaṅga came at the 43 head of a great army from the Coḷa kingdom, slew the ruler in Pulatthinagara, Prince Dhammāsoka, together with the 44 general Āyasmanta and reigned seventeen days². But the 45 general, Vikkantacamūnakka, the villain, slew the Monarch Anikaṅga and had the government carried on for a year³ by 46 the first consort of King Parakkamabāhu, Līlāvati by name, who had already reigned before.

Now came King Lokissara by name, who had been 47 wounded in the shoulder by a spear, with a great Daṁḍa army from the opposite shore, brought the whole of Laṅkā 48 under his sway and reigned, dwelling in Pulatthinagara, nine months⁴. Hereupon the general Parakkama, the best among 49 men of decision, endowed with great power and courage, belonging to the family of the Kālanāgaras, consecrated the 50 Mahesī Līlāvati⁵ who came of the dynasty of the Sun and Moon, in the royal dignity, she who afterward shone in royal ¹ Pūjāv. the same. In Rājāv. it is expressly stated that it was Āyasmanta who raised the prince to the throne. The prince's age at his ascent of the throne is given as 5 months, the length of Āyasmanta's regency as 6 years.

² The same number in Pūjāv. and Rājāv.

³ In Pūjāv. and Rājāv. the general is called Manakkū Senevi. The length of the regency is given as one year.

⁴ Pūjāv. and Rājāv. 5 months.

⁵ Līlāvati thus enjoyed the royal dignity nominally at least three times (v. 30 f., 45 f., 49 f.). For inscriptions of this queen see EZ. I. 176 ff., II. 192 ff., 238 ff. The last named was found at Potgul-vehera in Polonnaruwa and says that the queen had this building restored. It was one of the foundations of Parakkamabāhu I. For the general Parakkama see Dāṭṭhavarṇsa v. 4.

51 splendour. When then a space of about seven months¹ had passed for the Maheśī, there landed with a great Paṇḍu army 52 from the Paṇḍu kingdom the glorious Paṇḍu King Parakkama, 53 deposed the Queen and her general Parakkama and after he had cleared Laṅkā from the briers (of revolt), he ruled the realm in superb Pulatthinagara for three years², without 54 transgressing the political precepts of Manu. But since in consequence of the enormously accumulated, various evil deeds 55 of the dwellers in Laṅkā, the devatās who were everywhere entrusted with the protection of Laṅkā, failed to carry out 56 this protection, there landed a man who held to a false creed, whose heart rejoiced in bad statesmanship, who was a forest fire for the burning down of bushes in the forest of the good, 57 — that is of generosity and the like — who was a sun whose action closed the rows of night lotus flowers — that is the good doctrine — and a moon for destroying the grace of the groups 58 of the day lotuses — that is of peace — (a man) by name Māgha, an unjust king sprung from the Kāliṅga line, in 59 whom reflection was fooled by his great delusion, landed as leader of four and twenty thousand warriors from the Kāliṅga 60 country and conquered the island of Laṅkā. The great scorching fire — King Māgha — commanded his countless flames of fire — his warriors — to harass the great forest — the 61 kingdom of Laṅkā³. While thus his great warriors oppressed the people, boasting cruelly everywhere: "We are Keraḷa 62 warriors", they tore from the people their garments, their ornaments and the like, corrupted the good morals of the 63 family which had been observed for ages, cut off hands and feet and the like (of the people), destroyed many houses and tied up cows, oxen and other (cattle) which they made their 64 own property. After they had put fetters on the wealthy and rich people and had tortured them and taken away all their possessions, they made poor people of them. They wreck- 65 ed the image houses, destroyed many cetiyas, ravaged the vibāras and maltreated the lay brethren. They flogged the 66 children, tormented the five (groups of the) comrades of the Order¹, made the people carry burdens and forced them to do heavy labour. Many books known and famous they tore 67 from their cord and strewed them hither and thither. The 68 beautiful, vast, proud cetiyas like the Ratanāvali(-cetiya)² and others which embodied as it were, the glory of former pious kings, they destroyed by overthrowing them and allowing 69 alas! many of the bodily relics, their souls³ as it were, to disappear. Thus the Damiḷa warriors in imitation of the 70 warriors of Māra, destroyed in the evil of their nature, the laity and the Order. Hereupon they completely invested 71 Pulatthinagara and captured Parakkama, that man of great might and valour. They put out the Monarch's eyes and 72 plundered all his treasures, pearls, jewels and so forth. Then 73

 the leaders of the soldiers with Mānābharaṇa at the head, consecrated the Kūliṅga Māgha to the glorious royal dignity of Laṅkā.

Now after the Ruler Māgha had in this manner taken 74 possession of the kingdom and attained the royal dignity, he dwelt in Pulatthinagara. The Monarch forced the people to 75 adopt a false faith and he brought great confusion into the four sharply divided castes⁴. Villages and fields, houses and 76 gardens, slaves, cattle, buffaloes and whatever else belonged to the Sihalas he had delivered up to the Keraḷas. The vibāras, the 77 parivepas and many sanctuaries he made over to one or other of his warriors as dwelling. The treasures which belonged to 78

the Buddha and were the property of the holy Order he seized and thus committed a number of sins in order to go to hell.

79 In this fashion committing deeds of violence, the Ruler Māgha held sway in Laṅkā for twenty-one years¹.

80 Thus in Laṅkā this and that ruler out of great lust for power, have slain this and that lord of men, but have themselves in consequence of these deeds, attained to no good old age, and even when they had achieved the kingly dignity, they could not alas! enjoy it for long. Hence the wise man should refrain from the destruction of living beings and renounce wanton lust for power.

Here ends the eightieth chapter, called «The Sixteen Kings», in the Mahāvārpa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

¹ The same in Pūjāv. According to Rājāv. 19 years. The description of Māgha's reign in both chronicles agrees entirely with that of the Mhvs. Rājaratn. and Nik.-s. continue their enumeration of the names (cf. note to 80. 31). In the first: Sāmagalla (read Sāhasamalla), Kalyāṇavati, Dharmāsoka, Nekaṅga, Ānilāvatī, Lokeśvara, Līlāvatī, Paṇḍita Parākramabāhu; in the second: Sāhasamalla, Kalyāṇavati, Dharmāsoka, Āniyaṅga Līlāvatī, Lokeśvara, Līlāvatī, Parākramapāṇḍi. Then there follows in Rājaratn. the account of the tyrannical reign of the Kālīṅga Megha. Nik.-s. has the form Māgha.

CHAPTER LXXXI

THE REIGN OF ONE KING

During this alien rule¹ several virtuous people had founded 1 on divers of the most inaccessible mountains a charming town
 (or) a village² and dwelling here and there protected the laity 2 and the Order so that they were in peace. On the summit of the Subha mountain³ hard to ascend by the foe, the Senāpati 3 Subha had founded a town, as Vessavaṇa the town Ālakamandā, and dwelling here and fending off the Keraḷa devils, he protected 4 the (surrounding) country and the Order. On the summit of the Govindamala⁴ hard to reach by the rebels, the Ādipāda 5 ruler Bhuvanekabāhu by name, whose courage was known to the world, had founded a town and by dwelling there, he 6 protected the province of Rohapa, the community of the bhikkhus and the Order⁵.

¹ P. rājantara (cf. 87. 46) formed like desantara. The translation "interregnum" is also permissible, since no lawful kings reigned.

² P. nagarani gāmaṇi. When in the sequel the buildings on the rocks are designated as nagarāni the reason is probably that larger settlements arose at the foot of the rock fortresses and under the protection of these. The word nagara is associated with the idea of a permanent stronghold.

³ Subhapabbata, now Yāpahu (= yakapācu = P. yasapabbata), an isolated rock like Sigiri, not far from Maho. Cf. H. C. P. Bell, ASC. 1910-11 = X. 1914, p. 52 ff.; 1911-12, p. 60 ff.; F. H. Monner, JRAS. C. B. XIII, nr. 44, 1893, p. 97 ff.

⁵ When bhikkhusaṅgha and sāsana are named together here, the first means the persons, the second the thing, that is the doctrine and the free practice of it in the Order.

- 7 In the same way again the general called Saṅkha founded in the district Maṇimekhala by name, on the lofty mountain 8 Gaṅgādopi a superb town and while dwelling there, gave as little heed to the infamous army of the Ruler Māgha, though 9 it was but two yojanas away, as to a blade of grass and protected without fear that district and the Order.
- 10 Now at that time there was a king known by the name of Vijayabāhu, belonging to the line of King Saṃghabodhi¹, a 11 man of splendid courage who after he had through fear of the foe withdrawn to divers inaccessible forests and had long dwelt there, attained the dignity of a king of the Vanni².
 12 The mighty one brought all the dignitaries of the Sihalas 13 under his influence, marched forth with a Sihala army and destroyed the whole of the four-membered forces of the foe which were armed for battle, as a mighty flame of fire³ 14 (destroys) the darkness. All the Damiḷa warriors who dwelt as they pleased in the single villages and houses he drove 15 forth. After he had freed superb Māyāratt̥ha⁴ from the briers
 (of the foe), the Ruler built on the lofty summit of the 16 Jambuddopi⁵ mountain a splendid town with fine walls and gate-towers, resided there in happiness and carried on the government as capable monarch.

² Here the tribe of the Vanni is mentioned for the first time. The name does not occur in the older Mahāvamsa nor in the Cūlavamsa of Dhammakitti. The Vannis live to-day, but a few hundred in number, in small villages on the northern frontier of the North-Central Province. They go in for agriculture and preferably for hunting. Their origin is unknown. The surrounding inhabitants call them Vedḍas as a rule, and the Census of 1921 evidently includes them among these. They themselves repudiate all connection with the Vedḍas on whom they look down with contempt. Cf. H. PARKER, The Vannias, The Taprobanian, Feb. 1887, p. 15 ff.; and Ancient Ceylon, p. 36 ff.

³ P. tejakkhandha, synonym for aggikkhandha.

⁵ Now Dambadeniya, about 18 miles south-west of Kurunegala. Cf. F. H. MORDEN, JRAS. C. B., XV, nr. 48, 1897, p. 23 ff.

And further: during these disturbed times all the Grand 17
 theras with Vācissara at the head, had carried away from Pulatthinagara the Almsbowl Relic and the Tooth Relic of the Master, had gone forth, had betaken themselves to 18 Māyūratt̥ha and there on the mountain Kotthumala in a safe 19 region had buried both the relics carefully in the earth and so preserved them¹. Now some of these Grand theras with 20 Vācissara at the head, who sought that protection for Lankā on which depended the continuance of the Order, had crossed 21
 the vast ocean, despite its raging waves, had betaken themselves to the lands of the Paṇḍus, Coḷas and other (peoples). Now 22 Vijayabāhu sending forth his great dignitaries, summoned all these theras who were a mine of mercy² back from there. When 23 the Grand theras arrived he greeted them with reverence and asked them: "Where are the two relics, the Tooth and the Almsbowl preserved"? At their answer, "In such and such a 24 place", the Monarch's whole body was filled with a fivefold joy³. Led by the crowd of the Grand theras, the Ruler set 25 forth with his army for the Kotthumalā mountain. After he 26 had performed a great sacrificial festival⁴ round about the mountain, he beheld there gazing with his whole soul⁵, the

¹ Pujāv., Rājāv. and Rājaratn. agree with the Cūlavamsa as regards the rescue of the two relics from Pulatthinagara and the bringing of them to Māyūratt̥ha. The chronicles call the mountain Kotmalaya. The thera Vācissara is not mentioned. In our passage khematt̥hānasmhi in v. 19 b must be understood as appositional addition to padesaṃkhi.

² Ye karuṇākara cannot refer to Vijayabāhu, but only to te mahāthere.

⁴ The King marches round the mountain with his attendants as a pilgrim walks round a holy place and has sacrificial ceremonies performed at the four cardinal points.

⁵ P. cakkhamano. W's translation "with great delight" is too weak. We have here a formation like hiṃsamano Dh. 390 (DhCo. IV. 148 = kodhamano) "whose intention was the eye, that is gazing".

27 two relics of the Tooth and of the Almsbowl. With a heart as full of joy as if he had found a jewel like the wheel and the rest¹ or a great treasure, or as if he had attained Nirvana, 28 the Sovereign took unto himself the two relics and blessed like Mandhātār², he bore them with great celebrations from 29 village to village, from town to town and brought them to the beautiful city of Jambuddopi where the pious people began 30 a great and splendid festival. Now while the wise King day by day celebrated a great sacrificial ceremony for the relics, 31 he thought thus: "In order that if in future time another interregnum³ occurs, no evil from alien enemies shall befall 32 these relics of the Sage, I will carefully provide for them a still 33 more inaccessible place, fast and sure." Thus pondering he had the Billasela⁴ (mountain) made fast on every side with walls, gate-34 towers and the like, that save by the gods in the air, it could not be trodden by any human foes. And on the summit of the rock he built a superb temple for the Tooth Relic, 35 ravishing as a divine palace descended from the world of the gods. Around this he laid out a park for the community with 36 divers pāsādas and maṇḍapas, delightful for taking an airing when passing the day or when passing the night therein, 37 provided with lakes and bathing-ponds. In this relic temple the wise (monarch) had the two relics, Tooth and Bowl, carefully 38 placed with great solemnity. After making over the park for the community to the faithful theras who were charged with

¹ P. cakkādiratanaya. This refers to the seven jewels which belong to the cakkavartin or world ruler (cf. CHILDERS, s. v. ratana); the first of these is cakka the wheel, as symbol of world dominion.

² See 37. 58 and note.

the care of the relics, he decreed a regular offering of alms. Also he commanded that a sacrificial ceremony of surpassing 39 kind should be performed for the relics day by day in most perfect fashion.

Now in his faith the Sovereign set about rendering helpful 40 service to the Order of the perfectly Enlightened One. If one asks how (this was done), the account runs thus: Deeply 41 grieved in his heart that on the island of Laṅkā so many books that dealt with the true doctrine had been destroyed by the alien foe, the Ruler called together laymen endowed 42 with a good memory and with knowledge, pious, well instructed, free from indolence and skilled in quick and fair writing, and 43 along with these, many other writers of books and made all these write down in careful fashion the eighty-four thousand divisions 44 of the doctrine and made over to them in accordance with the number of the divisions the like number of gold kaḥāpaṇas¹. 45 He also performed a sacrificial festival for the doctrine and thus heaped up a fulness of merit. The theras and the middle-aged 46 and young (bhikkhus) and also the sūmaṇḍas in Tisāhala² who had taken on themselves the burden of a life of discipline, all these protectors of the teaching of the Master he gathered 47 together and made harmony where there had been discord. And then the Monarch pondered thus: "The ceremony of 48 admission to the Order³ is the foundation of the prosperity of the Order. How would it be if I had it performed now in the right way?" And joyful at heart, he endowed the whole vast 49 reunited community richly with the eight articles of necessity⁴ and made them hold for seven days the ceremony of admission 50 to the Order which was preceded by offerings and honours

² This expression which refers to the threefold division of the Island into Paṭiṭṭhāraṇṭha, Māyāraṇṭha and Rohaṇa and which frequently recurs, is used here for the first time. Cf. note to 81. 15.

³ P. upasampaddā.

51 instituted by himself. After the Ruler had laid out the park known to the world by his name of Vijayasundara and destined 52 for the community¹, he made it over to them. In his charitableness the Ruler thought: "Bhikkhus and sāmaṇeras who 53 study the Tipiṭaka in faith and lead in every way the pious life that springs from it, must never be troubled about their 54 livelihood. They shall come to the gate of my house and receive whatever articles of use they are in need of." And he invited them full of reverence, and gave to the many 55 bhikkhus who came to the portals of his palace excellent and 56 costly offerings, well versed in giving. Then the King ordered further for all ascetics who had reached the rank of thera or 57 grand thera, regular maintenance². Thus in doing good to the Order the Monarch naturally honoured thereby the triad of the jewels — Buddha and the others.

58 In Vattalaḡāma³ the King had built for the bhikkhus in a perfect manner the vihāra called after his own name 59 Vijayabāhu. In the vihāra Kalyāṇī by name, the Ruler had the vast and splendid cetiya which had been destroyed by the 60 Damiḡa soldiers, made fast again and a golden finial put upon it,

¹ This monastery is also mentioned in Pūjāv. and Rājaratn. as a foundation of Vijayabāhu. In Mhva. 85. 90 it is called Sirivijayasundara. It was situated in Jambuddoṇi.

² In the Rājaratn. which is particularly concerned with Vijayabāhu the following strophe is quoted in praise of the generosity of the King.

Cātuddisāyātnajinatrajānaṃ
 āpānabhūtaṃ gharam āsi tassa yadicchitappaccayalābhahetu devaddumo vāsi mahānubbhāvo.

"For those sons of the Victor who came from the four regions of the heavens his house became the refuge, because there they received all articles of use as they wished. Like a heavenly tree was the sublime one". The "heavenly tree" is of course, the "wishing tree" (skr. kalpa-druma).

³ The building of the Vijayabāhu-vihāra is also related in Pūjāv., Rājāv. and Rājaratn. The village of Vattala lies on the right bank of the Kelaniganga, a little above its mouth. Thus it is not far from the Kelani-vihāra whose restoration is also mentioned in the Sinhalese chronicles.

as well as a gate-tower on its eastern side. There too he restored 61 whatever was decayed in the image houses, the encircling wall and the like and on all other (buildings). The King also gave 62 the order that all pū-āḍas, image-houses, vihāras, pariveṇas, and likewise cetiyas, maṇḍapas, outer walls, gate-towers 63 and the like which were in Māyāratṭha, should be put into the condition in which they were formerly, and that new buildings should be erected.

Now as the King wished to accomplish himself still more for 64
 the furtherance of the laity and of the Order, he reflected thus:
 "At a time when I had already reached a great age and 65 youth had vanished, I gained the good fortune of the royal dignity and have until now enjoyed it. Now after the destruction 66 of all the evil foes who still remain over after the conquest and thereby to protect my people and after renewing the 67 structures of the destroyed and decayed vihāras to bring about the furtherance of my people — for that I have now but a short time." With such considerations the discerning Monarch 68 together with those people versed in the lore of signs, tested the (bodily) signs of both of his own sons Parakkamabāhu 69 and Bhuvanekabāhu and attained this knowledge: "The signs on Parakkamabāhu are such that he will in accordance there- 70 with accomplish through the majesty of his power the destruction of the enemy and will unite all Laṅkā under one umbrella, so that none shall be above him; and that he will 71 further the spotless Order of the Omniscient one; will spread his fame over the chief and the intermediate regions of the heavens; will receive from the most divers countries gifts as princesses for 72 his women's apartments and the like, and will be for long a world ruler on the Island." When he realised this, with eyes 73 filled with tears of joy, he made him sit on his knee and kissed him on the head. Then he gazed again and again full of love 74 on the younger prince, who stood near, gave them twain much excellent advice, made them by training practised in all arts, 75 accomplishments and the like. Then the Ruler entrusted of 76 the twain his elder son to the assembled community at whose head stood the Grand master known by the name of Saṃ- 77

gharakkhita. And again he entrusted the same (thera) with the two relics, the Tooth and the Almsbowl of the Sage, 78 as also with the whole Great community and also with the people dwelling in Laṅkā and ruled this himself in perfect fashion¹.

79 After the Sovereign had in this manner sowed the royal seed in the wide field of Laṅkā, he entered heaven after a reign of four years².

80 Even as this Ruler of men, Vijayabāhu, protected the entire world of the laity and the Order of the Victor, so should all future rulers of Laṅkā protect both, bestowing on them security.

Here ends the eighty-first chapter, called «The Reign of One King», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

¹ The meaning is that the King made Saṃgharakkhita Head of the Church and entrusted him with the education of the heir to the throne. As head of the Order Saṃgharakkhita had to look after the spiritual welfare of the people over whom the King exercised secular dominion.

² According to Rājāv. the King had reigned 24 years. But according to v. 65 he only came to the throne at an advanced age.

CHAPTER LXXXII

THE EXHIBITION OF THE MIRACLE OF THE TOOTH RELIC

After the death of his father King Parakkamabāhu 1 united the whole of the people who were in Tisāhala, adorned 2 the fair town and as if he were the peer of the King of the gods, he first of all had the ceremony of the royal consecration performed. On account of his learning he himself received 3 the famous name of Kalikāla-sāhicca-sabbasāhupapāḍita¹. On 4 his younger brother Bhuvanekabāhu he conferred the dignity of yuvarāja and made over to him a part of the kingdom. With the thought: I will make the maiden Laṅkā my own, 5 to no other (shall she belong), he turned his proud spirit to the destruction of the alien foe. He thought: in the first 6 place I will perform a sacrificial festival for the Tooth Relic of the Sage, then will I go forth to war against the Damiḷas, and with great pomp and ceremony he brought 7 the Tooth Relic from the Billa mountain to the splendid town of Jambuddoṇi². "I have the desire at every moment when I 8 think of it to worship the Tooth Relic with devotion at the three periods of the day" — so thought the Ruler and had built 9 near his palace a fair and costly temple for the Tooth Relic. In the midst of this the King had a splendid throne set up 10 and decked with a costly covering. Out of a large precious 11

¹ That is "the scholar who is entirely familiar with the literature of the Kali Age". The expression sāhicca "art of poetry, literary work" = skr. sāhitya, was until now absent from the dictionaries. The Kali Age (kalikāla, kalīyuga) is the last of the four ages, the one in which we are living.

² Thus too Pūjāv. According to Rājāv., the king had brought the relic from Jambuddoṇi to Samiddhipura.

stone the Ruler had a casket fashioned for the Tooth Relic 12 and again as receptacle for this a large, superb, costly jewel-13 case of bright, valuable precious stones. Then for five thousand gold nikkhas¹ he had as receptacle for this case a second 14 splendid chest fashioned, and then again for twenty-five thousand 15 silver nikkhas a third chest. Now when the King starting with the relic temple, had adorned the town, and had devoutly 16 celebrated a great sacrificial ceremony for the Tooth Relic, he took the Tooth in the lotus of his hand² and spake in the midst of the Great community the following solemn declaration³: 17 "Our sublime Buddha, god of the gods, the Sage, strong in miraculous power visited this island of Laṅkā three times, 18 and that most supreme of men went away, having sojourned
 here and there and having made of sixteen prominent places 19 spots hallowed by his use⁴. Therefore it is that Laṅkā is not under the power of kings of a false faith, but under the power of kings of the true faith it flourishes in the right manner.
 20 Aforetime also on this island the Ruler of men by name
 Asela, son of the Ruler Muṭasīva, wise in statecraft, conquered
 21 the Damiḷas Sena and Guttaka who carried on horse-dealing⁵

¹ P. nikkha or nekkha = ved. niṣka, is a weight with which the precious metals are weighed. According to Abhp. 480, 888 it seems to be equal to 5 suvaṇṇas. This would agree with the Indian reckoning which makes one niṣka (= 1 pala = 4 or 5 suvarṇas) equal to 56.875 gr. The figures in our passage are certainly a fantastic exaggeration.

² A frequent rūpaka. Cf. Dapḍin 66 (note to 80. 60) pāṇipadma.

³ P. saccakriyaṇa akā. See note to 51. 56.

by sea, and held sway while sheltering the Order of the Victor. Then the famous Great king Duṭṭhagāmaṇī Abhaya 22 vanquished Eḷāra of the Coḷa country and protected the laity and the Order. Again the Monarch Vaṭṭagāmaṇī 23 vanquished in combat five very cruel Damiḷa princes and protected the laity and the Order. Then the Ruler of men, 24 Dhātusena, subdued six Damiḷa kings with their countless great warriors, and sheltered the laity and the Order. Again 25 the great Vijayabāhu put to flight in battle the Coḷiyas and the Damiḷas and protected the laity and the Order. Now I 26 too have the wish to vanquish the insolent Damiḷas who have destroyed viḥāras and other buildings and also the Order of the Master and still have their abode in Paṭiṭṭhāraṭṭha¹, 27 the twain, King Māgha and Jayabāhu², and to further the laity and the Order. That is a true word and yet more I say: 28 the highly virtuous, far-famed monarchs with the Kosala king 29 at the head, heard from the mouth of the Master while he lived, the preaching of the doctrine and saw many a miracle and their wishes were (thereby) fulfilled. Rulers mighty in 30 miraculous power like Dhammāsoka and the others who were born when the fully Enlightened One no longer lived, beheld 31 divers miracles like the figure of the perfectly Enlightened One³ produced (in miraculous manner) and the like, and made each his life thereby rich in fruit. But when the Guide of 32 the worlds, having fulfilled the task of a Buddha, in the region of the Mallas, outstretched on the couch of great

² It is clear that the reign of Vijayabāhu III. and the beginning of his son's reign fall within the 21 years assigned to Māgha in 80. 79. The usurper Jayabāhu has so far not been mentioned, both names are in the Pūjāv. however.

³ What is meant are miracles such as that described in Mhvs. 81. 96 ff. As Duṭṭhagāmaṇī is about to replace the relics in the Mahāthūpa the casket in which they are contained, rises in the air, opens of itself and the relics assume the form of the Buddha and perform the miracle which was performed by the Master under Gaṇḍa's mango tree in Sāvattihī. For the so-called yanakappāṭṭhāriya see DhCo. III. p. 206 ff.

33 Nirvana, came, as regards miracles, to the five great resolves¹, then assuredly the Exalted One came also to lesser resolves.
 34 From that day to this all the relics which exist, those of the body, as those associated with articles of use, perform through 35 the power of the Master. miracles here in this our world.
 When therefore the Guide of sages, coming to this and that 36 resolve, saw (in spirit) in the five thousand years' duration of his Order, the future monarchs who take upon themselves 37 the burden of faith and of moral discipline, then I think not that the Exalted One will not with the eye of omniscience have seen me also among them. But if I have been seen by 38 the Incomparable One², if even I have been added to the number of these great men and rulers of antiquity — loyal to 39 the faith in every respect — if I after destroying the alien foe in terrible war, may accomplish the furtherance of the laity 40 and the Order, then may the Tooth Relic now perhaps make manifest to me a fair miracle." After these words he became lost in contemplation.

41 At this moment the Tooth Relic rose from the lotus of his hand, like to the crescent moon, in the air, assumed the 42 glorious form of the Prince of the wise, diffused clusters of rays of light sixfold in hue, illumined the whole town, 43 manifested thus a glorious miracle, enraptured the Ruler of men, returned from the air and settled again on his hand.
 44 With the shouts of applause and the songs of praise of the great crowd of people and above all of the Great community 45 who rejoiced at the sight of the superb miracle of the relic, the whole town was at this time everywhere full of intense 46 excitement. "This day I have gained life, this day my life has become of worth; this day hurrah! my life has become 47 perfectly fruitful. Having by the power of my merit beheld to-day such a miracle and having also seen the blessing

¹ For the mahādhiṭṭhānapaṇcaka see Mhvs. 17. 46 ff. In vv. 51—52 the miracle mentioned in the preceding note is foretold here. The lesser resolves refer to other miracles not included in the five great resolves, such as that expected now by the king.

² P. tādivā "of him who is so as he is and no other".

of merit richly earned by the people¹, I now have been enrolled 48 among those earlier rulers of men, famed for the fulness of their virtues in this Order of the Sage." With these words 49 the Great king, great in insight and miraculous power, gave forth a lion's roar in the midst of the vast assembly.

After the Ruler with the whole of his sixty-four 50 ornaments², such as the diadem, the bracelet and so forth had made an offering to the Tooth Relic, he laid it carefully 51 in the jewel-casket and after placing this lustrous (casket) in the golden chest he again placed this carefully in the fair 52 and costly chest fashioned of silver.

The Tooth Relic thus preserved in the best way in three 53 chests one within the other, he then placed in his relic temple. For seven days long he celebrated with the (offering of the) seven kinds of precious articles³, with great wreaths and perfumes and with all kinds of food solid and liquid a great sacrificial festival.

Here ends the eighty-second chapter, called 'The Exhibition of the Miracle of the Tooth Relic', in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

² Cf. for this E. W. PERERA, Ceylon Notes and Queries, III. April 1914, p. XXXVI ff., where the enumeration of the regalia in the Sinhalese Thūpavamsa is discussed.

³ P. ratanehi sattahi. The seven ratanaṇi are: suraṇṇa (gold), rajata (silver), muttā (pearls), maṇi (precious stones like sapphire and ruby), veḷariya (a semi-precious stone (?) like cat's eye), vajira (diamond), paraḷa (coral). See CHILDERS, s. v.

CHAPTER LXXXIII

THE STORY OF THE SUBJUGATION OF THE HOSTILE KINGS

- 1 Since all the inhabitants of Laṅkā had seen the effect of the merits of the King, they lived from that time onward 2 filled with still greater reverence towards him, in fear, in joy and in love, never were they capable of transgressing his 3 commands. All the sovereigns of the divers countries sent the King gifts, since their hearts were inclined to admiration of his majesty.
- 4 People whose heads were to be cut off he punished only in stern fashion with dungeon and fetters¹ and then set them 5 free again. But for such people as deserved prison the Ruler to whom pity was the highest, ordained some lighter punishment² 6 or other, and reprimanded them. But on people who should have been banished from the country the Ruler who might be likened to Manu, laid but a fine of a thousand (kaḥāpapas).
7 But on all those who deserved a fine, he looked with indignation and with all sorts of words of rebuke he made of them honest men.
- 8 Then all these people, the forces of the foe in Laṅkā who abiding in forest strongholds and elsewhere, had become 9 unconquerable by his father, the hero vanquisher of foes, the King set about subjugating by the power of his majesty and

² I think that niggahaṇa ka'eḍa as well as niggaṇhitaṇa in v. 4 must mean a punishment and not a mere admonition. This is expressed by oḍaḍi in v. 5c. But the punishment was always less severe than the guilty person had deserved. The same also in v. 6 and 7. In niggaha-

by the might of his loving spirit¹. The Sihala kings in the land of the Vanni who were equipped with army and train, he brought completely under his influence, sitting merely on his lion's throne². All the Sihalas with their lion-like courage who dwelt in Tisihala³, these all the Ruler of men assembled around him and made them content. Then he dared to overthrew the great Damiḷa warriors who building great fortresses, had settled here and there in the country. Of all the Sihalas who on the field were as lions against rutting elephants — the enemy — he sent some hither, others thither. The great Sihala warriors wherever they came, harassed the Damiḷa warriors as the Garuḷas the Nāgas⁴.

At that time the Damiḷa kings, Māghinda and Jayabāhu⁵ had set up fortifications in the town of Pulatthi(nagara), famous for its wealth, in the village of Koṭṭhasāra⁶, in Gaṅgātaḷāka⁷, in the village of Kākūlaya⁸, in the Paḍi district and in Kurundi⁹, in Mānāmatta, in Mahātitttha and in the harbour of Mannāra¹⁰, at the landing-place of Pulacceri and in Vālikagāma, in the vast Gona district and in the Gonusu district, at Madhupādapatitttha and at Sūkaratitttha¹¹: at these rācā (v. 7c) niggaha it is true, means "rebuke". That is after all the mildest punishment.

¹ Thus by force or by kindness. As regards the construction of the sentence, paripanthīnaṃ balaṃ should probably be taken as in apposition to sabbe vanaduggādinissite.

² Without recourse to force, merely by his prestige as sovereign. For the Vanni cf. note to 81. 11.

⁸ "Crow's Home". The name does not otherwise occur.

⁹ The two names appear again in 88. 64 next to each other. In the Siri Laka-kaḍayuru (The Taprobanian 1888, p. 55) they are noted among the districts of the Pihiti-raja (Patiṭṭhā-raṭṭha).

¹⁰ Now Mantai and Mannar. See notes to 48. 81 and 61. 89.

19 and other places, and committing all kinds of violent deeds, had 20 stayed there a long time. Their forty and four thousand soldiers, Damiḷas and Keraḷas, who hard pressed by the spear-21 armed Sīhala warriors, were unable to resist, came terror-stricken to Pulatthinagara and held counsel thus as to their 22 future conduct: "King Parakkamabāhu is of high majesty and has miraculous power. Who in the world is strong enough 23 to neglect his commands? Even the monarchs of foreign lands 24 have now come under his influence, also all the Sīhalas. Even some of us Damiḷas are his followers. What is the use of 25 words about others? But what, what shall we people do? Now we have all become dim like glow-worms at the rising of the 26 radiant sun. Therefore in the future it is impossible for us to take up our abode on the Sīhala island, we will go to 27 another country." They took all their elephants and horses, as well as their pearls and costly precious stones, the royal 28 diadems and all the beauties of the harem, all ornaments, cloths, mantles, baskets and every kind of valuable with them 29 in their fear and began to leave the town. But owing to the action of the King's merit they mistook the regions of the 30 heavens. They thought it was the eastern gate and marched 31 out through the western gate² and came to Kālavāpi where the army of the Sīhalas had set up an entrenched camp.
 32 With all their goods they had alas! also to sacrifice their life by each giving his to the Sīhala warriors, thus carrying out 33 themselves what the King had only thought. And all the Sīhalas taking from them their accumulated treasures, became from this 34 time onward rich people³, as in ancient times all the dwellers

² The mistake of the Damiḷas is, of course, nothing but a fiction of the compiler. The intention of the mercenaries was to reach the western coast with their booty and there cross to India. At Kālavāpi the Sīhalas intercepted them. Pūjāv. gives the same account of the occurrence as the Cūlava.; Rājāv. a different one.

³ P. saṃpannā of pregnant significance in allusion to the saṃpada following in v. 34.

in Mithilā who gained the wealth which the kings a hundred in number, had through fear flung away¹. After thus accomplishing by his power the crushing of the alien foe, he set himself to bring about the prosperity of all Laṅkā.

When the eleventh year of the reign of this King had arrived, a king of the Jāvakas known by the name of Candabhānu landed with a terrible Jāvaka army under the treacherous pretext that they also were followers of the Buddha². All these wicked Jāvaka soldiers who invaded every landing-place and who with their poisoned arrows, like to terrible snakes, without ceasing harassed the people whomever they caught sight of, laid waste, raging in their fury, all Laṅkā. Just as flashes of lightning with floods of water (visit) a place destroyed by lightning with flames of fire³, so Laṅkā which had been harassed by Māgha and others was ravaged anew by the Jāvakas. Then the King sent forth his sister's son, the heroic Prince Vīrabāhu, with soldiers to fight the Jāvakas. The fearful Rāhu, namely Vīrabāhu, with his terrible appearance completely destroyed (the moonlight, namely) Candabhānu in the fields of heaven, namely in the battle⁴. He placed his

¹ Cf. W., note to this passage. The story alluded to here is related in the Ummagga-jātaka (FAURBÖLL, Jāt. VI. 389 ff.). Through the cleverness of the Bodhisatta the inhabitants of Mithilā capture the possessions of 101 kings against whom they had been fighting. Cf. Jāt. VI. 409²⁴: tato paṭṭhāya ca kira Mithilavāsino sabhiraṇṇā jāta. To get the proper construction in our passage the words yathā purā must be joined to the following and not to the preceding as is done by W., for which an ira or yathā in v. 34 would be indispensable.

² P. sugata, followers of the Sugata, the guide to the path of salvation. The Pujāv. also mentions Candabhānu as the leader of the Jāvakas. According to Rājāv. his soldiers were Damiḥas.

⁴ A picture suggested by the name of Candabhānu ("Moonshine"). Rāhu is the demon who causes the eclipses. We have again to do with heroic Sihala soldiers here and there and began to open fight 44 with the Jāvaka warriors. The good Sihala warriors, sure in aim, the archers, shattered in pieces with their sharply pointed 45 arrows, in the battle the countless number of arrows whizzing against them with their poisoned tips which were shot swiftly one after the other by the Jāvaka soldiers from a machine¹.

 46 Going forth to the combat like Rāma, Prince Virabāhu slew 47 numbers of Jāvakas, as Rāma (slew) the Rakkhasas. The Veramba wind², namely Virabāhu, possessed of great vehemence, shattered again and again the forest wilderness, namely the 48 Jāvaka foes. After thus putting to flight the Jāvakas in combat, he freed the whole region of Lanḱā from the foe.
 49 Hereupon he betook himself to Devanagara, worshipped there the lotus-hued god³ and celebrated for him a divine sacrifice.
 50 He had erected there a privepa that was intended for the Order; it received the name of Nandana⁴, since it was the 51 delight of the people. Thereupon he turned and came to the town Jambuddopi, he sought out Parakkamabāhu, and he was overjoyed.

compounds of the rūpaka order (skr. Virabāhur eva Rāhuḥ). See notes to 80. 60, 82. 16. According to the Rājāv. however, it was not the sister's son but the younger brother of the King, who vanquished Candrabhānu.

¹ P. yantamutte (bāṇe). Something apparently like the ancient catapult. Mhva. 72. 251 mentions huge stones being hurled from such machines.

² Veramba is the name given to strong winds which blow in great heights (cf. PTS. P. D. s. v.). The corresponding word in Skr. is vairambha. A synonym for verambarāta is kālacāta.

³ That is "the blue-coloured". Name of Viṣṇu. Cf. 85. 85 ff. Devanagara (or-pura) is the present Dondra, Sinh. Devundara. The place has been already mentioned in 60. 59 and 75. 47, but here for the first time we have a notice of the shrine of Viṣṇu celebrated in the Middle Ages. According to tradition it was built in 790 A.D. It was plundered and destroyed by the Portuguese in 1588 A.D. See P. E. PIERIS, Ceylon and the Portuguese, (= P. 2) p. 109 f. It is significant that Virabāhu offered his sacrifice of victory in a Hindu sanctuary. At the same time however, he builds a privepa for the Buddhist Order, thus putting his attitude towards their parity beyond doubt. Even to-day a Hindu devālaya and a Buddhist vihāra stand side by side in Dondra.

⁴ That is "joy, delight, ecstasy".

Now after he had thus carried on divers great wars and 52 after he had scattered the terrible crowd of all his foes, the great and mighty Sovereign Parakkamabāhu attained the fame of victory¹.

Here ends the eighty-third chapter, called «The Story of the Subjugation of the Hostile Kings», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

¹ South Indian inscriptions give an essentially different picture of the reign of Parakkamabāhu II. from our chronicle. According to these, Ceylon was invaded by the Pāṇḍyas about the middle of the 13th century. They say that of the kings of Ceylon one was killed and another forced to pay tribute. This shows that Parakkama never united the whole island under his dominion. H. W. Собинов, ИО. p. 77, 87.

CHAPTER LXXXIV

THE SERVICES RENDERED TO THE ORDER

1 Thereupon the Ruler, versed in the ordinances of Manu, caused to be determined to what families the villages, fields, 2 houses and so forth long since seized by the alien foe, belonged by heredity, and had them returned to their aforesaid owners 3 as before. Then he caused to be determined which villages, parks and the like were the property of the Buddha and the Doctrine, which (were) the assigned maintenance villages (for 4 ordinary needs), which the villages belonging to the Chapters, which the villages which were personal possessions, which (were) the villages of the eight sanctuaries¹ and the villages
 5 of the parivenas and had them given back. Further he appointed the five groups of menials and the ten groups of menials belonging to the royal household and determined their rank².
 6 While the Ruler made all the inhabitants of Lankā wealthy and possessors of fortune, he took care that the whole country 7 had abundant food. All the corrupt groups (of bhikkhus) who since the Interregnum lived only for their own desires, following forbidden occupations³, with senses ever unbridled, he sought 8 out rigorously, dismissed them (from the Order) and thus 9 purified the Order of the perfectly Enlightened One. Then the King sent many gifts to the Coḷa country⁴ and caused to be brought over to Tambapaṇṇi many respected Coḷa bhikkhus

¹ P. aṭṭhāyatanaḡāwake. It is difficult to say what is meant by this. For the explanation we must look above all to v. 17 f.

who had moral discipline and were versed in the three Piṭakas 10
and so established harmony between the two Orders¹.

Then when the Ruler learned that among the many high- 11
principled bhikkhus dwelling permanently in Tambaratṭha²
there was a Grand therā, Dhammakitti³ by name, radiant in 12
the glory of moral discipline, and that once when this therā was on his mendicant round, a lotus flower had blossomed on 13 his path, he was filled with admiration and sent a religious gift, incense, sandal-wood, food and the like which had been in contact with the Tooth Relic and likewise a choice and 14 princely gift⁴ to Tambaratṭha. He made the Grand therā 15 come to the island of Lankā, rejoiced again and again, as if he had beheld⁵ the Perfect One, celebrated for him a great 16 sacrificial festival and provided him who was a (worthy) vessel for offerings and honours⁶, in careful manner with an offering of the four necessities. Now in order to provide 17 for the protection of the Order furthered by him, the Great king built round about his capital for the eight Grand theras 18 who dwelt in the eight sanctuaries⁷ and for the discerning theras dwelling in villages or in the wilderness of the forest,

¹ These are the Hinayāna and the Mahāyāna. The first school had its principal seat in the Mahāvihāra, the second according to Mhvs. 78. 21 ff., in the Abhayagiri and Jetavana vihāras. Cf. also W., note to the passage. See now S. PARANAVITANE, Mahāyānism in Ceylon, C. J. Sc. G. II. 1, p. 35 ff.

² Probably a province in Southern India. Pājāv. has instead Tambalingum. It would appear from the Rājāv. that Candrabhānu came from Tambalingum. So also H. W. CODRINGTON, HC., p. 77.

³ The name of Dhammakitti recurs several times. According to WICKREMASINGHE, Catalogue of Sinhalese MSS. in the Brit. Mus. p. 21 b, 35 b, the Dhammakitti of this passage was the compiler of the first continuation of the Mahāvamsa.

⁴ W's translation "and other royal gifts" is incorrect. Here dhammapābhata and rājavābhata are contrasted with one another.

⁵ Not as W. has it: "as if he had seen an Araha". Pājāv. has budun vaḥatan duḥurā sē.

⁶ Pāsasakkārabbhājanam belongs to tanu in 16 d. For the figurative meaning of bhājana cf. note to Mhvs. 44. 70.

⁷ See above note to v. 4.

19 many communal monasteries, suitable for dwelling in, extensive embellished with divers pāsādas, provided with various maṇḍapas, 20 furnished with divers bathing-ponds, adorned with cloisters which were places of sojourn by day and by night, surrounded by 21 a series of flower parks and tree parks and granted them to them. Further he celebrated with all articles of equipment a 22 great sacrificial festival. Thereupon the King gathered together the Great community of the (bhikkhus) dwelling in villages and in the wilderness of the forest and chose out all those who strove continually for the keeping pure of moral discipline, 23 those who took upon themselves pious duties and were tried in the leading of their life in the strictest way¹, who were endowed with the virtues of renunciation and so forth and 24 were steadfast in the precepts for the conscientious. He built for them on the heights of the Puṭabhatta² rock a forest dwelling, assigned it to them and supported them therewith.
 25 As they made of the strictest conduct a reality, he made Laṅkā through them in his days as it were, an abode of 26 arahants. With the reflection that theras who were acquainted with the sacred texts were rare in the Island, he had all books 27 brought from Jambudīpa, had many bhikkhus instructed in the sacred texts, as also in all sciences, such as philosophy, grammar and the like and thus made of them cultivated people.
 28 In this manner furthering conduct and learning, the wise (prince) honoured with such a religious sacrifice the Guide to 29 the path of salvation (Buddha). The Ruler caused his younger royal brother, Bhuvanekabāhu by name, to be in-30 structed, so that he was versed in the three Piṭakas. He made him carry out the precepts for the theras and hold lectures of instruction thereon. But to the many bhikkhus who 31 hearkened he granted in the midst of the Great community their appointment as theras, and presenting them with all articles of equipment, he celebrated an offering for the theras.
 32 Seeking for an occasion fraught with blessing, in order to reach by the noble eight-fold path the saving shore from the ocean of re-births¹, he had built in the third and sixth, then 33 again in the eleventh, twelfth and seventeenth, as also in the 34 twenty-first, twenty-seventh and thirtieth years of his reign thus eight times, a vast hall (resting) on sixty pillars². Round 35 about it he erected a great and splendid maṇḍapa. This again he had adorned with divers coloured stuffs and made numerous 36 groups of bhikkhus abide there by turn for the purpose of rest. Day by day full of zeal, he did them honour with a 37 great festival of gifts in his name and granted to many sāmāneras admission to the Order. Then following on this, he 38 conferred on bhikkhus the highest rank, namely the dignity of a thera, Grand thera and the like³, and accumulating many 39 important wares⁴ of great value and many beautiful articles of equipment even to the measure of a king of elephants, 40 the Ruler first presented to those who had attained the rank of a Grand thera, articles of equipment worthy of a king and then allotted to all the ascetics who were theras and to 41 those who had been dismissed from the dependance on a teacher⁵, and to the others in their order, the eight articles of equipment⁶.

⁴ P. garubhaṇḍa also 85. 105.

⁵ P. nissaya. By this is understood the relation between an older bhikkhu, the upajjhāya and a younger, the antevāsī. The first has to instruct the second in all details of the monastic life and the younger must take the older as his model. He who has finished his course of instruction is nissayamutta.

⁶ See note to 60. 71.

- 42 Thus the King, the best of men, celebrated every seven days the great and superb festival of the eight bestowals¹, 43 and later celebrating several times over the festival of admission into the Order, he made the Order of the Victor prosperous.
 44 Thus the King by granting it in this way manifold support, caused as the moon² the ocean, the good Order of the Tathāgata
 — the king of the true doctrine — to grow in perfect fashion.

Here ends the eighty-fourth chapter, called «The Services Rendered to the Order», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

¹ The expression aññopasampatti must refer to the offering of the añña parikkhārā (v. 41). Upasampatti is not the same as upasampadā
 "admission to the Order". It is to this festival which took place later (pacchā) that v. 43 alludes. In 89. 50 upasampatti is also used in connection with the distribution of articles of use to the bhikkhus, while the celebration of the upasampadā takes place later (v. 68).

² P. sudhākara, skr. the same, lit. "mine of nectar". Cf. for this and Queries I, Oct. 1913. p. XVI.

CHAPTER LXXXV

THE PERFORMANCE OF ALL KINDS OF PIOUS WORKS

Hereupon the Ruler of men built in the splendid, incom- 1 parable, glorious town, by name Sirivaḍḍhana¹, his birthplace, a vihāra exceeding rich and vast². It was furnished with 2 pāsādas and maṇḍapas and with high walls and gate-towers, adorned with bodhi trees, with cetiyas, with groves and image houses, bright with all kinds of paintings³ and embellished 3 over and over with ornaments. Then he had the stretch of 4 road from the town of Jambuddoṇi to the town of Sirivaḍḍhana levelled in the length of half a yojana and the breadth of an usabha⁴, so that it was fair as the surface of a drum, and 5

¹ It is now generally recognized that this Sirivaḍḍhana has nothing to do with Kandy (cf. CORLESTON, The Identification of the Sirivaḍḍhanapura of Mahāvamsa, Chap. LXXXV., JRAS. C. B. XII, Nr. 43, 1892, p. 206 ff.). It was situated according to v. 4 only half a yojana from Jambuddoṇi-Dambadeniya. All my MSS. have in v. 4 aḍḍhayaḍḍhana^o, not aḍḍhayaḍḍhana^o which must be assumed, if we adopt W's translation: "about eight yojanas". If the yojana of the Mhvs. is the usual Indian yojana, then the distance between the two towns is about 4 1/2 miles. Pūjāv., if the printed text can be relied on, has aḍḍayodanak.

² P. visālavibhavaṃ ("possessing great riches") māhācīhāraṃ. There is just a doubt whether we have to take the subst. as appellative or with W. as a proper name. I adopt the former and that with reference to the Pūjāv. where we have rajamahaveherak "one great King's Monastery". Thus we must of course read in v. 56 not Mahā^o but mahā^o.

⁴ In the line ḍiḍḍhacīlitaṭṭha aḍḍhayaḍḍhanūsabhamatthake the aḍḍhayaḍḍhana refers evidently to ḍiḍḍha and usabha to viṭṭhāra. The first is the length, the second the breadth of the road. An usabha is equal to 20 yaṭṭhi = 140 ratana or hattha, (roughly = 18 inches), thus 210 ft. = 64 metres. The Pūjāv. gives a very detailed description of the festival of the transference of the relics to the new monastery.

caused it to be strewn throughout its length with fine white 6 sand and adorned on both sides with many flags and pennons strung high by which the sun's rays were warded off, with 7 rows of banana stems and with numbers of filled jars which contained decorations of flowers and were fair with their 8 bright painting. On the whole of this free tract he had erected 9 at a distance of every five cubits a royal arch and at a distance of every ten cubits an arch of stuff as well as at a distance of every hundred cubits¹ a large pāsāda covered with variegated 10 painting, with a high point, three-storeyed and furnished with 11 an image of the perfectly Enlightened One². Then he decorated the vihāra³ round about the walled-in district of the monastery 12 with many and vast arches which were fair by reason of their variety and gleamed with the grace of the arch of the King of the gods⁴, — further with white umbrellas which resembled 13 the picture of the full moon, — with banners five-fold in hue and of divers form, which were fair as heavenly dancers who 14 dance in the court of the atmosphere — with rows of maṇḍapas set with jewels that sparkled everywhere, which possessed the beauty of a series of many palaces descended from the world 15 of the gods — with rows of figures of Brahma, that danced in lines holding white umbrellas and were beautiful because 16 they were worked by a mechanism⁵, — with divers-hued mechanical figures of the gods which moved to and fro with

² From tato (end of v. 8) to v. 10 one sentence. Pred. and subj. are at the end. The King erected 1) rājatorāṇaṃ, 2) paṭṭatorāṇaṃ, 3) mahāpāsādaṃ on the levelled surface (samikatatale) between J. and S. To the loc. tale belong the attributes in 5 cd and in 7 d (alapaṭate); to this last belong the instr. in v. 6 and 7. In v. 8 the loc. samikatatale is rendered collective by etasmiṃ vipulokāse.

³ I anticipate obj. and pred. in 19 d.

hands folded before the brows, — with rows of mechanical 17
 figures of horses which ran hither and thither and possessed the grace of rows of raging waves of the sea, — with elephants 18
 wearing the ornaments of elephants, which were (likewise) mechanical figures feigning to be clouds descended to the earth: — with all these and other votive offerings which called 19 forth ecstasy in people he embellished the vihāra. Then again 20 he made the whole of the inhabitants in Laṅkā take up their position in a circle round the vihāra, filling the space of a gāvuta¹ and giving forth shouts of praise, and glorified the 21 virtues of the perfectly Enlightened One. To these (he added) 22 the bhikkhus and the sāmaṇeras as also the lay brethren and the lay sisters, bearing flowers destined as offerings for the festival of the Buddha and (lastly) all the other men and women who 23 were acquainted with the merits of the three (sacred) objects², with votive offerings in their hands, adorned with all their ornaments. Thereupon the Monarch himself decked out in all 24 his ornaments, accompanied by his four-membered army, urged by his faith, placed the two relics, the Tooth and the Bowl, on 25 a costly chariot, adorned with every kind of chariot ornament.
 Then one by one he had displayed before him³ divers votive offerings, such as flags of gold and flags of silver, golden 26 vessels and silver vessels, fly-whisks of gold and fly-whisks of silver, chests of gold as also silver chests, golden fans and 27 charming silver fans, golden bowls with lotus flowers⁴ and 28 bowls of silver with lotus flowers, filled jars⁵ which were 29 fashioned of gold and such as were fashioned of silver and so on; and afterwards holding a great sacrificial festival with 30

³ P. parato pantiso (v. 29), that is in single groups or divisions before he himself started.

⁴ P. pokkharāṇi, i. e. "lotus-pond". We must imagine the basins in which the flowers were borne as being oblong in form like small bathing-ponds.

⁵ In the puppakalasā which are either carried or set up on festive occasions one sees now specially often the yellow-gold blossoms of the areca palm.

31 these divers (offerings)¹ ever and again to the sound of the five musical instruments², he by degrees brought (the relics) on this decked out road to the town of Sirivaḍḍhana. After 32 carefully laying them down in the midst of the vihāra in a spacious maṇḍapa on a covered Buddha seat, he set about 33 making the various people³ celebrate a sacrificial festival. In the morning all people who had a true thirst⁴ for meritorious works, adorned with their ornaments, venerated the Tooth 34 Relic and the Bowl Relic in religious devotion⁵, with divers kinds of flowers, such as jasmin, campaka blossoms, the blossoms of the ironwood tree⁶ and the like, distinguished by their colour and perfume, and which were mingled with flowers of 35 gold. They venerated them with heaps of aromatic rice which gleamed like a collection of the long since amassed fame of 36 the Great king. They venerated them with divers kinds of fruits, such as bananas, bread-fruit, mangoes and so forth, which were quite ripe, fragrant, lovely in colour, perfectly 37 sweet. Then afterwards when the King himself had venerated the two most holy relics with all kinds of votive offerings, he 38 likewise, true to the good custom, provided the bhikkhu community carefully with food and drink, with dishes solid and tender, with drinks that one sips and with those one 39 drinks⁷. Thereupon the Ruler, joyful in heart, distributed to many hundreds of bhikkhus the eight articles of equipment

² The five instruments are enumerated in Abhp. 139 ff. They are ātata, vitata and ātatavitata, drums stretched "on the one side", "on the two sides" and "wholly with leather", susira, "flute, pipe", and ghana "cymbal".

³ The various groups of people enumerated in v. 21—23.

⁴ P. puññasoyḍa. The word soyḍa "drunkard" used here in a figurative sense, as also in dhammasoyḍatā, Jāt. V. 482¹⁷ (PTS. P. D. s. v.).

⁵ P. bhattiyā, see note to 74. 243.

in great abundance. After that throughout the three watches 40 of the night he had the whole space round about the vihāra lit up with many hundreds of thousands of lamps burning fragrant oil, with lovely festoons of numberless, tiny, camphor 41 lamps (so that it was) like to the starry firmament. The 42 Monarch instituted a sacrificial for the Buddha¹. The festival was ravishing by reason of the many exquisite dances and 43 songs of the dancers who on splendid stages² erected here and there, performed while assuming different characters³, divers dances and sang various songs. The noise⁴ of the 44 festival was increased by the sound of the five musical instruments⁵ which produced the illusion of the roar of the 45 great ocean of his meritorious works⁶ that was so strong that it surpassed⁷ the booming of the sea, while the drums shamed the thunder-claps of Pajjunna⁸. The feast resounded with the 46 pious voices of the preachers of the good doctrine who placing themselves on the preachers' seats carefully spread at divers spots by the faithful, laid hold of the beautiful fans⁹ and 47 preached the good doctrine that went straight to the heart of

¹ Subj., pred. and obj. maḥpālo buddhapūjaṃ parattayi stand at the close of the whole sentence in v. 51 cd. The preceding verses contain attributes to the object buddhapūjaṃ, namely manoharaṃ (v. 42-3), virāḍḍhitam (v. 44-5), ghositaṃ (v. 46-7), maṇḍitaṃ (v. 48-9), pasattikaṃ (v. 50-51).

² P. raṅgamaṇḍala = sinh. raṅgamaḍala.

³ What is meant are the different parts they play. The dances are always mimic in character.

⁴ The term "noise" must be supplemented from the foregoing. In the text itself there is only virāḍḍhitam directly related to pūjaṃ.

⁵ See above note to v. 30-31.

⁷ Skr. dūrīkaroti can also mean "leaves behind it, surpasses".

⁸ Skr. Parjanya the God of rain and of the storm. Cf. Jāt. I. 331²¹ ff.; D. N. II. 260²⁵; Mhva. 21. 31.

vihāra¹ the property of the community and in giving it over to the Order, he filled himself with merit and fame. Thereupon 57 the King erected a pariveṇa that was called by his name Parakkamabāhu, adorned with lofty pāsādas, granted the vihāra² the divers objects of use suited to it, as well as 58 several rich maintenance villages, and celebrated a great sacrificial feast.

The King made his yuvarāja³ erect in the Billasela-vihāra 59 the pariveṇa called Bhuvanekabāhu after him, embellished 60 with pāsādas, maṇḍapas and the like and then celebrated in the town called Sirivaḍḍhana in the manner described, with 61 all votive offerings with care seven days long a great sacrificial festival for the three (sacred) objects. But also in the splendid 62 town of Hatthigiripura⁴ the King made the same (yuvarāja) erect a vast vihāra, and after having built in his name a superb 63 pariveṇa, called Mahāmahindabāhu, he celebrated a great feast of sacrifice and gathered thereby merit. He restored the decayed 64 five-storeyed pāsāda built long before in the splendid town of Kalyāṇī by King Yaṭṭhālatissa⁵, and in repairing what was 65 destroyed by having it coated with stucco, he made it again as it had been originally. There too he restored in similar 66 fashion the temple of the recumbent statue of the King of sages and the temple of the Tivaṅka image⁶. There too 67 the Ruler had the spacious, four-square courtyard of the great cetiya laid with great stone slabs, making of it a perfectly 68

² Namely the vihāra in which the Parakkamabāhu-pariveṇa was erected. Pariveṇa and vihāra are thus not used synonymously as W. thinks.

⁴ I. e. "Elephant mountain town", now Kurunegala.

⁵ He was the son of Mahānāga who was the brother of Devānaṇṇapiyatissa and founder of the dynasty of Rohaṇa, whence arose in the fourth generation Duṭṭhagāmaṇī. (Mhvs. 22. 2 ff., 10 ff.). For Kalyāṇī see note to 61. 35.

level surface, and then he erected in front of the (cetiya) a 69 large maṇḍapa. Further the Ruler with great and religious devotion held several times in that vihāra a sacrificial feast for 70 the Bodhi tree, the cetiya and the Enlightened One, with votive offerings of flowers, lamps and food — magnificent, abundant, spreading joy among the people, and acquired thereby merit.
 71 Thereupon the King granted to the vihāra for the purpose of holding a daily sacrificial festival of lamps, a large, fair, 72 delightful garden of cocopalms which he had had laid out in his own name in the immediate neighbourhood of the vihāra.
 73 Then the two-storeyed, circular relic temple in the vihāra called Hatthavanagalla¹, erected² by the monarch Goṭṭābhaya, 74 by name, on the spot where King Sirisampghabodhi gave his 75 head as gift to the poor man³ — this temple the best of kings had repaired and provided with a golden point and made three 76 storeys high. In the selfsame monastery he built on the spot where the corpse of his royal father had been laid down⁴ a superb 77 cetiya. There too he had erected an octagonal image house and had 78 a stone image of the Buddha set up in it. The glorious King heard that of that son of the Enlightened One⁵, the Thera Mahākassapa, 79 who had received during the lifetime of the Enlightened One — the Guide to the path of salvation — the Master of the worlds — his most holy garment of rags as heritage⁶ and after his death 80 had taken over the spiritual kingship and protected it — (that)

³ Mhvs. 36. 91 ff. should be compared with this. The history of Sirisampghabodhi's end is told in greater detail in the Hatthavanagallavīhāravamsa 8 (p. 25 ff. of the ed.) and embellished with many miraculous tales.

course of time had come to Tambapaṇṇī and was now preserved 81
 in the vihāra of Bhīmatittha in the province of Pañcayojana¹.
 Thereupon the King in whom there sprang up religious devotion, 82 love and highest veneration towards that Thera², betook himself, surrounded by his four-membered army to the great monastery 83 and after he had beheld there the splendid (relic), he celebrated full of joy with an immeasurable quantity of beautiful kinds of fragrant flowers and likewise with lamps and incense and 84 heaps of rice, with great care for three days a sacrificial festival for the Tooth Relic. Then when the Monarch learned 85 that in the sacred town of Devanagara which was a mine of meritorious works, the shrine long since erected to the lotushued god — the King of the gods, had now fallen into decay, 86
 he betook himself to the superb town and in rebuilding the 87 dwelling of the King of the gods like to the heavenly mansion of the King of the gods³, he made of it an abode of all riches. Then the best of men had the town filled with all 88 splendours even as the beauteous city of the gods⁴. Hereupon 89
 he determined to celebrate every year in the town an Āsāḥī festival⁵ for the god.

Now the Great king betook himself to the splendid town 90 of Jambuddonī. Here he had built round the Sirivijayasundara- 91 vihāra⁶ erected by his royal father, a high wall and gate-towers and then had the three-storeyed relic temple restored⁷. 92

¹ Now Bentota on the coast between Colombo and Galle. For Pañcayojana see note to 57. 71.

² That is towards Mahākassapa. W. erroneously associates there with "the elder who had the charge thereof".

³ The word devarājālaya is twice used here. The temple of the King of the gods (Viṣṇu) in Devanagara is made as beautiful as the palace of the King of the gods (in this case Indra) in heaven.

⁴ P. devanagaram viya in allusion to its namesake, the town of Viṣṇu's shrine.

⁵ P. āsāḥā, -āḥ is the name of the month June-July. The day of the full moon of this month was one of high festival even before the time of Buddha (Jāt. I. 50). Buddha was born on that day.

⁶ Cf. above 81. 51 where the monastery is called Vijayasundarārāma.

⁷ Cf. with this 82. 9 ff.

There he placed the Tooth Relic of the Great Sage on a raised 93 throne of great value and celebrated in the order described above, for seven days a great sacrificial feast for the three (sacred) objects which procure every conceivable blessing. With 94 the wish to have daily before his eyes a figure of the Guide to the path of salvation, as rejoicing to the heart as the 95 figure of the living Master, the Lord of men had portrayed¹ by numbers of specially skilled painters on a great tablet a splendid 96 Buddha figure, showing² the Exalted One as he took when alive an airing in a large jewelled cloister set with divers precious 97 stones. Hereupon the King of high renown gathered together the whole Order of the bhikkhus dwelling on the island of 98 Laṅkā as well as a multitude of people and celebrated in the town of Sirivaḍḍhana in the manner described earlier, for seven days a great festival for the Buddha.

99 Now when the Great king heard that unimaginable blessing attaches to a kaṭhina³ offering, he thought, joyful of 100 heart in faith: "In honour of the eighty greatly glorious disciples⁴ of him who is alone the bridge over the shoreless terrible ocean of the circle of rebirths, who alone is the banner of the Sakya clan⁵, whose dignity is venerated by the 101 people of the whole world, the Wise, the King of the wise, the Master, the preserver of the world, the seer, who is master (of his senses), the kinsman of the world⁶, the kinsman of

² Lit. a Buddha figure like the Exalted One walking . . . taking an airing in a cloister. The ca in 95 c is disturbing. Perhaps one should read va (= era).

³ See note to 41. 48. Parakkamabāhu's kaṭhina offering is also related in Pūjāv. and Rājāv.

⁴ See note to 37. 176.

⁵ Round the banner (ketu) the clan gathers; the word is therefore used figuratively for "leader, chief, the highest". Cf. skr. manuṣṣasaketu, Raghuvamśa 2. 33. The Buddha represents the acme of the Sakya clan.

⁶ P. lokabandhu. So called on account of his world-embracing love.

the sun¹ — (in honour of his eighty disciples) I will give a 102 great and splendid kaṭhina offering of eighty (robes).² The wise 103 (prince) then called together the whole of the men and women dwelling on the island of Laṅkā and made them all carry 104 out in the shortest time the whole of the work (for the making) of (these) garments beginning with the preparation of the 105 cotton. And on one day he gave away together with all the useful and important wares³, the eighty kaṭhina robes. But 106 after he had prepared all this and versed in offering, had distributed it among all the theeras dwelling in Tambapanni⁴, he held for the eighty great disciples, for each one of them, 107 on the same day, eighty great sacrificial feasts. In this way 108
he often bestowed many kaṭhinas on the Great community and increased thereby his great merit.

And the King thought several times with longing joyful 109 through faith: "I will dedicate to the Enlightened One the royal dignity of Laṅkā." He adorned in fitting manner his 110 royal palace like the palace of the Lord of the gods and the town like the city of the gods. Then he placed the Tooth 111 Relic of the Great Sage (Buddha) on a costly lion's seat which he had fashioned in the royal abode, and with divers fly- 112
whisks and umbrellas, with divers jewelled crowns, with divers ornaments and robes, with divers heaps of jewels, with divers 113 elephants and steeds, with divers infantry and chariots, with divers beatings of drums, and divers sounds of shell trumpets, 114 with divers flags and pennons, with divers rows of banana trees, with divers bowls of milk⁴, with divers trees in blossom, with divers splendidly fragrant wreaths, with divers superb 115

¹ P. bhānubandhu. Because like the sun he illumines the whole world, at the same time also because (cf. W., note), the princely house of the Sakya is said to belong to the dynasty of the sun. The synonym ādicca-bandhu is a frequent name of the Buddha. Buddhaghosa explains it in Suttanipāṭa 915 by ādiccassa gottabandhu (Hsüan Suir, Paramattha-jotikā, p. 562).

² See 84. 39 and note.

³ See note to 80. 25.

⁴ P. khṛatapaṭṭa. Lit. "ponds of milk". The explanation is similar to that of soṇṇapokkharāṇi in 85. 28. See the note.

- 116 palanquins, with divers kinds of excellent rice, with divers splendid kinds of cake, with divers superb lamps, frankincense and perfumes — with all these and other votive offerings 117 worthy of a king, he celebrated with care, after assembling the Great community of the bhikkhus dwelling on the island of Laṅkā for seven days a great sacrificial feast.
- 118 The best of kings also betook himself with his fourmembered forces to the Samantakūṭa¹, this forehead jewel of 119 the rock mountains. There he venerated the foot-print — to be venerated by gods and other beings — of the highest God 120 of gods², the King of truth, the Master. Round about the monarch of the mountains he granted to the extent of ten gāvutas³ the land rich in various precious stones and thickly 121 peopled with men and women, in religious devotion to the sacred foot-print and sacrificed to it again with ornaments of jewels.
- 122 Thus did the discerning King who had faith in the Buddha, amass a great quantity of meritorious works as bridge for the crossing of the ocean of the circle of rebirths, or as ladder with which to reach the highest heaven.

Here ends the eighty-fifth chapter, called «The Performance of all Kinds of Pious Works», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

¹ The pilgrimage to Adam's Peak is mentioned in the Pūjāv.

² The title devātideva for the Buddha which already occurs in Mhva. I. 57, points again to a later stage of development. Cf. note to 50. 65.

³ That is about 20 miles.

CHAPTER LXXXVI

INCITEMENT TO THE PERFORMANCE OF ALL KINDS OF PIOUS WORKS

Thereupon the King thought: "Since I now wield the royal 1 dominion over all Laṅkā, it is indeed for me a heavy burden¹ to make pilgrimages hither and thither and to venerate 2
according to one's desire the hallowed places, to perform daily meritorious works and to care for the welfare of the world.
But which of my dignitaries has the capacity to accumulate 3 a blessing of merit which would be equal to my aspiration and to care (likewise) for the welfare of the world? Now 4 there is my dignitary Devappatirāja by name, a true believer in the Buddha, the Doctrine and the Community. When he 5 striving after the dignity of a Guide to the path of salvation, made the firm resolve², straightway there sprang from the three 6 eyes of a coconut planted by him three shoots. Once when he beheld a poor man he to whom mercy was the highest, gave him all his possessions together with children and wives 7 and uttered the wish: I will be a Buddha. Therefore when 8 he shall have heard my wish he will fulfil it." So thinking, he had him summoned and spake to him thus: "By swamp, 9 mountain and wilderness as though created by the powerful³,

¹ P. bhāra. The idea is this: the meritorious tasks which I have taken upon myself are too much for me alone. I must look round for helpers who will work with and for me with the same ideas and objects.

² Namely that the miracle described in 5cd and 6ab should be manifested as sign of the fulfilment of his wish to become one day a Buddha. Cf. 50. 65, 85. 119 and notes.

³ P. vasavattin. As epithet of Māra, also in Thūpavaṃsa 65¹², with unwelcome Māra, the road leading to the Sumana mountain¹ is at many places obstructed, (made) inaccessible and causes difficulties to the people of the eighteen provinces who make a pilgrimage thither in order to accumulate blessing by venerating the footprint of the Sage. Do thou therefore make it accessible. Further: I have heard that in the vihāra called Hatthavanagalla², at the spot where a Grand therā gifted with miraculous powers, making through the majesty of his merit earth and air to resound with thunder, attained the dignity of an arahant, a five-storeyed pāsāda with a roofing of golden bricks erected by King Upatissa³, has in the course of time fallen into decay, so that now nought but the pillars remain. Do thou also restore this in my name. And just as King Nissāṅka laid out a garden of fruit-trees in the Bhīmatitthavihāra⁴, do thou also plant in the same manner in my name a large garden full of cocopalms and other trees". With these words he entrusted him with each single meritorious undertaking⁵.

Devappatirāja agreed with "aye!" and betook himself in the first place to Gaṅgāsiripura⁶. There he had fashioned a magnificent image of Sumanadeva⁷ furnished with all the fair bodily signs and decked it out with ornaments of gold and jewels. But after that he wished to visit the Samantakūṭa⁸. He took the image of the god (Sumana) along with him in reference to the paranissimitarasavattidevā who are Māra's retinue and are themselves described as Māras.

² See 85. 73 and note.

³ We do not know which Upatissa is meant, for neither the first king of this name (37. 179 ff.) nor the second (41. 6) has such a building ascribed to him.

⁴ See 85. 81 and note. There is an account of the parks laid out by Kittinissāṅka in 80. 25 (and in the Rājāv.).

⁵ We must of course write taṃtaṃpuraṇṇakriyāsu.

festive procession¹, set forth, betook himself first to the village 21 Bodhitala and began from here to build bridges. Here at the 22 mouth² he made a large and magnificent bridge of thirty-five cubits, and over the Khajjotanadī one of thirty cubits, likewise at Ullapanaggāma one of thirty-six cubits, at Ambaggāma 23 one of thirty-four cubits in length³. (The bridges were) very 24 strong and good so that elephants, horses, cattle and buffaloes could pass over them. And above each single embankment of 25 the bridges he had fair houses built, adorned with lofty pillars and the like, had invitations sent to numbers of bhikkhus, 26 gathered them together at different places, distributed among them abundant alms and celebrated a great sacrificial festival. He built rest-houses, finished the building of bridges, laid 27 down at the remaining places frequent stepping-stones⁴, had 28 the wilderness cleared and (in this way) a great road built. Then he betook himself to the Samantakūṭa, showed veneration to the sacred footprint, set up in the courtyard of the cetiya 29 of the sacred footprint the image of the god (Sumana) and erected a maṇḍapa for the holy footprint. Round about it he 30 had a wall built, and discerning as he was, had the maṇḍapa fastened with strong chains to iron pillars in this wise to 31

³ Devappatirāja proceeds from Gampola up the left bank of the Mahaveliganga. Ullapanaggāma is the modern Ulapana (4 m from Gampola as the crow flies). Ambaggāma is the present Ambagamuva (6 m from Ulapana). The Khajjota river is called in Pājāv. Kaṇamādirihoya (we have to read thus instead of -haya). Sinh. kaṇamādiri means "glow-worm", like the P. khajjota. It is curious that the farther course of the road is not described. It probably led over to the valley of the Kadaligāma river and then ascended this valley. See note to 60. 66 and below v. 41.

⁴ At marshy spots where no causeway could be built, to give firm foothold.

secure it, and then again he sacrificed for three days to the 32 sacred footprint with lamps and the like. He himself placed on his head a lamp with fragrant oil, and venerating again 33 and again in the name of his Master the Great king and walking round the sacred footprint with his right side towards 34 it, he spent the whole night. Hereupon he had this whole occurrence in its true sequence from the beginning written 35 down on a lofty stone pillar and had this monument of the glory of the Great king of kings Parakkamabāhu set up 36 with rejoicing. Thereupon he informed the King of the whole occurrence by the mouth of a messenger and sent (the message) off, since his wishes had been completely carried out.

37 After that Devappatirāja betook himself to the Hattha-vanagalla-vihāra and had erected there at great cost, in the 38 manner commanded by the King, a three-storeyed pāsāda with a lofty point and gave it over to the Grand master¹, the wise 39 Anomadassin by name. Then he celebrated according to the order of the Great king, an almsgiving and had a stone inscription put up.

40 Thereupon the High dignitary betook himself to the landing-place Bhīmatittha and built at the mouth of the 41 Kālanadī a bridge of eighty-six cubits². Then after building at Kadalisenagāma³ a bridge of a hundred staves⁴ and over 42 the river of Sūlaggāma one of forty staves⁴ and over the

¹ P. mahāsāmin. Cf. with this note to 53. 23. Anomadassin was the Superior (abbot) of the monastery.

² The Kālanadī is the present Kaluganga. The length of the bridge is about 129 ft., the mouth of the Kaluganga is however considerably wider than that.

Sālapādapa swamp one of a hundred and fifty cubits¹ and in addition to these other bridges here and there at difficult places, and numerous parks and sermon halls, he celebrated 43 once more a great festival of almsgiving.

And again the High dignitary of the King had laid out 44 from the Bhīmatittha-vihāra as far as the landing-place (of the Kālanadī)² on a space a yojana broad, a great garden of 45 cocopalms, called after Parakkamabāhu, beautifully shady and rich in fruit. Then having all the work in the different 46 districts, such as the spinning of the cotton and so forth, undertaken and finished in a day, the highly-famed one 47 presented the bhikkhu community with six and twenty kaṭhina robes and celebrated therewith a great sacrificial festival. Giving in like manner, he wandering around here and there, 48 presented the bhikkhu community once again with sixty-six kaṭhina robes.

Then he had the whole of the vast forest called Ma- 49 hālabujagaccha³ cleared by the roots, a fine village built there and in its neighbourhood a large grove of jack-trees⁴ planted. 50 Then he erected there in the name of the King an image house of three storeys, surrounded by bodhi tree, cetiya, park 51 and encircling wall and celebrated a great sacrificial festival. Having thus performed in the name of his royal Master⁵ much 52 meritorious work, he informed the King of everything on his return.

Now was the King filled with great affection for him. He 53 made the village called Mahālabujagaccha and other villages built by him his hereditary property and granted them to 54

¹ Roughly 225 ft. W. gives the number as "fifty". He has overlooked the sata in satahatthakaṃ.

² Kālanadītittha, now Kalutara. Cf. 56. 12 and note. The distance between Bentota and Kalutara is 12 miles. The breadth of the plantation would be 9 miles, if the Indian yojana is meant.

³ Pājāv. Mahadelgas namrū mahacanaya. Sinh. del is the name of the bread-fruit tree artocarpus incisa. — P. labuja.

⁴ Pājāv. koscanayak. Sinh. kos is artocarpus integrifolia. — P. panasa.

⁵ P. rājajñānāmato stands here in the same sense as mahārājassa nāmato in v. 32 or mahārājaniyogato in v. 39 or rājānāmato in v. 51.

him. Thereupon he betook himself with him to the temple 55 of the Tooth Relic and spake thus in the midst of the community: "This my most excellent dignitary has at all times been true of heart to me and to the three (sacred) objects.
56 Therefore because activity for the welfare of the Buddha and of the King was for him the highest, is he dear to me and 57 precious. Therefore will I with a gift dear to me make a sacrifice to the Tooth Relic". And he dedicated the excellent dignitary with wife and children to the Tooth Relic of the Sage.

58 In such wise did the protector of the middle world from that times make that same most excellent Devappatirāja celebrate continually with many costly votive gifts, sacrificial festivals to the world-extolled Triad of the jewels.

Here ends the eighty-sixth chapter, called «The Incitement to the Performance of all Kinds of Pious Works», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

CHAPTER LXXXVII

THE HANDING OVER OF THE BURDEN OF DOMINION

Now once upon a time when through the influence of evil 1 planets a great heat arose in Laṅkā by which everything was burnt up, when the corn withered and a famine was inevitable 2 and the whole of the people dwelling in Laṅkā were filled with the greatest anxiety, the King gave orders for a splendid 3 festival to be held for the three (sacred) objects, for the cetiyas and the bodhi trees and for the protectors Metteya and other miracle-working highest deities¹ who were to be venerated by 4 various offerings, and even to turn the whole of Laṅkā into one great festival². After antecedent sacrificial ceremonies, he 5 gathered together the Great community of the bhikkhus, caused them recite the Paritta³ and bear the Tooth Relic of the 6 Great sage round the town in fitting manner, the right side turned towards it, and made (in firm faith) the resolve:
the heavens shall rain. Thereupon great clouds gathered on 7 every side, flashing with lightning and again and again thundering, so that it was bliss for the ears of all people, 8 and they began to rain, destroying the glowing heat, making 9

¹ For devatideva used here of the future Buddhas at the head of whom stands Metteya, cf. note to 85. 119.

² The construction is difficult. W. merely translates freely according to the sense. We must take the words kārāpetvāna and mahussaraṃ twice, first uttamaṃ mahussaraṃ kārāpetvāna (namely for the things and persons mentioned in 3 and 4) and then sabbaṃ Laṅkaṃ ekaṃ mahussaraṃ kārāpetvāna. For this last cf. idioms like radho yec' eko "pure murder and bloodshed", M. II. 244²; ekobhāsa disā sabba vidhāya, Mhvs. 74, 219, JāCo. V. 194¹ etc.

joyful the people, driving away the famine, beautifying the country and reviving the corn¹.

10 "By the power of the Buddha do these rain-clouds pour 11 forth such rain, making joyful our hearts. Who therefore among 12 gods, brahmas and men is capable of understanding how great 13 are these excellent qualities of the Buddha? But our King also is mighty and strong in miraculous power, a king like to him there has not been and there will not be." With such words ever and again repeated, the dwellers in Lankā praised the excellence of the Monarch of sages and also the excellence of their King.

14 While in this wise the King protecting Order and laity in 15 justice and filling with precious contents his own character, enjoyed for long the good fortune of the royal dignity, he on one occasion summoned to him along with his sister's son, Vira-16 bāhu, his five capable sons — Vijayabāhu, Bhuvanekabāhu², 17 Tibhuvanamalla, Parakkamabāhu and Jayabāhu — and began in 18 this wise to give these six advice: "Dear ones, hearken to my words: there are here in the world these three (kinds) of sons: the low kind, those of like kind, those of higher kind³.
19 Now those who know not how to enjoy at its true worth⁴ the wealth of their parents which has come to them as a family 20 heritage, but destroy it, as monkeys a wreath of flowers, and now live without wealth — the pious ancients have called 'sons 21 of a low kind'. But those who enjoy such possessions as they have received them in like manner as their fathers, protecting them as a family heritage, these ye must know are the '(sons)

¹ The removal of a drought by the exhibition of the Tooth Relic is also described in the Rājāv.

² The two brothers Vijayabāhu and Bhuvanekabāhu are mentioned together in an inscription found in Yāpahu. H. C. P. Bell, ASC. 1911-12 = S. P. III. 1916, p. 68.

³ Lit. "lower (similar, higher) born or become". Cf. skr. apajāta and anujāta. The three kinds are distinguished in the same way in the Itivuttaka, p. 63¹, 64². For avajāta cf. also DhCo. I. 178³.

⁴ P. guṇāsurodhato. W's translation "by a virtuous life" is too weak and too general. The idea is: they are not conscious of how valuable is the heritage that has come to them, they squander it frivolously.

of like kind.' But yet another kind I name — those who 22
besides the possessions taken over as family heritage, acquire thereto many other possessions and as prudent people enjoy 23 in happiness — these are known as the 'sons of higher kind'.
From my father I have inherited alone (the province of) 24
Māyāraṭṭha¹ but have now again conquered the two other provinces and brought the three kingdoms completely under 25
one umbrella. All the Damiḷas who were for him invincible, I have vanquished and all the kings of the *Vanni*² dwelling 26 here and there in mountain and wilderness I have brought over to my side. Having spread my fame everywhere also in 27 foreign lands, I have for long held sway in just fashion. I 28 have brought hither king's daughters from Jambudīpa with gifts and thereby made the nobles in the foreign land your kinsmen. The heroes of the Paṇḍus and the Coḷas, the kings 29 sprung from the dynasties of the Sun and Moon, have sent me diadems and ornaments. Also have I gathered together 30 without ceasing a mass of jewels which can be enjoyed not only by all of you here, but even in future time by seven generations of my descendants, even as the (god) Kubera 31 (gathered together) his nine treasures, the shell and the rest³.
I have put down the evil-doers and protected the honest and 32 brought unanimity to the Order of the Enlightened One.
Therefore have I become for my royal father a higher born 33 son, be ye also my sons, like me, higher born sons. As in 34 days of old the sixty thousand sons of King *Sagara*⁴ of the race of Okkāka, built as many towns, divided all land in 35

² See note to 81. 11.

³ The nine treasures of Kubera are, according to Arṭe (Skr. Eng. Diet. s. v. naganidhi; cf. also Amarakoṣa, ed. W. L. SHASTRI PANIKAR, v. 142): 1) mahāpadma "great lotus flower", 2) padma "lotus flower", 3) śaṅkha "shell", 4) makara "dolphin", 5) kacchapa "tortoise", 6) śmukha "a particular precious stone", 7) kuṇḍa "jasmine", 8) nīla "sapphire", 9) khareḥ "dwarf". The names are also personified as names of genii who are guardians of the treasures in question. Cf. HOPKINS, Epic Mythology, p. 143.

Jambudīpa into sixty thousand parts and held sway each for 36 himself in harmony; — further as aforetime the ten brothers, the kings, divided Jambudīpa into ten parts and ruled in wise
 37 fashion: so shall ye, my sons, divide this Lankā and supporting¹ 38 one another as is fitting, hold sway in able fashion, but never expose a weakness to the enemy." In this wise he admonished his own sons and his sister's son.

39 Hereupon he summoned the Great community in great numbers² and the King asked them: "Which of these six 40 princes, my sister's son and my own sons, is worthy of the royal crown?" When the Great community heard these words 41 of the King, they expressed themselves thus: "O Great king thy princely sons and this thy sister's son are all capable 42 men and well instructed; they are all practised in fighting, crushers of the alien foe and worthy of the royal crown as 43 protectors of the laity and the Order. But thy eldest son Vijayabāhu has from childhood believed with joy in the triad 44 of the jewels. His heart was ever set on the care of infirm bhikkhus, he was trustworthy, grateful, gifted with the merits 45 of faith and discernment. He was a support for such as had no support, ever abounding in pity for aged people and 46 suffering creatures. Many kinsmen by marriage of the bhikkhu community who had become enslaved during the period of 47 alien dominion³ and many other people he freed from their slavery by the gift to their masters of gold, precious stones 48 and other valuables. Many thieves who had committed thefts even in the royal palace, turned to him when punishment

² Not "the chief priests and the people", as W. has it. Mahājanan is in apposition to mahāsangha. The "people" have nothing to do with the question of the succession. In the sequel it is the priesthood alone who give the answer. Cf. also v. 71.

³ P. vājantara. See note to 81. 1. It is the time of the reign of Māgha (and of Jayabāhu, 82. 27, 83. 19) that is meant. W. has misunderstood the passage in translating "when he took the government into his hands".

overtook them. They gave up their anguish and their fear 49 and unharmed, without suffering the loss of a limb¹, their lives were spared. When O King! he beheld the people who 50 went forth to each village to collect² the taxes due to the King, he gave his own money, freed thus from various dues 51
 all people in distress and protected them continuously, versed in the protection of subjects. Also many of the Sihala kings 52 of the Vanni whom thou wast desirous of subduing, sought him out first and then only did they fearless pay their visit to thee.
 ›Ye must henceforth serve for ever with devotion³ Vijayabāhu 53 who will in the future protect the continuation of our race,‹ 54 thus are the wives in the families of the dignitaries wont in all reverence to admonish their husbands. When fathers and 55 mothers, fain to listen to the sweet infant voices of their two year and three year old children, ask them: ›Whom do ye 56 serve?‹ they say: ›We wish to serve Vijayabāhu‹. Children 57 beaten in wrath by father and mother come to him and tell their woe. Then Vijayabāhu makes the parents come to him, 58 exhorts them in his pity to beat their children no longer and 59
 lets them have from his own storehouse the necessary food for their various children. How canst thou O King, — even 60 as a man who gifted with seeing eyes, looks at the heavens where the full moon stands and yet asks where is then the full moon? — knowing as thou dost that in Vijayabāhu the 61 merits dwell which constitute the ornament of the royal dignity, yet ask the Order? Learn then O Great king! that he 62 possesses the lucky signs to hold sway not only over Laṅkā-dīpa but even over Jambudīpa."

After the Ruler had heard of these and his many other 63 merits from the mouth of the community, his eyes became moist with tears of joy thereat. Full of contentment he 64 summoned to him his son Vijayabāhu, made him sit on a seat

² Wrongly translated by W. It is not a case of people embezzling the taxes, but of the revenue officers who wished to collect them.

65 (like his own) near him, and then the Great king informed him of all that must still be carried out for the laity and 66 the Order and which had not yet been done by himself. "The Ratanāvali-cetiya¹ destroyed by alien foes, thou shalt restore 67 and adorn it with a golden point. Pulatthinagara, that splendid ornament of all towns,² which was the ancient royal city of 68 the Sihala sovereigns, do thou restore as it was of yore, with high walls and gate-towers, with four gates well distributed,
 69 and surrounded by a deep trench; and do thou bring thither to the former relic temple, fair as a heavenly palace, the two 70 relics of the Tooth and the Bowl. In this royal city of former kings I wish myself to celebrate the high festival of the royal 71 consecration. But do thou bring the whole bhikkhu community in great number³, dwelling in the three Sihala provinces, to Sahassatittha⁴, let them there after antecedent 72 sacrifice, celebrate in the Mahāvālikagangā the festival of admission to the Order and thus make the Order of the Victor prosperous.

73 After speaking thus and otherwise of all that was to be done for the laity and the Order, he gave over the burden of government into his hands.

74 And further the King entrusted him with the five remaining sons of the royal house, and the two sacred relics of the holy Sage, the Tooth and the Bowl, as also with the host of the ascetics, with the group of all the dignitaries and also the land of Laṅkā.

Here ends the eighty-seventh chapter, called «The Handing over of the Burden of Dominion», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

⁴ Now Dastota, a ford over the Mahaveliganga south of Polonnaruwa. That the bhikkhus were fond of performing their ceremonies in a building erected in the water at some distance from the bank is well known. Dastota was at that time a spot considered especially sacred where such ceremonies were performed with great pomp, as is shown also in 89. 47 ff.

CHAPTER LXXXVIII

THE REBUILDING OF PULATTHINAGARA

Fearless in heart, King Vijayabāhu gave his consent and 1 took over the burden of the government. Now he thought: 2
 "I will show my father so long as he is in life, that I am a son of the higher kind." And he probed ever further: "Who 3 is there now fitted to be the element 'friend' among the seven elements of government, as ruler, minister, friend and the like¹:
 trustworthy, a clever counsellor, a comrade in misfortune, who 4 speaks the truth, who is good to me?" And he realised: 5
 "There is the Ādipāda Virabāhu, the son of my father's sister, well-bred, adorned with virtues, skilled in all tasks.
 Since the time when we played (together) in the sand till 6 to-day he has showed the highest confidence in me and in (all) good people. He cannot bear to stand anywhere if he 7 does not see me, and I also cannot bear to take a seat without seeing him. He is at pains even as I, to further the laity and 8
 the Order, richly dowered with mental and bodily power.
 Therefore is he fitted for the element friend". He summoned 9 him to him and entrusted him with the position of a devoted friend.

¹ The satta rajjaṅgāni are enumerated in Abhp. 350. They are: sāmi "ruler, monarch", amacca "minister", sakkā "friend", koṣa "state treasure", duggaṃ "fortress", viññāṃ "land, kingdom" and balam "army". In the Kauṭaliya, they are enumerated at the beginning of Book 6 as the (sapta) prakṛtayaḥ: suāmyamātyaṇapadadurgakoṣadandawitrāṇi. Why J. J. Mervin in his translation should have left out koṣa (p. 397) I cannot understand. Cf. ib. p. 399³⁰, as well as R. SHAMASASTRY, Kauṭilya's Arthasāstra, tral., p. 319. In Śaṅkhya's Abhidhānapadīpikāśūci a verse is quoted from Kāmandaki in which the same terms are grouped together.

10 Then he thought: "Now I must perform a meritorious work — splendid, sublime, rejoicing the heart. I was entrusted 11 with the two relics, the Tooth and the Bowl. For these I must now build a new temple. On the other hand, the an-12 cient relic temple erected by my royal forefathers¹, has fallen 13 into decay. This I will restore." With this consideration, he had fetched from all parts many groups of artists experienced in 14 every branch of art and many other workmen; and erecting new structures doubly as fair to look at as the former build-15 ings, he completed the whole temple of the Tooth Relic, so that it was beauteous as a heavenly palace; placed there the 16 two relics of the Enlightened One and ordered his own guard to institute day by day a great sacrificial festival richer than 17 aforetime, for the relics. From this time onward the King succeeded in making the love of his royal father (for him) increase continuously, twofold and threefold.

18 Thought the Ruler: my royal father shall have no grief arising from the separation from his sons, and he made his 19 two younger brothers, Parakkamabāhu and Jayabāhu, dwell 20 continually near their father. Hereupon he summoned his younger brother Tilokamalla and placed under his command 21 all the Sihala troops quartered in the space between the town
22 of Jambuddoṇi and the southern sea and made him take up his abode in Mahāvattthalagāma², to protect his royal father 23 on the south. Then he reflected: "In the north, foes coming from the opposite coast are wont to land in Khuddavāligāma.
24 Who is so fitted to protect this side — perilous, since it is here that fighting is wont to begin — as my brother, the Prince

¹ P. pūtarājāhi. W. translates "by the King, my father". He evidently regards rājāhi as a plur. maiest. I believe however, that the term applies to Vijayabāhu III. and Parakkamabāhu II. What is meant is the relic temple in the Vijayasundara-vihāra in Jambuddoṇi which is said in 85. 91-2 to have been built by Vijayabāhu III. and renewed by Parakkamabāhu II.

² Perhaps identical with Vattalagāma mentioned in 81. 58. The difference in the writing may possibly be explained in this way that vattala is the pure Sinhalese form, while vattala is adapted to the Pāli.

Bhuvanekabāhu?" The Ruler summoned him therefore, made 25 over to him the great army that stood in the north and 26 commanded him to take up his abode in Sundarapabbata¹, in order to protect his royal father from this quarter. But the 27 King himself armed, marched with Virabāhu hither and thither, crushed all villains, made Laṅkā free from the briers (of the 28 enemy) and after getting his father's permission, he set forth with the intention of restoring Pulatthinagara.

Now at this time the Great king Parakkamabāhu, as if 29 borne on the great wave of his love for his son, set about accompanying his son, full of sympathy, travelling everywhere 30 after him, although the son did not wish it. Then the son ever 31 and again forced his father in reverent manner to return, he himself going on his way. Then his father issued the order: 32
 "All people who cherish love for my son let them accompany him." When they heard these words of his, then all the high 33 dignitaries of the King and all the generals, all the great 34 hero warriors and all the elephant drivers, all the riders and all the charioteers were filled with the greatest joy. "Now our 35 Bodhisatta Vijayabāhu² sets forth to restore the royal city of Pulatthinagara. If he goes we shall go with him at once." Thus 36 they spake and started forth well equipped to accompany him.
 When a certain number of dignitaries, soldiers and others, 37 out of laziness, were not minded to go, their wives said to them: "Ye, our lords, may come with us or not, at any rate 38
 we are going with the King who seeks the best, and we shall 39 dwell with him in the newly restored, splendid town". And they set forth therewith on their way before them. Even 40 children deserted their fathers, if they would not go with them and followed the King. When the King beheld the great 41 crowd of people setting forth, each deserting his village, his house and his comfortable possessions, he persuaded them 42 again and again in his great anxiety, and induced all those

¹ The same as Subhapabbata or Subhagiri = Yāpahu.

² The influence again of the Mahāyāna. Cf. 50. 65, 85. 119, 86. 5.
 Also in Rājaraṭṭa. and Nik.-s. the King is called Bōsat Vijayabāhu.

43 whom it was right to induce, to return. Then he betook himself with the four-membered army in the desired strength, 44 to the great and loftily situated fortress of Vātagiri¹. After building a splendid royal palace on the summit of this mountain, 45 surrounded by an extraordinarily high wall, he stored there in case of need, the whole of the great treasure given over 46 to him by his royal father. Thereupon he built on the same high rock a fine monastery for the community, invited the 47 Grand therā, the head of the Mahānettappāsāda-shrine², made over to him the splendid monastery, celebrated a great sacrificial festival and established a regular offering.

48 Hereupon the King went forth to Sumanakūṣa, venerated
 the footprint of the Sage (Buddha) and betook himself there-49 after to Gaṅgāsiripura³. There in the ancient vihāra that bore the name Nigamaggāmapāsāda, he saw to the restoration of 50 what was ruinous and decayed, established for the bhikkhus dwelling there a regular almsgiving and came thereafter to 51 Sindhūravāna. Here the King erected the vihāra called Vānaggāmapāsāda and after building there in the name of his 52 royal father⁴ the pariveṇa called Abhayarāja, he granted it the various articles of equipment, villages, fields and so forth.
 53 Then the Monarch betook himself to the splendid Hatthigiri-pura⁵. While here in the great vihāra built by his princely uncle 54 (Bhuvanekabāhu), he gazed along with Prince Virabāhu⁶ and his army again and again at the ever to be honoured spot 55 where his corpse was laid (on the pyre), he felt anguish and gained there again and again the inner conception of impermanency¹. Hereupon he erected there a splendid, three-storeyed 56 image-house and had made for it a great image of the Buddha.

 Then having had further a fine statue of his uncle fashioned, 57
 he set it up there adorned with all ornaments. The Ruler 58 assigned (his foundation) fine maintenance villages fitted for their purpose, lying around the image-house, as well as numbers of people for service, and decreed for it (the foundation) the 59 name Bhuvanekabāhu-pariveṇa, using for it the name of that (uncle). Then after he had settled the town (Hatthigiri) densely 60 with men and women, he had it enclosed with wall, moat and so forth. Thereafter the brave King set forth and marched 61 with the vast four-membered army to Subhagiripura².

At that time the Lord of men Candabhānu, formerly³ beaten 62 after hard fighting, having collected from the countries of the Paṇḍus and Coḷas and elsewhere many Damiḷa soldiers, 63 representing a great force, landed with his Jāvaka army in Mahātittha. After the King had brought over to his side the 64 Sīhalas dwelling in Padī, Kurundi⁴ and other districts, he marched to Subhagiri. He set up there an armed camp and 65 sent forth messengers with the message: "I shall take Tisīhala⁵;
 I shall not leave it to thee. Yield up to me therefore together with the Tooth Relic of the Sage, the Bowl Relic and the 66 royal dominion. If thou wilt not, then fight." Thereupon 67 Vijayabāhu summoned the Ruler⁶ Virabāhu, took counsel with him, had a strong force equipped for him and spake: "Hurrah, 68 to-day both of us shall see the strength of our arms." Then the two set forth⁷, surrounded the great army of Candabhānu on 69 all sides and fought a great battle, terrible as a combat of Rāma. Then were the hostile warriors subdued in battle and 70

71 weaponless the soldiers of the foe¹ wandered around, prayed 72 and implored, tortured by fear, were benumbed, trembled, 73 begged for mercy in the fight, whined and grieved full of 74 terror. In their distress certain of the foe fled to the forest, 75 others to the sea, others again to the mountains. After 76 Vijayabāhu had thus fought and slain many soldiers, he sent 77 the Lord of men Candabbānu flying defenceless. But the 78 loveliest women of his court and all the elephants and horses, 79 the swords and many other weapons, the entire treasure, the 80 trumpets of victory, the umbrella of victory, the drum of 81 victory, the banner of victory — all these he sent to his father.

76 Having in this way fought the fiery battle, conquered the province and won the victory, he united Laṅkā under the umbrella of his dominion.

77 Hereupon he had this town (Subhagiri) also surrounded by a high rampart and a trench and built there a superb 78 royal palace. Having finished it, he established then in that town a regular almsgiving for the great bhikkhu community. Then he 79 spake encouragingly to his younger brother King Bhuvanekabāhu and made him take up his abode as before in Subhappabbata.

80 Now the Ruler betook himself to Anurādhapura and there round about the Thūpārāma and all the other sacred places 81 he had the mighty forest — that was like a stronghold created by Māra — felled and a wall erected which was as a bridge 82 over the stream of his hopes. Then after the Ruler had had these sacred places embellished by new buildings, he celebrated 83 a great sacrificial festival. But as he wished to complete the work of restoration on the Ratanāvālī-cetiya², begun but not 84 finished by his royal father, he assembled with the greatest speed all people dwelling in the town from the places where 85 individuals sojourned, ordered numbers of skilful workmen hither and having established for the community at whose head 86 stood the chief Thera of the Senānātha-pariveṣa³ a regular almsgiving¹, he appointed the Thera to look after the work of restoration. Thereupon the Monarchs of the Vanni who 87 were living in Paṭiṭṭhāraṭṭha, sought out the Ruler, bringing him many gifts. He (on his part) presented them with rocking 88 chairs, white umbrellas, fly-whisks and other insignia for the great kings of the Vanni people. Therewith he made them 89 all contented, charged them to protect the town (Anurādhapura) and betook himself from there to Pulatthinagara.

There the Monarch summoned to him the ruler Virabāhu: 90 "We shall embellish this town, originally the royal city, and fill the universe with the camphor perfume of the exuberant 91 abundance of our glory." After these words he took counsel with him and spake thereupon: "In the town called Pulatthinagara 92 there are now pāsādas, image-houses, vihāras, pariveṇas, cetiyas and relic temples, walls, gate-towers, houses of the aḍḍhayoga 93 and of the hammiya kind², maṇḍapas, sermon halls, temples to deities and other buildings. Some of these stand erect, covered 94 with grass, trees and whatever else has grown upon them. Others have collapsed without support as the whole of their pillars perished; others again alas! will fall, bending under 95 the weight of walls cracked from top to foot, because other support is wanting. Some of these, through decay and old age 96 are like greybeards, and unable to stand erect, they become more bowed from day to day. With many the joists are broken³ and 97 their pinnacles destroyed⁴, with others the roofs have decayed⁵

 101 the place where they once stood is now to be seen. Of what use are many words? This town which has lost all its glory we shall again make glorious. The Ruler must give his consent.
 102 Then later he may celebrate the royal consecration in the splendid city." With this charge he sent a messenger to his father.

103 When the King heard these tidings, his heart was full of joy, and as he himself had cherished the wish to restore the 104 original royal town, he summoned the circle of the great digni-taries from every quarter, and issuing his commands to all the 105 inhabitants of Lanḱā, he brought together the workers in iron, 106 the turners, bamboo workers², blacksmiths, potters, goldsmiths, painters, porters, workmen, slaves, the caṇḍālas who understood 107 work for hire, the bricklayers, workers in stucco, carpenters 108 and the guilds of masons, and in addition to these all blacksmith's tools, such as bellows, hammers, tongs, sledge-hammers, anvils, as well as many sharp saws, axes, hatchets, (wedges) 109 for splitting trees and for crushing stones, knives, chisels³, shovels, mats, baskets and so forth. All these appliances he 110 gave carefully to the people and also much money, such as pearls, precious stones and the like and sent it with the people¹ to his royal son. Thereupon in the devastated land, long desolate, King Vijayabāhu, happy at heart, had the water 111 system — tanks, ponds, dykes, pools and the like — in 112 which the embankments had given way, and which were deprived of their deep water, dammed up as before, filled with 113 deep water, covered with divers lotus blossoms and stocked with all kinds of fish. Then he had many valuable fields 114 which had always been ground on which grew every kind of corn, newly planted, had all kinds of crops grown here and 115 there and made the whole fair land prosperous. And the Ruler 116 restored superb Pulatthinagara as it had been aforetime, surrounded by a moat, deep as the sea, with a fine chain of walls like to the Cakkavālā mountains², provided with divers vihāras, 117 surrounded by various monastic parks with divers bathing-ponds, filled with a variety of cetiyas, sprinkled with various aḍḍha- 118 yogas³, adorned with divers pāsādas, built over with a variety of hammiyas³, embellished with divers maṇḍapas, provided 119 with all sorts of temples to deities, resplendent with every kind of gate-towers, fair with the rows of divers houses, 120 boasting a variety of streets, with four well-distributed gates, with fine squares and road-crossings.

In this fashion the King had the town of Pulatthinagara 121 — comparable to the city of Indra⁴ — restored, so that it surpassed Mithilā, subdued Kāñcīpurī, laughed to scorn Sāvattī, subdued Madhurā, turned to shame Bārāṇasī, reduced Vesālī to nothing and made Campāpurī⁵ tremble with her glory.

Chapter LXXXIX

DESCRIPTION OF THE FESTIVAL OF THE KING'S CONSECRATION AND OTHER FESTIVALS

The King spake: "This Pulatthinagara is now thus restored 1 as before, dowered with all that belongs to a city. This town is 2 now radiant with happiness, splendour and beauty. She has surpassed Jetuttara and will now surpass Sāgalā. After van- 3 quishing Sumsumāragiri, what need hath she to care for Sā-keta? Ha! even Rājagaha she wishes to capture as it is. She 4 has destroyed Sampassa and now scorns Indapatta. She dares to challenge¹ Kapilavattu². Therefore shall the King, the 5

¹ P. samkhyam ussahate kattum. I think that samkhyā here is = skr. samkhyā and means "fight" (BR. s. v. 4). The Col. Ed. reads sakhyam and W. translates: "seeketh friendship with K." This I think is not so good, as ussahate has then no meaning. It looks as if the author here as also in 88. 121, by the accumulation of synonyms for the term "surpass", wishes to show his intimacy with the rules of alamkāra. Cf. the expressions in Daṇḍin's Kāvyaḍāraśa 2. 62 ff. with those used in this passage.

² The author returns here, repeating himself, to the idea already treated in the final strophe of chap. 88. He displays his geographical knowledge which he apparently borrows from the Abhidhānappadīpikā where in v. 200 and 201 all the towns named by him are enumerated: 1) Jetuttara, often mentioned in the Jātakas as the capital of the Sivi country (skr. śibi). Cf. FAUSDÖLL Jāt., Index; 2) Sāgalā, abode of the King Milinda (Milp. ed. TRESCHEER, p. 1); 3) Sumsumāragiri, according to M. I. 95, II. 91; S. III. 1, IV. 116; A. II. 61 etc. a town in the country of the Bhaggas (skr. Bhargava); 4) Sāketa, name of the town Ayodhyā (now Oudh) in the Kosala country. M. I. 149 and often otherwise in the Nikāyas and the Jātaka book; 5) Rājagaha, capital of Māgadha; 6) Sampassa (skr. Saṃkassya), mentioned in the Jātakas, according to JāCo. IV. 265³⁸ thirty yojanas from Sāvattihī, was situated chief of kings, even as Sakka, the overlord of the gods, did 6 in the city of Sakka¹, enter this city in all his majesty to celebrate the festival of the royal consecration." Therewith 7 he sent a messenger to his father. When the King heard from the mouth of the messenger the uninterrupted narrative, he rejoiced greatly and betook himself at the head of his 8 army with all the mighty pomp worthy of a king, from the town of Jambuddoṇī to the chief capital (of the kingdom).

 9 And King Vijayabāhu went the distance of a gāvuta² towards him and accompanied the Great king to the royal capital.
 10 For seven days he celebrated in the town the high festival of the royal consecration and carried it out in the (right) 11 sequence to the end. But after he had made over the Northern province³ to Virabāhu and made him take up his abode in 12 the prosperous royal city, he declared: I shall bring the relics of the Sage to this royal city, and betook himself with his royal father to the town of Jambuddoṇī.

13 Hereupon the King gathered together a great multitude of the inhabitants of Laṅkā and had the great highway from 14 the town of Jambuddoṇī to splendid Pulatthinagara, five yojanas⁴ wide made level and throughout, always at a distance 15 of half a yojana, he had a costly rest-house built, gracefully (adorned) with festive banners, rows of bananas, triumphal 16 arches and the like. Thereupon he placed the two relics of the great Seer, Tooth and Bowl, on a high chariot which was 17 fair in its splendour as a heavenly chariot. With numerous capital of the Śākya in the territory of the present Nepal, birthplace 75 miles, as the crow flies (5 y. = 45 miles).

groups of the bhikkhu community who, paying homage, encircled¹ on every side the incomparable, splendid, festive chariot, of the sacred relics, as if they were the hosts of the Brahmas 18 who surround the sacred chariot of Brahma, he set forth from the superb city, great Jambuddopī. The sacrificial festival which he arranged² was beautified by the people entrusted 24 with the various duties³ who letting unceasingly their cries of Hail! resound, went before or followed after⁴ and bore with them for the sacrificial festival umbrellas of gold and pearl, 19 golden fly-whisks, inlaid with pearl, banners of gold and pearl, wreaths set with gold and pearl, further golden and silver 20 jars⁵, fans of gold and silver, golden and silver vases, golden and silver shells, golden and silver bowls, golden and silver 21 urns, golden and silver basins, golden and silver mirrors, golden and silver banana trees, tiny shells of gold and silver, 22 golden and silver horses, golden and silver elephants, as well 23 as countless silver and golden lamp-stands and the rest. The festival was surrounded by rows of elephants excellent by 25 reason of the elephant ornaments by which they were o'er-spread⁶, by rows of steeds worth seeing for the abundance of every kind of equine ornament, by the ranks of heroic warriors 26 who with divers weapons in their hands and wearing warlike ornament, played their war games, by the ranks of princes, 27

² This is taken from v. 36 a mahāpūjāṃ paravatto. The following accusatives are attributes of mahāpūjāṃ: manoharaṃ (v. 24 d), parisevitaṃ (v. 27 d), maṇḍitaṃ (v. 28 d), parivāritaṃ (v. 30 d), parighositaṃ (v. 32 d), pasamsitaṃ (v. 34 b), thomitaṃ (v. 34 c) and parisevitaṃ (v. 35 d).

28 nobles and councillors who wore festive clothing and flaunted manifold ornament. The glory (of the festival) was enhanced 29 by the cries of people who thirsting for merit shouted O hail!
 30 O hail! O hail! The festival was surrounded by serried rows of lay sisters and lay brethren who led pure lives and who in their zeal each for himself pressed forward bearing flowers 31 and the like as offerings. Around it raged the uproar of sturdy palace servitors who were ever and again now here 32 now there, well beaten in fun by other sturdy palace servitors as if they were people fighting out a mighty quarrel with one 33 another. It was filled with the songs of praise¹ of the bards who sang festive songs, making thereto on the five instruments 34 fine music which spread abroad and charmed² the hearers, also with the songs of the minstrels who again and again let 35 their praises resound. In devotion there surrounded it the dancers and the actors who performed dances and sang songs 36 delightful to see and to hear. Thus performing by degrees in perfect order the high sacrifice, he was wont when in mov-37 ing along the decorated road, he came to the previously erected rest-houses, to set up the relics in each of these, (he) performed each time a high festival, started again from each 38 (rest-house), continued ever on his way and so brought by degrees the relics of the Prince of the wise to the royal capital³.

39 Then after the King had turned the whole city into a single great place of festival — at a favorable moment when 40 constellation, day and hour were auspicious, in the ancient, decorated relic temple, fair as the palace of the King of the 41 gods — most splendid of all temples — he solemnly and in careful manner placed the two relics on a costly throne em-42 bellished by all manner of jewels. From that time onwards, day by day more, with the four kinds of perfume¹, with fine, fragrant incense, with divers kinds of blossoms of the punnāga, 43 nāga, pūga² and other trees, with countless camphor lamps of precious stones giving a brilliant light, with rows of cande- 44 labra on which burned fragrant oil, with dishes full of the finest rice prepared with sweet milk, with heaps of food 45 composed of sweet-smelling rice like to the Kelāsa³ mountain, with all hard and soft foods and with all that can be drunk or sipped and other (things) the wise Prince celebrated for 46 another three months a world-rejoicing sacrificial festival for the relics, amid the clang of the shell trumpets⁴ and thus brought (the festival) to a close.

Then spake the Ruler: "Let us perform in Sabassatittha 47 a blameless festival for admission to the Order⁵." He first sent 48 the Monarch Vīrabāhu thither. There he made him erect besides several thousand rooms of sojourn for the community⁶, a lofty 49 house of festival resting on sixty pillars⁷ which gleamed with manifold ornament and possessed arches covered with cloth⁸. Hereupon he had prepared the divers objects for the ceremony 50 of admission to the Order and all the four articles of use. And then after the Vanni kings who in this and that province, 51 in Patitthāraṭṭha, in Rohaya and so forth, had collected with great care, much rice with the divers ingredients such as fish, 52 meat and the rest, (had gathered together) great loads of grain, sour and sweet milk, butter and so forth, also honey, 53 treacle, thickened sugar juice, raw sugar, lump sugar and the like, as well as all things fitting for an offering to the Great

54 community, King Vijayabāhu betook himself thither. He issued the invitation: "Let us take in hand the arrangement 55 of a festival for admission to the Order. Let all the Grand theras, all the middle-aged and the youthful who have trust 56 in their hearts towards us, the lords among the ascetics not fail to come to Sahassatittha," and (he) sent messengers 57 everywhere (with the invitation)¹. When all the individual groups of ascetics settled in Tambapannī heard this news, they 58 rejoiced greatly and set forth on their way from every quarter, without allowing even the administrator of their provisions to 59 remain behind, and in haste the heroes among the ascetics 60 assembled by degrees well prepared in Sahassatittha². The King who again and again³ surveyed Sahassatittha surrounded 61 as it was with ascetics felt a befitting⁴ joy, and in abundant measure the Ruler supplied the Great bhikkhu community as 62 was seemly, with excellent food and drink. Then celebrating day by day here in Sahassatittha a great sacrificial festival, 63 he made those bhikkhus who were called thereto, perform the ceremony of admission for those who were desirous of entering the Order, and celebrated the ceremony of admission 64 to the Order for half a month. Thereupon the King granted the rank of a Grand Master⁵, the rank of a Chief Thera⁶, the rank of a Grand Thera and the rank of a Pariveṇa-Thera⁷ prosperity of the Order, deserved to receive this or that rank.

Then having bestowed on them the eight articles of use, fair, 66 worthy of a king, to the value of a thousand (gold pieces), and also to the other ascetics in succession, costly articles of 67 use, he sent many remaining articles of use to the bhikkhus settled in the Paṇḍu and Coḷa countries. Then when all his 68 wishes had received fulfilment, he guided by right knowledge¹, sent a messenger to his father and announced to him: "All 69 meritorious works which I have performed I have performed in the name of my royal father."

Thus in granting admission to the Order to numerous 70
 ascetics at the great ford of the Vālikā river called Sahassa, in the correctly drawn² boundary, known as the 'throwing up of the waters'³, he made lustrous the nine-fold doctrine⁴ of the sublime Buddha.

After he had for a long time made over the burden of 71
 government⁵ to his own world-famed son, this most excellent

¹ P. āñāpupubbāṅgamaṃ kateṭṭa, "placing right knowledge at the head." He was conscious that he was only his father's representative. W. uses the words in the oratio recta and translates: "What-soever merit hath been performed by me with a pure mind."

² P. parisodhita, lit. purified.

³ P. akkhepaṭṭā, a term difficult to explain and occurring again 94. 17 and 97. 12. It has reference to the ceremony being performed in a building erected in a lake or in a river (see above note to 87. 71). The boundary which must enclose the space set apart for ecclesiastical functions must thus be drawn in the water. In fixing it water would have to be "thrown up" (skr. kṣip with ud), just as the earth is thrown up in fixing a boundary on land. W's note gives a correct definition: "a space in a sheet of water, duly defined, for purposes of ordination and other ecclesiastical functions". But this does not explain the etymology of the expression.

⁴ P. navaṅgikaṃ sāsanaṃ. The nine "members" (aṅga) of the holy scriptures are 1) sutta "discourse"; 2) geyya, the same with an admixture of verse; 3) veyyākaraṇa "exposition" without verse (chiefly the Abhidhamma); 4) gāthā "stanza"; 5) udāna; 6) itivuttaka; 7) jātaka, the well known three books belonging to the tipiṭaka; 8) abbhutadhamma "discourses relating to mysterious conditions"; 9) vedalla, title of some special suttas.

⁵ P. bhūbhāra, lit. "burden of the earth". Cf. skr. bhūbhartṛ "prince, ruler".

King Parakkamabāhu who as described¹, performed through his son an abundance of meritorious works, entered heaven when he had attained his thirty-fifth year (of reign)².

Here ends the eighty-ninth chapter, called »Description of the Festival of the King's Consecration and Other Festivals», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

² According to Rājāv. 32 years, Pūjāv. 33 years. The number given in the Mhv. includes those years when Vijayabāhu carried on the government. The latter is called Bōsat Vijayabāhu by the Nik.-s. as well as by the Rājaratn.

CHAPTER XC

THE HISTORY OF THE EIGHT KINGS, OF VIJAYABĀHU AND HIS SUCCESSORS

Now in the second year of King Vijayabāhu¹ who after 1 Parakkamabāhu's death, held sway over all Laṅkā, one of his 2 generals, Mitta by name, a faithless friend², won over as associate a slave belonging to the immediate entourage of the King. Out of lust for dominion the recreant made him whom 3 he had bribed by gifts, slay the Ruler at night. Now when 4 the younger brother of the King, the King Bhuvanekabāhu³ 5 heard of this event, he left the town of Jambuddoṇi, mounted in his fear a covered litter⁴ and sped on his way to the fortress of Subhācala⁵. But people who had received gifts 6 from the hands of the evil general Mitta, and were therefore bound to him from the outset, nine wicked, brutal brothers 7 from the clan of the Monasīhas⁶, pursued him and pitilessly pierced the Monarch's litter so fiercely with their pointed spears 8 that everything — seat, girths and the like⁷ were in tatters.

¹ Rājāv. jumps from Vijayabāhu IV., passing over his immediate successors, to the history of Alakesvara and the Chinese invasion. See note to 91. 14.

² P. dummitta with reference to the general's name mitta "friend".

³ Rājaraṭn. calls him Lokekabāhu Bhuvanekabāhu, Nik.-a. Mahābhuvanaikabāhu.

⁴ P. gāṇa, used of every kind of conveyance. W's translation "litter" is undoubtedly right.

⁵ Subhācala is like its synonyms: Subhagiri, Subhapabbata, Sundarapabbata, the name for the present so-called Yāpahu.

⁶ See note to 38. 13.

⁷ P. andolipattakādikaṃ. The seats of these litters were evidently suspended in girths to counterbalance the shaking. Hence the expression andoli "swing", while pattaka means the girths.

9 He (Bhuvanekabāhu) sprang to the ground from the litter and betook himself in haste, unharmed, to the village of Kāla-10 gallaka¹. Here from a stall where elephants were tethered², 11 he took a specially good elephant, mounted it and having again crossed the great Koḷabhinna river then in flood, the King reached that selfsame Subhagiri.

12 Now the Senāpati Mitta forced his way into the town of Jambuddoṇī, into the palace of the Great king, seated himself 13 on the splendid lion throne of the Great king, and showed himself, the recreant, to the whole army his person adorned with 14 the royal ornaments. But now all the dignitaries who sup-15 ported him, came together, one following the other. They thought: "We must under all circumstances win over by (means of) proper pay the whole army, that part belonging to our 16 own country as well as the alien part." They began in the first instance, to hand over their pay to the chivalrous Āriya 17 warriors³ at the head of whom was Thakuraka. But these declared: "We have at all times been people who one felt must be won over. Now ye must under all circumstances, 18 first of all by good pay win over the Sīhala warriors and make them contented." And none of them now accepted the 19 pay. "Be it so", answered the others. They paid all the Sīhalas their money and then called upon the Āriya to take 20 their pay. But again they refused with the words: "Our pay 21 shall be handed to us later; we shall not take it now." So although all the ministers ever and again urgently pressed 22 them⁴ to accept their pay, the well-armed⁵ Āriya knights

² P. gaḷabandhāniyaṃ is the loc. of -dhant (fem. of -dhana).

⁴ P. nibandhaṃ karoti "makes an urgent petition". Cf. VvCo. 260¹² devī punappunāṃ nibandhaṃ karoti "the queen urged him again and again (to fulfil her wish)."

⁵ P. sajjita. This is obviously meant to call attention to the declared: "We shall say everything in the presence of the King." They betook themselves to the King's abode and when they saw the Senāpati Mitta sitting on the lion throne, they stood for a time respectfully there. Then the warrior Thakuraka who was possessed of an undaunted heart, gave his comrades a sign, took his sharp sword and in a moment swiftly struck off the Senāpati's head so that it fell to the ground. Now when hereupon a great hubbub arose in the town, all the Sīhala soldiers who were a mighty force, banded themselves together and asked the Āriya soldiers with Thakuraka at their head: "Why have ye done this evil deed?" They replied: "It took place at the command of King Bhuvanekabāhu who abides in Subhagiri." With the words: "Be it so", all the Āriya and Sīhala warriors united and brought the King, their lord, Bhuvanekabāhu from the town of Subhagiri to the town of Jambuddopī and with reverence consecrated him King.

From that time onward the King made the whole double army obedient to his will by assigning them salaries and the like, drove back all the Damiḷa foes, like Kālīngarāyara, Coḷagaṅgadeva and the rest who had landed from the opposite coast, as also the Vanni kings in Sīhala, Kadalivāṣa, Āpūna, Tipa, Himiyānaka and so on, and freed Laṅkā from the briers of the foe. He took up his abode for several years in the town of Jambuddopī, betook himself thereupon to the town of Subhagiri, had built here an extensive royal city, gleaming in the beauty, and abode there.

As he then won over all his subjects by a just policy, he was a just king and a believing adherent of the Doctrine. He bestowed on the skilful scribes of the sacred books abundant money and had the whole of the Tipiṭaka copied by them, had it preserved here and there in the vihāras of Laṅkā, and thus the Lord of men caused the dissemination of the sacred texts¹. Several times, too, the Ruler caused the festival of admission to the Order — which is a festival for the world — to be so celebrated that it was radiant with the splendid offerings made, and thus he brought growth and prosperity to the Order of the Sage — the Order whose sublime greatness must be revered by the (inhabitants of the) three worlds. He celebrated daily a great sacrifice for the Tooth Relic and he provided the bhikkhu community with the four articles of equipment.

In this wise he wrought good, while dwelling in Subhagiri and after carrying on the government for 11 years, he entered heaven.

Once when (here in Laṅkā) a famine arose¹, there landed, sent with an army by the five brothers, the kings who held sway in the Paṇḍu realm, a Damiḷa general known by the name of Āriyacakkavattin who though he was no Āriya² was yet a great dignitary of great power. He laid waste the kingdom in every direction and entered the proud stronghold, the town of Subhagiri. The sacred Tooth Relic³ and all the costly treasures there he seized and returned with them to the Paṇḍu kingdom. There he made over the Tooth Relic to King Kulasekhara⁴ who was as the sun for the lotus blossom of the stem of the great kings of the Paṇḍu.

¹ There is a gap in the text here. Of v. 43a the MSS. have only chātasmīṃ, five syllables are therefore wanting. The Col. Ed. supplements jāyamānasmiṃ. I should prefer chātasmīṃ idha jātasmīṃ, because the similarity of the first and third words would make the slip of the writer of the archetype easily intelligible.

² See above, note to v. 16.

³ According to 89. 41 Vijayabāhu had deposited the Tooth and Bowl Relics in Pulatthinagara. Evidently his successor had brought them back to Subhagiri to the town built by him there, a theory supported by 90. 41. The Sinhalese kings liked to keep the palladium of the kingdom in their immediate neighbourhood. It is remarkable how in the later parts of the Mbva. the pattadhātu is relegated to the background — it is only just mentioned again in 90. 72 — and how the whole religious and political interest centres in the daṭṭhādātu.

⁴ Kulasekhara reigned 1268—1808 (H. W. COCHRAN, HC. p. 80). His general Āriya Cakravartin is mentioned in a South Indian inscription (No. 110 in Annual Report of Epigraphy, Southern Circle, Madras Government, 1903 according to COCHRAN, l. c. p. 87).

Hereupon the son of the Bodhisatta Vijayabāhu¹ and grand- 48
 son of the mighty King Parakkamabāhu (II.), Parakkama- 49 bāhu by name, became king and raised aloft — as if to fend off like a cloud the heat from the people who dwelt in 50
 Laṅkā — the umbrella (of dominion), the emblem of its proud kings — fair through the cool shade (it gave) and like to the disk of the full moon. And he reflected: "That Tooth Relic 51 which was taken to the Paṇḍu kingdom — that relic of the Prince of the wise, our highest protecting deity, worthy of veneration by our race, how shall I bring it back from there?" 52
 And as the Ruler saw no other means but friendly negotiation, he set forth in the company of several able warriors, betook 53 himself to the Paṇḍu kingdom and sought out the Ruler of the Paṇḍus. By daily conversations he inclined him favourably, received from the hands of the King the Tooth Relic, returned 54 to the Island of Laṅkā and placed the relic in superb Pu- 55 latthinagara in the former relic temple. Then the Ruler took 56 up his abode in this city and began to carry on the government without transgressing the precepts laid down for kings².
 The King performed daily a festival for the Tooth Relic and 57 accumulated unweariedly a great abundance of meritorious works. He provided the bhikkhu community with robes and 58
 the other articles of use and thus having furthered the laity and the Order, he fell under the power of death.

The son of Bhuvanekabāhu, the ruler of the town of 59
 Subhagiri³, Bhuvanekabāhu became king in Hatthigiri-

¹ See 88. 35 and note. The Mhva. tells us nothing of the fate of the younger brothers of Bhuvanekabāhu I.: Tilokamalla, Parakkamabāhu and Jayabāhu (88. 19-20). Evidently they died before Bhuvanekabāhu.

² P. rajanīti. W's translation "laws of Manu" is too restricted.

³ With reference to a fragmentary interpolation in three MSS. after the line 59ab see my edition as well as W's note on p. 316. The translation would run as follows: "With the constant thought: the son of Bhuvanekabāhu, the ruler of the town of Subhagiri, the prince by name Bhuvanekabāhu, cherishes the desire for (usurping) the royal dignity at a future time, the King Parakkamabāhu ordered a barber with the help of the king's people to put out both his eyes although 60 pura¹. The Lord of men wishing to acquire merit, rejoicing in generosity and other good deeds, instituted permanently a 61 regular alms of food for the bhikkhu community. Every year the King celebrated in a manner worthy of the highest kingly power, the festival of his coronation and in conjunction with 62 that in the Jeṭṭhamūla² month, after an opulent sacrificial festival, he had the ceremony of admission to the Order performed. Thus he made the Order of the Victor shine 63 brightly. After having performed these and many other meritorious works in manifold ways, the second³ Bhuvanekabāhu also fell a victim to impermanence.

64 His still more eminent son, Parakkamabāhu⁴, wise and dowered with courage, was (thereupon king) in the superb 65 city. With the love of faith in the three (sacred) objects, he assembled the bhikkhus and made them perform several times 66 over the ceremony of admission to the Order. In the royal courtyard he erected in careful fashion a temple for the Tooth Relic, fair with its walls and pillars, painted with bright-hued 67 pictures, provided with golden spires⁵, with gate posts of 68 gold, splendid, three storeys high. There he set up a canopy 69 of coloured stuffs, strips of cloth and the like. This he decorated he was his younger brother (cousin)" The last words are unintelligible because the sentence has been left unfinished.

¹ The text here has like 99. 77 the synonym Haṭṭhisalapura (Kurunegala). The Nik.-s. calls the king Vat-himi-bhuvanaikabāhu.

² June—July.

³ The Col. Ed. has dutiyo and W. translated accordingly: "in the second year of his reign." Conington (C. A. L. R. X. 2, p. 91) emended this into dutiyo and this emendation is confirmed by all the MSS. known to me. Conington, (HC. p. 82), points out quite rightly that according to the Dajadā-sirita the King must have reigned at least 9 years. The wording of v. 61 points also to a longer reign. Rājaraṭṭa gives the number of years reigned and the number of the coronation festivals as 24.

⁴ Nik.-s. and Rājaraṭṭa call him Paṇḍitaparākramabāhu. For āsi in 64d 91. 9 with note should be compared. The ascent of the throne by Parakkamabāhu IV. took place according to the Dajadā-sirita in the Saka year 1247 = 1325/6 A. D. (Conington, l. c.).

⁵ P. siṅga = skr. śṛṅga, BR. s. v. 1 f. Cf. 90. 90.

with garlands of gold, silver and pearl which hung down on all sides and he attached to it a wall of silken curtains adorned therewith¹. Here (in the tent) he spread a seat, radiant with coloured draperies, and decorated it on every side with rows of golden and silver vases and with rows of candelabra of silver, gold and precious stones. On this seat he then full of reverence, placed the casket with the Tooth Relic and the casket with the Bowl Relic. Hereupon he set about performing day by day a great sacrificial festival in worthy fashion for the relics of the Master — a festival glorious with flowers and perfumes and with lamps and incense, provided with all foods soft and solid and with all that one drinks or sips, beautified by the reverberating² sound of the five musical instruments, fair through the dances and songs performed by the dancing girls and the actors, preparing delight for the world. With villages and fields, women slaves and men slaves, with elephants, cattle, buffaloes and other gifts he celebrated a sacrificial festival for the relics. With the reflection: "What the daily ceremonial was in the lifetime of the Enlightened One, the highest guide of the whole world, that of the Tooth Relic shall be from this day henceforth," the King composed in the Sīhala tongue a work expounding this, with the title "Ceremonial of the Tooth Relic"³ and in keeping with it he performed daily a daily ceremony for the relic⁴.

² P. vijumbhamāna, otherwise as a rule vijambh. Cf. skr. jrambh, jrambhate.

⁴ The passage is significant. It shows that in Ceylon just as in the temples of Egypt a daily ritual was observed wherein the relics (and the images, cf. the allusions in 38. 56, 53. 30) took the place of the living and present Buddha. See ARTHUR A. FRIEDL. C. A. L. R. VI. 2, p. 67 f., and above Cūlavamsa I, p. 359, note 4. Cf. also below 97. 83, 101. 4.

80 To the office of royal teacher the King appointed a Grand 81 therā from the Coḷa country, a self-controlled man, versed in 82 various tongues and intimate with philosophic works. Ever 83 and again he heard from him continuously all the Jātakas, 84 learned them (by heart) and retained their contents. Then he 85 rendered by degrees these five hundred and fifty beautiful 86 Jātakas from the Pāli tongue into the Sīhala speech¹. He 87 recited them in the midst of the Grand theras who were 88 intimate with the three Piṭakas, and after correcting them, 89 he had them written down and distributed throughout Laṅkā.
 90 And these Jātakas he made over to a wise therā, Medhamkara by name, whom he had gained for the purpose, that they might be preserved in the succession of his disciples and thereby handed down still further. Then after having built for him a pariveṇa with the King's own name, he assigned him
 the four villages of Purāṇagāma, Sannirasela, Labujamaṇḍaka and Moravaṇka. In the vihāra of Titthagāma² where the big, long pāsāda forty-five cubits in size erected by the great Vijayabāhu³, had fallen into decay, King Parakkamabāhu himself built a beautiful, long pāsāda⁴ of thirty cubits in size, two storeys high, provided with lofty spires⁵, glorious with

¹ This translation of the Jātakas bears the Sinhalese title Pansiya-pana-jātaka. See GEIGER, l. c. p. 6. Probably the king was not himself the author of the Jātaka translation. But he may have started the work, and it was an act of courtesy on the part of the translators that they ascribed it to the king. Cf. WICKREMASINGHE, Catalogue of Sinh. Manuser. in the Br. Mus., p. 118 ff.; MALALASEKERA, Pāli Literature of Ceylon, p. 127.

⁴ In the description of the architectural works of Parakkamabāhu I in Pulatthinagara dīghapāsādā and cālapāsādā are constantly contrasted with each other (see 78. 36, 37, 50). We have evidently to do with particular architectural terms.

bright-hued painting, and assigned it then to the venerable 91
 Grand therā Kāyasatti who dwelt in the Vijayabāhu-pariveṇa¹.
 He also granted him a village, called Sālaggāma, on the banks 92 of the river² forming the boundary (of the monastery), making it a possession of the pariveṇa. In fair Tittthagāma he had a 93 park laid down, provided with five thousand cocopalms. In 94 Devapura³ he built a long temple consisting of two storeys, provided with four pairs of gates for the image of the recumbent lion⁴. To this temple he assigned the grove-encircled village 95 Gaṇṭhimāna by name which he proclaimed as the property of the Buddha. In the vihāra of Valligāma⁵ the Ruler erected a 96 long pāsāda, consisting of two storeys, which after his own name, was called Parakkamabāhu(-pāsāda), and granted it the 97 (village) Sāligiri⁶ by name as a large maintenance village belonging to the Great community. In fair Viddumagāma, not far 98 from the town of Rājagāma he had a splendid vihāra built, connected with the Sirighanānanda-pariveṇa, with a bodhi tree 99 and an image-house and assigned it to his teacher, the Grand therā from the Coḷa country⁷. Thereupon he founded in the 100 charming district of Māyādhanu⁸ a new town with fine walls and gate-towers. There he had a fair temple erected to 101
 the gods with lofty spires and two storeys, provided with walls and gate-towers, placed there a glorious statue of 102

² All the MSS. have upa simanadittaraṇa. Simanadi might also be the name of the river. The emendation of the Col. Ed. into Gimhanadi (now Ginganga; cf. 75. 22, gimhatiṭṭha = Gintota) is certainly tempting, but I do not venture a departure from the uniform reading of the MSS.

¹ The acc. attattham must be governed by rato. This, it is true, is otherwise construed with the loc.

³ With verse 102 or 104 the second part of the Cūlavamsa which begins with chapter 80, comes to an end. The MSS. also indicate this. Cf. my ed. I. p. IV of the Introd., as well as the notes to the passage. If we assume that it closed originally with v. 102, which is indicated by two of the MSS., then there was added later a summarizing śloka and then a strophe in artificial metre. Exactly the same thing occurs at the close of the first part (79.84). The addition was evidently intended to veil the break in the text and lead over to the new part.

⁴ (Vanni-)Bhuvanaikabāhu, Vijayabāhu and the fourth Bhuvanaikabāhu are also mentioned by the Nik.-s. and Rājaraṭṭ., as successors of Parakkamabāhu IV. The inscription of the Laṅkātilaka-vihāra belongs to Bhuvanekabāhu IV. (see B. GUNASEKARA, JRAS., C. B. X, nr. 34, 1887, p. 83 ff.). He built this and the Gadaladeniya-vihāra. See note to 91. 30. The King's minister Senālaṅkādhikāra who is named in the inscr., is also mentioned in Nik.-s.

CHAPTER XCI

HISTORY OF THE FOUR KINGS, OF PARAKKAMABĀHU AND HIS SUCCESSORS

- 1 Now after the death of Bhuvanekabāhu there were two kings, Parakkamabāhu¹ and the discerning Vikkamabāhu².
 2 There lived then at the time of Vikkamabāhu in the fair town known by the name of Peraddoṇi³, situated in the charming 3 neighbourhood of the Mahā(vāluka)gaṅgā, an eminent prince, sprung from the Giri family, the discerning Alagakkonāra⁴ 4 by name, adorned with majesty, faith and other virtues, full of the desire to further the laity and the Order, of great might.
 5 "The town of Kalyāṇi shines with her palaces, bodhi trees, her superb cloisters and maṇḍapas, with walls, halls, image temples and cetiyas, with her gorgeous shops, her 6 splendid gate-towers and arches." Now to the South of this town Kalyāṇi which is described in such words, which

¹ According to the Hapugastenna inscr. (JRAS., C. B. xxii, nr. 65, p. 362, Codrington, HC., p. 89) Parakkamabāhu V. ascended the throne simultaneously with Bhuvanekabāhu IV. in the year 1344/5. He reigned for a time (probably till 1356/7) with him and after that along with Vikkamabāhu IV. (III. according to C.).

² For inscrs. of the time of Vikkamabāhu IV. see BALL, Report on the Kēgalla District, p. 78. According to the inscr. of Vigulavatta (not far from Gampola), the fourth year of the King's reign coincides with the end of the Saka year 1282 = 1360 A. D., his ascent of the throne falls therefore in 1356/7 A. D.

³ I. e. Peradeniya not far from Kandy on the Mahaveliganga.

⁴ Our chronicle makes short work of the undoubtedly eminent personality of this man. There is a good deal more about the founder of Jayavardhana in the Rājāv., the Rājaratn. and the Nik-s. What is above all important is that Alagakkonāra succeeded in breaking the power of the Jaffna king which was then at its height. Cf. also below note to v. 9. For the Kīrtirimevan inscription of Kelani and the Alagakkonāra mentioned in it see C. A. L. R. I, p. 152; II, p. 149, 182.

was visited by the great Sage, in a place where pious people dwelt, who were devoted¹ to the Buddha and so forth, on the great lake not far from the spacious village of Dārūgāma², 7 he built the famous town of Jayavaḍḍhanakoṭṭa³, embellished with great trains of walls, with gateways, bastions and the like. While he dwelt in the town, the mighty one, craving 8 for meritorious works, performed many good deeds, such as the furthering of the Order and the rest. In that town the 9 fifth Bhuvanekabāhu⁴ was (king), religious, venerating with constant reverence the Buddha and the other (sacred) objects.

² The village is called so in the Rājaraṭṭ. Thus Dārūgāma^o in the Mhvs. stands instead of uru-Dārūgāma^o.

³ Later simply called Cotta by the Portuguese. The town covered what are now the eastern districts of Colombo.

⁴ As in 90. 64, āsi, thus āhu must be supplemented by rājā, or else āhu (āsi) has the more pregnant meaning "he lived, he reigned". I do not believe that the Mhvs. considers Bhuvanekabāhu to be the name under which Alagakkonūra reigned. This opinion is found only in the Rājaraṭṭ., when it says: Alagakkōṇ nam mantriścarayāno Bhuvanekabāhu-nam mahārāja-ra Gaṅgasiripura rājyaśrīya-ṭa pāmiṇa devalora piyēya "The great minister Alagakkōṇ by name who had become king under the name of Bhuvanekabāhu went, after enjoying in Gaṅgasiripura the good fortune of the royal dignity, to the world of the gods." But in the Mhvs. we should, in this case, expect an iti or tī nāmena after Bhuvanekabāhujo. The assumption that Alagakkonūra and Bhuvanekabāhu are one and the same has now been given up (cf. JRAS. C. B. XXIV, nr. 68, p. 103, note *) above all because in the Attanagalu-vihāra-vamṣa it is said that the work was translated in the Śaka year 1304 (= 1382/3) in the reign of Bhuvanekabāhu, at the instigation of Alakeśvara (or Alagakkonūra). — The tradition followed by the Rājaraṭṭ. probably confuses Alagakkonūra with his son Vira Alakeśvara who (under the name of Vijayabāhu) is said to have reigned a number of years as king, though after Virabāhu's death. For further particulars see E. W. PERERA, Alakeśvara: his Life and Times, JRAS. C. B. XVIII, Nr. 55 (1904), p. 281 ff.; H. W. COCHRAN, HC, p. 85, 89. Cf. below, note to v. 14.

- 10 To the community he dispensed in abundant measure regular repasts and other alms and to achieve the furtherance of the
- 11 Order, he gathered the bhikkhus together, ascertained those who lived immoral lives and had them cast forth from the Order, but he showed favour to the conscientious obtained for them the precedence and so made the Order of the Victor
- 12 shine. For seven thousand pieces of silver he had a casket fashioned, preserved in it the Tooth Relic and sacrificed to it in lasting reverence.
- 13 When the time of this King — after he had held sway for twenty years¹ — had expired, a man called Virabāhu
- 14 attained the royal dignity, did likewise all (that was good) such as furthering the Order and fell under the power of the King of death².

¹ The 20th year of the reign of Bhuvanekabāhu V. falls in the year 1391/2 A. D., the beginning of the reign accordingly in 1372/3. It seems, however, that he reigned for some time, if only in name, together with Virabāhu. Cf. S. DE SILVA, Vijaya Bāhu VI., JRAS. C. B. XXII, no. 65, p. 316 ff.; H. W. COORINGTON, HC. p. 89. In the inscription on the Alam-pundi plate (see V. VENKAYYA, El. III, p. 224 ff.) King Virūpākṣa of the Vijayanagara Dynasty, boasts that he had vanquished the kings of the Tundīra, Coja and Pāṇḍya as well as the Siṃhala. The inscr. is dated in the Śaka year 1305 for 1307 = 1383/4.

² The Mhvs. passes over here a very remarkable episode in the history of Ceylon the knowledge of which we owe above all to Chinese sources. (Cf. J. M. SENAVÉRATNE according to SYLVAIN LÉVY, JRAS. C. B. XXIV, nr. 68, p. 98 ff.; further XXVIII, nr. 73, p. 31 ff.) and to the Rājāv. From the different sources we gather that the son of the great Alagakkonāra, Vira Alakeśvara, under the name of Vijayabāhu (VI.) seized the royal dignity in battle with his brother Virabāhu. During his reign in Jayavādḍhanakotṭa a Chinese expedition of the Emperor Yung-lo under the leadership of Tsheng-huo came to Ceylon. The Chinese came into conflict with the Sinhalese ruler who is called A-le-ko-na-r (Alagakkonāra) and took the king away with them as prisoner. The Rājāv. calls the leader of the Chinese Mahā-Cin-Dosraja, the king taken prisoner by him, Vijayabāhu. Here then instead of the family name, the adopted name is given. Now it seems to me that by confusing this Vijayabāhu (VI) with V. IV. the above discussed gap in the Rājāv. is explained (note to 90. 1). The probability of a mistake is supported by the fact that the Rājāv. speaks of four younger brothers of King V. who are said to

Then at a later time, in the year one thousand nine 15 hundred and fifty-three after the final Nirvana of the holy Enlightened One, came King Parakkamabāhu¹, an abode 16 of wisdom and manly virtue, a scion of the race of the Sun, in the charming town named Jayavaḍḍhana — to the incomparable, sublime fortune of the royal dignity and with faith in the three (sacred) jewels, he set about the holding of a festival. For the tooth of the Prince of the wise the Ruler 17 built a three-storeyed, splendid pāsāda which offered a superb sight. Then he fashioned a golden casket, fair, beautifully 18 set with the nine precious stones, and another casket in the form of a shell, gleaming in manifold splendour and set with the most exquisite jewels and which held the first casket; and yet another golden casket into which he also put the second.
 Finally the King who strove after salvation in the present as 19 have been murdered. Now Vijayabāhu IV. had in fact four brothers according to Mhvs. 87. 16-17. According to the Rājāv. the capture took place A. B. 1958 = 1404 A. D. For the whole see COCHRANON HC. p. 85 f., 89. If one accepts this Vijayabāhu who is omitted in the Mhvs., as the sixth of the name in the list of the kings, then instead of Vijayabāhu VI. (92. 4) one must read Vijayabāhu VII.

¹ The Mhvs. has nothing to say about the events which preceded the reign of Parakkamabāhu VI. Cf. for this H. W. COCHRANON, HC., p. 85 ff., 89. The date given in the Mhvs. for the beginning of the reign 1953 A. B. = 1409 A. D. is also found in the Saddharmālaṅkāraya. In another passage however in this work the date is given as 1958 A. B. = 1414 A. D. The same in the inscr. of Pipiliyana (see below, note to v. 24). It may be assumed as probable that Parakkamabāhu VI. came to the throne in 1412, remained three years in Rayigam (District Kalutara, Census of Ceylon 1921, II, p. 44) and removed in 1415 to Jayavaḍḍhana where the coronation took place. The Mhvs. has hardly anything of historical value either to tell us about the reign of Parakkamabāhu VI., except perhaps in v. 24, that his mother's name was Sunettā. It is a great pity that the compiler of the third part of the Cūlavs. restricts himself almost entirely to stereotyped descriptions of festivals for the Tooth Relic. Our knowledge of modern events is gained from quite other sources. In the first place there is the Rājāvalī, also in the version given by Valentyn (Oud en Nieuw Oost-Indien, vol. V); further DO COUËRO and DE BARROS (see D. FERGUSON, The History of Ceylon, from the Earliest Times to 1600 A. D. as related by de Barros and do Couto,

² In these last paricchēdas the language is treated with extraordinary arbitrariness. The construction of the compounds and the position of the words in them is often quite contrary to rule. The translation can therefore only give the general meaning of such passages.

⁴ Sunetrā or Sunetradevī, the wife of Vijayabāhu (VI.) who is supposed to be the father of Parakkamabāhu VI., was a Kālinga princess.

from the three provinces, he laid up in pious fashion an abundance of merit. He had the sacred three Piṭakas together with the commentaries and the *ṭīkā*s copied and caused a summary of the teaching of the Buddha¹ (to be made). He also granted villages and the like to the scribes, that they might copy day by day the books of the true doctrine. Whatever had fallen into decay on the Mahiyāṅgaṇa-cetiya and other cetiyas everywhere he had renewed and the plaster coating repaired. In the same way he had all the stucco work and so forth carried out on the Gaṇḍalādoṇī monastery and on the Lankātilaka² and others. While celebrating a great feast and a great sacrificial festival he repeatedly had the ceremony of admission to the Order performed. Thus the wise Lord of men having taken on himself the burden of government and wrought good for fifty and two years³, bestowed on the bhikkhu community, serving it in faith, twenty-six thousand one hundred and forty times the three garments and other articles of equipment and three thousand four hundred and thirty-two kaṭhina robes. Piously devoted to the three (sacred) objects he who greatly venerated the Order of the Victor, dispensed immeasurable wealth and in this wise did all kinds of good.

Dowered with faith, discernment and charitableness, a superb jewel of virtue, he recognizing the worthlessness of acquired riches, performed in such wise, continually, unweariedly meritorious works. When ye have understood that, ye as those who know and are striving after salvation in this existence and in future existences⁴, should also continually and in the

He takes saṅgaṇa in the sense of "kindliness, protection, favour" and translates: "encouraged the religion of Buddha". It seems to me, moreover, that in vv. 27 and 28 special stress is laid on the literary activity of the King. Of course he only suggested the work.

CHAPTER XCII

HISTORY OF THE SEVEN KINGS, OF JAYABĀHU AND HIS SUCCESSORS

After his death, his grandson Jayabāhu¹ became king; 1 then Bhuvanekabāhu, after he had murdered him (Jayabāhu). After obtaining the royal consecration, he lived seven years. 2 After his death Parakkamabāhu known on account of his learning by the name of Paṇḍita, was king in that fair town, 3 and hereafter Vīraparakkamabāhu. On his death Vijaya- 4

¹ The kings in vv. 1—5 are numbers 108 (169) to 113 (175) of my list. Parakkamabāhu VIII. had two sons: Vijayabāhu VI. (VII.) and (Dharma)pakkamabāhu IX. Both seem to have been made co-regents by their father in the year 1509. But Parakkamabāhu IX., although he lived at least till 1528, was apparently of no great influence. He is not at all mentioned in our chronicle. — The Rājāv. makes Vīraparakkamabāhu, not Jayabāhu, the successor of Parakkamabāhu VI. The same name appears again however later as that of Paṇḍita-Parakkamabāhu's successor. The Rājaratn. inserts a king Vīrabāhu before Jayabāhu to whom a reign of 12 years is ascribed. The list of the kings (= Mhva. 92. 1-5) in the Sinhalese chronicles is as follows:

Rājāv. Vīra-Parakkamabāhu		Rājaratn. Vīrabāhu (12 yrs.)
(1468—1472/3)		Jayabāhu
Bhuvanekabāhu (VI) (7 yrs.)	,	Bhuvanekabāhu
(1472/3—1480/1)
Paṇḍita-Parakkamabāhu (VII)	,	Paṇḍita-Parakkama-

Bhuvanekabāhu (VII)	,	Bhuvanekabāhu

bāhu was king whose adornment was his virtue, and after his death Bhuvanekabāhu was king. And after these kings, each according to his faith and his power, had achieved the furtherance of the laity and the Order, they went thither in accordance with their deeds.

- 6 Now Viravikkama a mighty man, sprung from the line of Sirisampghabodhi¹, became king in the year two thousand and eighty-four after the final Nirvana of the Enlightened One².
 7 Dwelling in the town of Senkhaṇḍasela-Sirivaḍḍhana³, beautified by the course of the Mahāvālukagaṅgā, he gladdened his subjects by the four heart-winning qualities and undertook in 8 his faith meritorious works. The fair relic of the Prince of the wise he brought to a piece of land charmingly situated 9 not far from his royal palace. Then he built a cetiya and

The years of the reigns are given according to CODRINGTON (HC., p. 93 ff.) Inscriptions: Bhuvanekabāhu VI.: inscr. of Dedigama, BELL, Report of Kégalla Dist., p. 83 ff.; Vijayabāhu VI., ibid. p. 85 ff. (on the Kelani inscr. and Dharma-Parakkamabāhu, ibid. p. 86); Bhuvanekabāhu VII., JRAS. C. B. XXII, no. 65, p. 267 ff. See further below, note to 95. 5. The history and chronology of Ceylon at the end of the Middle Ages suffer particularly from the fact that the island was not under one dominion but was split up into several kingdoms. Thus kings who were contemporaries are represented as succeeding one another. The kings in the above list reigned in Koṭṭe (Dharma-Parakkamabāhu perhaps in Kelani). Then in addition to these there are the dynasties of Sītāvaka and Kandy. Viravikkama (v. 6) is according to WICKREMASINGHE (EZ. III. p. 44) probably identical with Kumāra Baṇḍāra, the son of Vijaya Baṇḍāra who reigned in Kandy at the time of Vijayabāhu VI. (VII.) and Bhuvanekabāhu VII.

³ I. e. Kandy. The account evidently goes back here to the rise of the kingdom of Kandy, the high country (uḍa-raja) that did its utmost to preserve its independence as against the kings in Koṭṭe and Sītāvaka until it fell under the power of Rājāsīha in 1580. It is regrettable that the compiler has no interest in political questions, but considers only the relations of the kings to the Order. To judge by the number of figures contained in his narrative, it looks as if he had consulted a puṇṇāpotthaka (cf. Mhva. 32. 25 ff.) i. e. a book in which the meritorious works of the king are inscribed.

near to it a two-storeyed house for the Uposatha¹ ceremony, as well as round about the town eighty-six dwellings for the 11 community furnished with a roofing of brick and so forth, made the bhikkhus take up their abode here and there, granted them maintenance and heard preached the true doctrine of the Victor. After celebrating a magnificent sacrificial 12 festival, he hearkened in faith to fifty-five sermons of the doctrine the preaching whereof lasted the whole night. On 13 thirty thousand leaves he had (sacred) books written down and to the Tipiṭaka he made an offering of sixty thousand (gold pieces). He had one hundred and eighty images made 14 of the Enlightened One and one hundred and thirty caskets for the placing therein of relics and so laid up a store of meritorious works. He left his town, wandered on foot² for 15 a day a distance of seven gāvutas³ and venerated Mahiyāṅga by celebrating with divers fragrant flowers, with lamps, frankincense and the like, a great festival. The Ruler of men 17 betook himself also in one day to the Sumanakūṭa⁴ and sacrificed there by pouring one hundred jars of oil into a lamp fifteen cubits in girth and five cubits high⁵. [Since his desire was fixed 18 on the highest path⁶, he had the impassable road⁷ put in

¹ P. dvibhūmakam uposathamālakam is curious. Mālaka is otherwise only an enclosed open space, a courtyard, serving for the holding of certain ceremonies. Dvibhūmaka as attribute of mālaka is unsuitable. In other instances moreover, we have only uposathagga, uposathāgāra, uposathaghara, showing that a house is meant. If this were not the case in our verse we might have here a structure of the type of a "double platform", E. R. ARNOTT, Memoirs, ASC. I. p. 18 ff.; A. M.  the Ruler had in this and other ways performed many meri-up on the bank of the river. Thither he brought the bhikkhus 21 dwelling in the three provinces and instituted a great festival.

 Then after specially inviting from among those bhikkhus a body of thirty-five bhikkhus with the Grand therā Dhammakitti at the head, he made them celebrate a great festival 22 and grant admission to the Order to three hundred and fifty-five able sons of good family whom he had himself chosen 23 out. The King heard that in the town of Pāṭaliputta¹ (in days of yore), the Ruler of men Mahāsena had fed daily a 24 community of one thousand bhikkhus, but unsatisfied even with this magnificent effort, he had thought of giving alms 25 by the cultivation of a piece of land². He had surrendered the bliss of the royal dignity, betaken himself to the northern town of Madhurā³, there laboured and with the grain produced, 26 had in faith made an offering of alms. When⁴ he heard this the wise (Prince) who had joy in a pure gift of alms, cultivated a rice field with his own bodily powers and instituted with the grain produced, in blameless fashion, an offering of 27 alms. With faith in the three (sacred) objects he presented an offering of two thousand one hundred and eighty-two garments. Spending five hundred and eighty-seven thousand 28 pieces of money, the King had meritorious works performed therewith. Sixty and two elephants and horses and four 29 hundred and fifty head of cattle and buffaloes did the Ruler of men offer in sacrifice. Striving thus and in many other 30 ways after good, he performed many meritorious works and made himself a pathway to heaven.

Thus he performed in faith, steadfast, rejoicing in the 31 welfare of others, after discerning the worthlessness of acquired corporeal existence and other (possessions), in pious manner many meritorious works which bring many a happiness. If ye then have discerned this, as people who have great fear of the terrible evil of the cycle of rebirths, then must ye, remembering what is of true worth, relinquish all desire for corporeal existence and the like (possessions) and strive unweariedly after meritorious works.

CHAPTER XCIII

HISTORY OF THE TWO KINGS, OF MĀYĀDHANU AND OF HIS SUCCESSOR

- 1 At his death there resided in the province bordering on the sea-coast, in the fair and renowned Jayavaḍḍhanakoṭṭa 2 (and elsewhere) here and there kings sprung from the race of the Sun. Amongst these there was one, the illustrious Ruler 3 of men, Māyādhānu¹ by name. His son was the mighty Rājasiha by name. He went forth, fought here and there

¹ It is characteristic of the attitude of the author of this part of the Cūlavam̐sa and of his indifference to the significant events happening in the plains, that the Portuguese are not yet mentioned. They landed in 1505 or 1506 (cf. D. FERNOSON, The Discovery of Ceylon by the Portuguese in 1505, JRAS. C. B. XIX, No. 59 (1907), p. 284 ff.) and had their chief seat in Colombo, in the fort which they had built there. It is just as characteristic that a man of the importance of Māyādhānu (Māyāḍunne) is dismissed with the mention of his name. He was the youngest brother of Bhuvanekabāhu VII., and at the division of the kingdom in A. D. 1521, had received the region between the coast land and the mountains with Sītāvaka as capital. Sītāvaka is the present Avisavella about 26 miles east of Colombo, situated on a left tributary of the Kelaniganga. In a series of severe and fluctuating struggles with his brother and his successor, as well as with the Portuguese, for the supreme dominion in Ceylon, Māyāḍunne maintained himself successfully till his death in 1581. Dharmapāla (1550—1597) the feeble successor of Bhuvanekabāhu VII. who was completely dependent on the Portuguese, adopting Christianity (about 1557) in order to maintain himself with their help — is not even mentioned in the Mahāvam̐sa. As a historical source our chronicle is now hardly of any value at all. Of native sources there is only the Rājāvalī left and it has many defects. Our main information now comes from the Portuguese accounts, above all João RIBEIRO, Fatalidade historica, Lissabon 1886 (translated into English by P. E. PEARCE under the title "The Historic Tragedy of Ceilão", Colombo and won the victory. The victor, the great fool, even slew 4 his own father¹ and brought the royal dignity into his power, the deluded one. In the town of Sītāvaka the King known 5 by the name of Rājasiha, for a time did good, devoted in faith to the Order. But one day the King, after he had brought 6 a gift of alms, asked the Grand theras full of anxiety: "How can I undo the crime of my father's murder?" Then the wise 7 theras expounded him the doctrine², but could not win over the wicked mind of this fool. They spake: "To undo the 8 committed crime is impossible". Full of fury like some terrible poisonous snake which has been struck by a stick, he asked 9

the adherents of Siva³. The answer they gave him that it

Then for a part of the 16th century there are the lately published Portuguese archives: "Ceylon in the time of King Bhuvanekabāhu and Franz Xavers 1539-1552", published and annotated by G. SCHURHAMMER and E. A. VORRETSCH, 2 vols. Leipzig, 1928. Again "Ceylon and Portugal", pt. I, Kings and Christians 1539-1552, from the original documents at Lisbon, by P. E. PIERIS and M. A. H. ¹ Whether Rājasiha who was a magnificent general and had distinguished himself at the age of 11 by his bravery, was really his father's murderer, may be doubted. Cf. note below to v. 9.

² I now prefer to read tassa dhammaṃ instead of tass' adhammaṃ.

³ The motives alleged here for Rājasiha's conversion to Hinduism scarcely accord with the facts. The real reason for it was that the Buddhist priesthood who had always been favoured by him and his father Māyādunne, actually joined a conspiracy got up against him by was possible, he received like ambrosia, smeared his body with 10 ashes and adopted the religion of Siva. He annihilated the Order of the Victor, slew the community of the bhikkhus, 11 burned the sacred books, destroyed the monasteries and thus barred his way to heaven. Become a (dead) tree-trunk in the 12 cycle of rebirths, he adopted a false faith. He placed miscreant ascetics of false faith on the Sumanakūṭa to take for them-13 selves all the profit accruing therefrom. In this way the impious fool as he did not know what he should accept and accepted what he should not have accepted, brought great evil upon himself.

14 At that time through fear of the King, bhikkhus left the Order; those among them who were swayed by fear of the cycle of rebirths, went hither and thither.

15 Harming the welfare of the whole laity and of the stainless Order of the Buddha, he carried on the government only in 16 virtue of merit formerly acquired. Dowered with sovereign might, the criminal brought the whole island of Laṅkā into his power and carried on the government¹.

17 Thus this monarch, equipped with royal might, manifested his sovereign power; but after heaping up every kind of crime, he fell under the dominion of Māra. When one thus perceives the misfortune that meets one who through sinful and false belief has become the victim of delusion, one should in fear, free from all inclination to carelessness, bring about much blessing.

 Two Kings, of Māyādhana and of his Successor», in the Mahā-vamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

¹ The year of his death is given by the Rājāv. as 1514 of the Śaka era = 1592/3 A. D. How great was the admiration of the people for this "last great king of the Sinhalese race" is shown by the fact that even to-day he receives divine honours under the name of Ganegoda Deviyo. PIERIS 2, p. 114.

CHAPTER XCIV

HISTORY OF KING VIMALADHAMMASURIYA

In the days of this King a scion of the Sun Dynasty in 1 Gaṅgāsiripura had betaken himself to the harbour of Kolamba¹. As he did not receive permission to remain there, he went to 2 the province of Gova. After he had dwelt here a long time, he slew a mighty and famous chieftain by name Gajabāhu². 3 After the victory he received distinctions of many kinds, and because in his prudence he understood the favorable moment, 4 returned to Laṅkā. The mighty one brought the troops of the five districts of the highland country over to his side and after the death of (Rājasīha) the slayer of his father,³ 5 when the year two thousand, one hundred and thirty-five from the nirvana of the Master⁴ had arrived, he (the prince), 6 full of faith, mighty by reason of his merit, became king under the name of Vimaladhammasuriya, highly famed, in the town of Sirivaḍḍhana.

¹ Konappu, later Vimaladhammasuriya was a son of Virasundara who belonged to the royal house. Virasundara was partisan of Rājasīha, but was slain by him for having conspired against him. His son fled to Colombo (Kolambatittha) to the puppet king Dhammapāla. Later he was banished to Goa (Govarajtha) where he succeeded in gaining the confidence of the Portuguese. PRIESTS 2, p. 92 f., 112; COCKINGTON, HC., p. 105.

² It was the case of a duel with a pugnacious officer. The episode is related also in the Rājāv. (p. 92 of B. GUÑASEKARA's translation). Konappu's success may have drawn the attention of the Portuguese to him.

³ Rājasīha is called pitughāta here not on account of the murder of his father Māyūddhana, but on account of that of Virasundara.

⁴ A. B. 2185 = 1591 A. D. The date is right.

- 7 He surrounded the whole of the vast city with a massive 8 wall on the heights of which he had placed at intervals eighteen tower structures. Then to ward off the foe, he posted sentries, 9 freed the whole kingdom of Laṅkā from all oppression and after he had raised a princess of equal birth to the rank of 10 first maheśī and had received his consecration as King, this famous (prince) who in his faith desired meritorious works, 11 set about furthering the laity and the Order. The Ruler of men reflected where the tooth of the Enlightened One could be, and when he heard it was in the Labujagāma-vihāra¹, he 12 rejoiced greatly. He had the Tooth Relic which had been brought to Labujagāma in the province of Sagaragamu² fetched 13 (thence) and in order to venerate it day by day in his own fair town and to dedicate a ritual to it, the wise (prince) had 14 a two-storeyed, superb relic temple erected on an exquisitely beautiful piece of ground in the neighbourhood of the royal palace. Here he placed the tooth and in lasting devotion brought offerings to it.
- 15 As there were no bhikkhus in the island of Laṅkā on whom the ceremony of admission to the Order had been performed³, the King sent officials to the country of Rakkhaṅga, invited 16 Nandicakka and other bhikkhus, had them brought to the island of Laṅkā, made them take up their abode in the noble city of Sirivaḍḍhana and cared for them in reverent manner.
 17 Then in the Mahāvālukagaṅgā, at the landing-place called Gaṇṭhamba, within a boundary drawn in the water⁴, he had

² Now Sabaragamuva. The province which stretches in front of the south-western slopes of the central mountains, bounded on the West by the West province and on the South by the South province.

³ The cause of this decay of the Buddhist Church was in all probability due to the hostile attitude of Rājasiha towards it. Rakkhaṅga is the name of a district in Lower Burma, now Arakan. Cf. for this Pāṇini 2, p. 141.

a fine building erected and thither in the year two thousand, 18 one hundred and forty after the nirvana of the Victor¹, he led the bhikkhus, had the ceremony of admission to the Order 19 performed in this Great bhikkhu community on many of the sons of good family and thus protected the Order of the Enlightened One. And he also made many sons of good birth 20 submit themselves to the ceremony of renunciation of the world and provided them also abundantly with the four articles of use, and after he had in this and many other ways, striving 21 after good, performed many meritorious works, he cleared himself a pathway to heaven. Later the selfsame wise King 22 made his younger brother² who had gone through the ceremony of renunciation of the world and (as member) was in the Order of the Buddha, leave the Order, entrusted him with the burden of the government and then passed away in accordance with his deeds³.

In this wise the Monarch equipped with kingly power, 23 after performing many meritorious works, adorning the Order of the Victor, made manifest a blameless sovereign

² Senūratana was Vimaladhammasuriya's cousin. We know however (see note to 63. 51) that cousins who are brother's sons call themselves brothers.

³ Rājāv. gives as the year of his death 1525 of the Śaka era = 1603/4 A. D. Of the mighty events which took place during the reign of Vimaladhammasuriya I. the Mahāvamsa says not a word. The whole period was filled with wars against the Portuguese and their protégé Dharmapāla which were carried on both sides with the greatest bitterness and even cruelty. In A. D. 1594 the Sinhalese destroyed a Portuguese force which had advanced to Kandy. Three years later Dharmapāla died after reigning nominally in Kotte 47 years. In his will he left his kingdom to the King of Portugal. The Portuguese solemnly took possession of the lowlands in the name of their sovereign. The kingdom of Kandy maintained its independence. During the reign of Vimaladhammasuriya the Sinhalese came for the first time into contact with the Dutch through the embassy under Joris van Spilbergen which coming from the east coast of the Island in 1602, visited the court of Kandy. For the whole subject cf. Piñns 2, p. 112-165; Содинотов, HC., p. 105 ff.

power¹. And yet such a discerning man whose highest good was religion², fell under the power of Māra: when one has once realised the permanent condition of misery and of all other (suffering), one must find his joy in unwearyed striving.

Here ends the ninety-fourth chapter, called «History of King Vimaladhammasuriya», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

¹ The first two lines of the strophe resemble in wording the final strophe of 93.

² The sing. caturō saddhādāhano tādiso must be referred to mahāpo; itī is, as so often, placed within the sentence, instead of behind tādiso.

CHAPTER XCV

HISTORY OF KING SENĀRATANA

After Senāratana by name had received consecration as 1 king, dowered with meritorious works, such as generosity and the rest and at all times full of reverence, he inclined his 2 subjects to him by the four heart-winning qualities. He celebrated a festival for the Tooth Relic and a great almsgiving. The mahesī of the (late) king who had been his elder 3 brother¹ he made his own first mahesī and dwelt in that same town (of Sirivaḍḍhana).

At that time merchants in the seaport of Kolamba who 4 had sojourned there a long time, had become puffed up with pride². They were, all of them, the so-called Paraṅgi³, he- 5 retical evil-doers, cruel and brutal. They spread themselves over several fair provinces, laid waste fields and gardens, 6 burned down houses and villages, destroyed the noble families and in this wise brought ruin on Sīhala. They broke into 7
the towns, into the relic shrines and monasteries, destroyed the image houses, Bodhi trees, Buddha statues and so on, did 8 great harm to the laity and the Order, built at various places

9 forts¹ and carried on war² unceasingly. King Senāratana brought the Tooth Relic to a safe place in the province called Pañcasata³, almost impassable owing to forests, mountains and rivers, made people dwell there who were entrusted with the preservation of the relic and thus protected the Tooth Relic well, showing it the usual reverence. Then he left the city (Sirivaḍḍhana). Movable goods, the sons of the former king and the admirable Mahesī, excellent by wealth and virtue, who was pregnant, he took carefully with him in a litter⁴ and betook himself to Mahiyaṅgaṇa⁵. While he sojourned in this town the Queen bore under a particularly favorable constellation, a splendid son⁶, dowered with brilliant marks. At that time the leader of the foe saw at night a terror-stirring dream. From the east⁷, from that town (Mahiyaṅgaṇa) there came a spark of the size of a glow-worm. Growing ever bigger it came to the centre of Kolamba, waxed here to unmeasured size and burned up everything at once. On that day in consequence of its splendour, the enemy who had penetrated to Sirivaḍḍhana, took flight with the haste of those who are threatened with peril. The Ruler of men guarded his son who grew by degrees like another moon, and the other (sons) with the greatest care, and when he saw that the right time 18 had come, he took all his possessions and returned to the city of Sirivaddhana. When his sons, namely the sons of the former 19 king and his own son, were grown up he, because his heart clung to them in love, was minded to divide amongst them 20 his mountain-girt provinces, had (their names) properly written on three leaves, laid the leaves near the Tooth Relic¹, led the 21 princes thither and made them take their choice. Then when 22 the Ruler beheld the leaves which fell in this wise: to the eldest Kumārasīha the province Ūva, to Vijayapāla the province Mātula and to the youngest Rājasīha the five highland 23 provinces² — he when he saw that the lot with the five highland 24 provinces had fallen to his own son, rejoiced greatly and he said: "He hath great merit."

The Ruler of men thus gave over the divers provinces to 25 his sons. Then, giving alms and performing other meritorious works according to his capacity, for the furthering of the people and the Order, he lived (yet) seven years³.

The Ruler who out of love had divided the provinces 26 among his own and his other sons in order to protect Lankā and this our Order was doomed then to inevitable death.

Here ends the ninety-fifth chapter, called «History of King Senāratana», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

¹ The lottery becomes in this way a sacred action, an oracle. The division of the Kandy kingdom took place in 1628.

² P. uddha pañca raṭṭhaka. These are districts lying round about Kandy, the most important parts of the kingdom with the capital. Ūva embraces the eastern, Matale the northern districts. It should be noted that the form Mātula for Matale is only found in the latest part of the Cūlavamsa (96. 4, 98. 65); in 66. 71 we have Mahāttila.

³ The year of his death is therefore 1635 A. D. The Rājāv. gives 1555 of the Saka era = 1633/4 A. D. One must assume that from 1628 to 1635 Rājasīha was reigning along with his father. Kumārasīha had died before Senāratana, as is pointed out by the Rājāv. The struggles with the Portuguese lasted with fluctuating success throughout Senāratana's reign. Of importance are the negotiations of the Sinhalese King with the Dutch which began in the year 1612. For a time (in 1620) the Danes tried to get a footing on the island. For the whole subject see PIERIS, 2, p. 171-221; CODRINGTON, l. c., p. 109 ff.

CHAPTER XCVI

HISTORY OF KING RĀJASĪHA

- 1 Now while these Rulers of men, sojourning in different
 2 places, enjoyed for a short time the pleasures of the royal
 3 dignity in harmony, they carried on war against the Paraṅgis
 4 and gained here and there victories¹. But then they quarrelled
 5 among themselves, the three brothers, the Lords of men. One of them, the renowned Rājasiha by name, dispossessed the 6 older brothers and made them his vassals. After one (Kumārasiha) had been put to death by poison, the other (Vijayapāla who dwelt) in Mātula, mounted a chariot, and started off with one man whom he took with him and betook himself after 7 crossing the frontier of the province, abroad². But the other,
 Rājasiha³, a man whose commands were not lightly to be

¹ In the year 1630 A. D. the princes won a brilliant victory at Randenivela in lower Uva over the Portuguese who had occupied Badulla and had plundered and set fire to the town. The Portuguese general, Constantino de Sa y Noronha fell himself in the battle. Four years later (1634) Kumārasīha was removed by poison, and to this time belong the first disagreements between Vijayapāla and Rājasiha. There must however, have been a reconciliation, for Vijayapāla took part in the battle of Gannoruva in 1638 and the victory of the Sinhalese was largely owing to him. The Portuguese under the leadership of their captain-general Diogo de Mello had occupied and destroyed Kandy, but they evacuated the town and on their retreat were surrounded and annihilated. See below note on v. 22. The successes in war of the Sinhalese against the Portuguese are glorified in the poems Koṣṭantīnuhaṭṭanē and Mahahaṭṭanē. See A. DE SILVA, JRAS. C. B. XXIV, No. 68 (1915-16), p. 56.

³ Or perhaps "the second (aparo) Rājasiha".

slighted, difficult to attack, hard to vanquish, of a lion-like courage, took possession of the kingdom as it had at the beginning belonged to his father; as if he had been created by gods, pious in the faith, for the furthering of laity and Order, he was mighty, dowered with the bravery of war-skilled heroes.

Once upon a time indulging in youthful sports, he went a-riding with a companion who had mounted an other horse, himself on horseback. At a given sign, the horse ran along the street, but sank in a marshy place. Determined and courageous, the powerful (prince) sprang aloft, swung himself on to the horse of his next companion throwing off its rider and rode on his saddle further. At the dangerous ford of the Gaṅgā, which is called Suvannatthambha¹, he sprang from the rock on this side and reached the rock on the opposite bank.

After manifesting in this and in many other ways, his strength, the greatly renowned (prince) cherished the wish to care for the furtherance of laity and Order. He prepared every kind of implement of war and the rest, took in order to open the fight, the battle-equipped Sihalas and set forth under a favorable constellation, at a happy moment from the town of Sirivadḍhana with elephants, steeds and princely retinue, with great warriors and so on, with great dignitaries and so on, with foot soldiers who bore bows, swords, spears and other weapons, in front the music with drums, kettledrums and other instruments. In order to acquire merit by the giving of alms and the like, the King took also the sons of Buddha² with him, marched hither and thither, made the sound of the war drums resound like the terrible clash of thunder and fearless began the fight. At first he fought a great battle with the foe in the five highland provinces³, slew many of

18 the miscreants and drove the powerful wretched enemies from every place; breaking down their strongholds, the Ruler of 19 men remained victorious. The foes fled, looking on every side (for safety), tortured with fear, flung themselves from the 20 mountain precipices, sprang into the mountain gorges and were scattered as cotton in the wind, when he rushed into the battle-field like a terrible lion that has broken into a herd
 21 of elephants¹. After fighting again and again in different places with the foe and killing and putting to flight numbers
 22 of people on the side of the enemy, he conquered several provinces, freed them from oppression, destroyed the strongholds and so manifested his great power².

23 There were however, many of the enemy who tortured by fear, had hidden themselves and escaped. They stayed for a 24 time in the fortresses at the various places near to the sea, then these heretical villains began again and again to plunder
 25 the different provinces. When Rājasiha whose commands were not lightly to be slighted, heard thereof, he betook himself 26 to Dīghavāpi³ which lies to the East. While he, experienced in all the statecraft taught by Manu, sojourned there, he 27 received news of the Olandas⁴. He thought that good, sent

¹ The language of the passage is in the form in which the MSS. have it and as I have adopted it in my edition, absolutely incorrect. It is however very doubtful whether we are justified in altering it, as the fault may lie with the author. The Col. Ed. alters migarājā va subbhayo into -rāje va subbhaye. I should nevertheless prefer to keep these words and to read saṃpatto in v. 20a instead of saṃpatte, which may be influenced by yūthamhi.

² There can be no doubt that the preceding verses refer to the victories of the Sinhalese arms mentioned in the note to v. 2. But the events are described in quite general terms.

³ For the district Dīghavāpi see 74. 89 and note.

⁴ Vimaladhammasuriya I. had already been in touch with the Dutch (see note to 94. 22). Under Rājasiha II. Dutch envoys already appeared in 1937, and the King on his part sent three of his own people to Admiral Westerwold, who lay with his vessels at Goa, to blockade it. Dutch vessels appeared at Batticaloa where a Portuguese garrison lay, and the united forces of the Sinhalese and the Dutch forced the Portuguese to surrender the fort (18th May, 1938). A treaty was made with two dignitaries to their fair land, had a number of people fetched from there in many ships and when these arrived in 28

 the rich, prosperous, thickly populated coast lands near Dīghavāpi, he showed them favour. As he wished to display to them 29 the military forces of his Laṅkā, he sent them the command to look quietly on. Then he began the fight with the foe 30 stationed near, slew a great mass of the foe and captured the stronghold. The Ruler of men made over the place to the 31 inhabitants of Olanda and showed them many other favours and made everyone contented.

From this time onward the Ruler of Laṅkā began at the 32 head of both armies¹, to carry on war by land and water on every side. He destroyed the fortresses situated at different 33 places and protected by massive stone walls, slew the enemy, erected in the whole of Laṅkā strongholds garrisoned by strong 34 forces and after absolutely annihilating the foe who had ravaged so long (in Laṅkā) and freeing (the country) from their 35 oppression, he in order to ward off the enemy, charged the inhabitants of Olanda with the protection of Laṅkā in the places situated on the sea. After arranging that these were 36 to appear before him every year with presents of divers kinds, the Ruler of men returned, like Vajrapāṇi² when he had 37 conquered in the battle against the Asuras, with his retinue to his town (of Sirivaḍḍhana)³.

Westerwold which was ratified in Batavia whither Rājasīha sent two envoys. It enabled the Dutch to gain a firm footing on the island.
 These are the events to which vv. 25 ff. refer. The narrative describes in one-sided fashion — not surprising in chroniclers — the achievements of the Sinhalese. That they alone conquered Batticaloa is not in accordance with the facts. The chief merit belongs to the Dutch guns.
 PIERIS 2, p. 227 ff.; CODRINGTON, HC., p. 117 ff.

² Name of Indra: "who carries the thunderbolt (vajira) in his hand."

³ Here again in the Mhva. only the one-sided Sinhalese standpoint is given. In diplomacy the Dutch were without doubt superior to King Rājasīha, while on the other hand, he was a very unreliable ally for them. Rājasīha's reign was not so void of friction after the treaty with the Dutch as one might assume from our chronicle. It was disturbed

- 38 Now while the Ruler of men, Rājasiha, dwelt here in safety, the wise (prince) sought out in fitting manner those people who were worthy of a position and granted them various positions
 39 such as that of senāpati and the like. Villages, fields and so on, everything that had belonged to the Buddha and the gods, in accordance with tradition, the Ruler of men gave 40 back as it had been formerly. He brought kings' daughters hither from the town of Madhurā, and after holding sway
 41 powerfully for fifty and two years¹, the mighty Monarch Rājasiha, who had guarded as his own eye in the best way the Order of the royal Sage of the line of the Sun and the laity, he the best of men went over to the king of death.
 42 Thus this exceeding mighty King, the ruler, who understood how to annihilate hostile forces, was yet unable with his strength and his other qualities to gain the mastery over death. When the discerning have grasped from the first, at the very beginning this superiority of Māra, they must with great zeal continually do meritorious works, such as alms-giving and the rest.

Here ends the ninety-sixth chapter, called «History of King Rājasiha», in the Mahāvārṣa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

internally by risings, as in 1641 by that plotted by Vijayapāla. The struggles between the Portuguese and the Dutch went on, the luck being sometimes on the one side sometimes on the other. Finally the Dutch triumphed. With the capture of Colombo (A. D. 1656) the fate of the Portuguese dominion was sealed. Immediately after that there was a breach between Rājasiha and the Dutch. The conflicts of the years which follow were multiplied for Rājasiha by inward strife. Lasting peace was not achieved, in spite of a peace favorable to the Sinhalese being signed in the year A. D. 1677, until the death of the King ten years later. Pieris 2, p. 228-290; Pieris 3, p. 1-35; Codrington, HC., p. 118 ff., 133 ff.

CHAPTER XCVII

HISTORY OF THE TWO KINGS, OF VIMALADHAMMA AND HIS SUCCESSOR

Now his son Vimaladhammasuriya became king whose 1 ornament was his faith and other virtues, who was a friend of the three jewels. As his first mahesi he took the daughter 2 of the mahesi in the town of Madhurā who had been fetched thence, gladdened his subjects by the four heart-winning qualities and protected uninterruptedly in peace and justice 3 the realm of Laṅkā as a lord of men whose ornament was his virtue.

Having attained his consecration as king, the King in pious 4 faith in the doctrine of the Victor, prepared in divers ways everything needful for a sacrificial festival for the Tooth Relic. In 5 honour of the Tooth of the Prince of the wise he erected a fair, three-storeyed pāsūda, resplendent with all kinds of (artistic) work, and for the sum of five and twenty thousand 6 silver pieces he had a reliquary made which he covered with gold and ornamented with the nine precious stones. In this 7 great reliquary that resembled a cetiya of precious stones, he laid the Tooth of the Victor.

As the Ruler thought to hold the festival of admission to 8
the Order, he prepared fair garments and other articles of use, five hundred of each kind, made everything over with 9 gifts and the like, together with a royal letter to prudent officials. These he sent to the country of Rakkhaṅga and 10 invited¹ the bhikkhu community with the thera Santāna at beautiful town of Sirivaḍḍhana, made them amid tokens of 12 respect, take up their abode there and provided them with the four necessities. Then after he had erected in the right way, as formerly, a building at the landing-place of the 13 Gaṅgā, within a boundary drawn in the water, he brought the bhikkhu community thither, had the ceremony of admission performed on thirty-three sons of good family and 14 so helped the Order of the Victor to attain new glory. Then full of faith he had one hundred and twenty sons of good 15 family appointed to the position of sāmaṇeras, provided them abundantly with the four necessities, had them instructed in the true doctrine and thus laid up a store of merit.

16 Thinking of the great merit that lies in the use of the feet¹, he betook himself to the Sumanakūṭa and celebrating 17 with jewels, pearls and the rest, with offerings of gold and precious stones and with divers stuffs and so forth, a great festival, he tarried there seven days.

18 He sheltered with a great umbrella of silver the foot-print of the Sage which was stamped on the Sumanakūṭa and celebrated a great festival.

19 Day after day he listened to (the sermon of the) doctrine and since even on days which were not uposatha days, he 20 kept the ordained fasts, he did much good. In this and many other ways, longing for good, he day and night unweariedly

 of the laity and the Order, fell under the power of death
 after a reign of twenty and two years².

to the friendly relations established between them and the court of Kandy. The ceremony of the upasampadā took place again (pure viya) at Gaṇḍhambatitṭha (Getamba). The description in v. 8 ff. has a great resemblance also in the wording to that describing analogous circumstances under Vimaladhammasuriya I. (94. 15 ff.). Compare for instance,
 v. 12 cd with 94. 17 cd, v. 15 ab with 94. 20 cd.

¹ I. e. the merit of the pilgrimages. See 92. 15 ff. where the pilgrimages of Viravikkama to Mahiyaṅgaṇa and to Adam's Peak are described.

² Vimaladhammasuriya II. reigned from A. D. 1687-1707. He was Generous in all that is good, as in the giving of alms and 22

the like, with great wisdom, full of devotion he helped the excellent teaching of the excellent King of the wise, the one and only guide of the world, to attain glory. Help ye, therefore also evermore and unweariedly the excellent doctrine to attain glory.

Thereupon his son Sirivīraparakkamanarindasīha be- 23 came king. This King who was an abode of discernment and manly virtues, in order to protect the royal dignity in Lankā, 24 fetched princesses from the town of Madhurā and made them first maheśīs. He performed meritorious works such as the 25 giving of alms and the like, celebrated daily a festival for the Tooth Relic and thus laid up a store of merit. He showed 26 care for the bhikkhus who had been admitted to the Order during his father's life, had many sons of good family submitted in faith to the ceremony of world-renunciation and thus furthered the Order. In order to venerate the Mahiyāṅga- 27 cetiya that was erected already in the lifetime of the Buddha, the mighty King betook himself thither, sacrificed to the cetiya 28 with all kinds of coloured stuffs and while celebrating a sacrificial festival with silver and golden flowers, abundantly 29 with divers fragrant blossoms of the kind that grow on land and in water¹, with food solid and soft, he laid up much merit.

At the head of a great army he went forth twice to the 30
same Mahiyāṅga and celebrated a great sacrificial festival.
Twice the Lord of men went in faith to Sumanakūṭa, sacrificed 31 extraordinarily pacific compared with his predecessor. Although at first he had again and again to remonstrate with the Dutch about the non-fulfilment of obligations to which they had pledged themselves in the treaty of 1677 (see COBRINGTON, HC., p. 135; PIERIS 3, p. 46 f.) and although the Dutch managed to put the King off, there was no war during this whole period.

¹ The compiler must have had something of the sort in his mind.
But I am doubtful if we should simply change -jātake bahum into -jākehi ca, as does the Col. Ed. It might be better to assume an obscure expression on the part of the author. His knowledge of Pāli was by no means excellent. It is also hard to imagine that the second reading, if it did stand there originally, could have been corrupted into the first.

32 there and so laid up a store of merit. At the head of a great retinue he left the great city, went forth to the great (city) 33 Anurādhapura and celebrated a great sacrificial festival. He had a robe made the size of the robe of the Deliverer¹ and sacrificed to the Tooth of the Deliverer in divers ways with 34 articles befitting the sacrifice. Not far from the capital², on the fair bank cliff of the Gaṅgā, the Lord of men laid out 35 in a great cocopalm plantation a suburb by name Kuṇḍasālā and dwelt there³. And there at that self-same spot he had dwelling huts put up in fitting manner and made sāmaṇeras take up their abode in them. He performed day by day many 36 good works like the giving of alms and the rest, had books copied and when he saw that the temple which his royal 37 father had erected in the capital for the Tooth Relic, had fallen into decay, his heart was grieved. The Lord of men 38 had the beautiful (temple) rebuilt, two-storeyed, splendid; he provided it with a portal resplendent with all kinds of brilliant ornaments, made it so that with its stucco coating it 39 resembled a mountain of silver, provided it with a graceful roof and had thirty-two jātaka depicted in coloured painting⁴ on the two walls of the courtyard: the Vidhurajātaka⁵, the 40 Guttila- and Ummaggajātaka; the Dadhivāhana-, Mahākapha-, Sutanu- and Chaddantajātaka, the Dhammaddhaja-, Dhamma-jāṭaka, the Dummedhajāṭaka and the Kāliṅgabodhijāṭaka;

 the Silavajāṭaka⁴ and the Maṇḍavyajāṭaka⁵, as well as the Vessantarajāṭaka. While thus having these thirty-two jāṭakas 45 faultlessly represented in coloured painting, the Lord of men laid up an immeasurable store of merit.

In the midst of the town he had erected round the great 46
 Bodhi tree, the cetiyas and the temple of Nāthasura⁶ -- enclosing them on all sides -- a fine wall of stone, massive, 47 lofty, brilliant in its coating of stucco, like to a necklace of pearls adorning the necks of the ladies of the town and created thereby for himself an abundance of renown.

Among the sāmaṇeras who lived at his own time (was one) 48 who was dowered with the virtue of a moral life, who ever rejoiced in unweariedness, in the many works of elucidation 49 and in the words of the Enlightened One, a poet, one learned in the scriptures, ready of speech, teacher of a host of disciples, renowned, who devoted his life to his own and to others' weal, 50 who shone like the moon in the heaven of the Order in Lankā.
 For this sāmaṇera, Sarapaṃkara by name, who was an abode 51 of faith and of knowledge, rejoicing in unweariedness, the Ruler -- distinguishing him again and again by honours 52 spiritual and secular -- had a reliquary made one and a half cubits high for preserving the relic of the King of the 53 wise, the Enlightened One, the highest Protector of the world.
 He covered it with gold, set it with 700 jewels and made over the shimmering casket to the sāmaṇera together with 54

the relic as well as many books about the true doctrine and 55 so distinguished him. The Lord of men granted him clothing and other necessities as well as numerous people for service and honoured him thus with secular gifts.

56 To procure a long existence for the true doctrine, the Lord of men invited (that same) Saranampkara in befitting manner 57 and had composed by this discerning sāmānera who strove
 after pure enlightenment, that work on the true doctrine entitled the Sāratthasaṅgaha, furnished with eleven thousand sections¹, further a commentary in the tongue of Laṅkā on 58 the Mahābodhivaṃsa², as well as a commentary on the work Bhesajjamañjūsā³ which was composed at the time when the former King Parakkamabāhu held sway in the town of 59 Jambuddoṇṭ⁴ by that discerning therā, assiduous in well-doing who was head of the (bhikkhus) dwelling in the Paṇcapari-60 veṇa⁵, with the wish that thus those who have devoted them-61 selves to the spiritual life should be spared illness. After the wise (prince) had performed these and many other meritorious works and had carried on the government for thirty and three years, he fell into the power of death⁶.

¹ P. gantha. The meaning "section" is uncertain. In no case are we justified in referring to WILSON, as does W., according to whom the skr. grantha denotes a distinct number of syllables (32), because WILSON is speaking of a metre, which however W. himself admits.

² For this see GEIGER, Pāli, p. 25, no. 29. 2; MALALASEKHARA, Pāli Literature of Ceylon, p. 156 ff. Whether by Saranampkara's "commentary" (atthasaṅgaha) the Eja-Bodhivaṃsa is meant seems doubtful.

³ "Medicine-chest". Probably a collection of recipes of the character of the Indian Bhaiṣajyaratnāvalī (JOLLY, Medicine, p. 2).

⁴ Parakkamabāhu II. is meant.

⁵ A monastery called Paṇcapariveṇamūla is mentioned 67. 61. One could also translate: "of the bhikkhus living in the five pariveṇas".

⁶ The Chronicle concerns itself solely with the king's relation to the Church and is fulsome in its praise of his merits. It does not mention a single word about the conspiracy which nearly cost him his life. As little does it mention the very unsatisfactory conditions existing for the most part in the territories occupied by the Dutch nor the conflicts, arising out of questions of commercial policy, between the people of

After the King had attained the highest bliss on the island of Laṅkā, he left behind his kinsfolk, his friends and his life, and went to that state where all that is left behind. When ye have grasped that, ye remembering the truth of the oral admonitions of the highest Sage, should practise meritorious doing that surpasses all else, that brings the bliss of deliverance, that grants the bliss of the world of the gods. 62

CHAPTER XCVIII

HISTORY OF SIRIVIJAYARĀJASĪHA

- 1 After Narindasīha's death the younger brother¹ of the 2 Maheś of this king² became king, adorned with the ornament
 3 of virtue. Known by the name of Sirivijayarājasīha, he 4 was after the attainment of his consecration as king, piously
 5 attached to the Triad of the jewels. He was diligent in 6 hearkening to the sermon of the doctrine, unwearied, discern-7 ing, ever full of zeal intent on intercourse with pious and 8 good people. To establish his own dynasty he fetched princesses from the town of Madhurā and made them his chief maheśis. He won over the people in Laṅkā in the best manner possible by the four heart-winning qualities and took up his abode in the fair town (Sirivaḍḍhana). The Maheśis of the King, too, gave up the false faith to which they had been long attached, and adopted in the best manner possible the true faith which confers immortality. They heard the incomparable, true doctrine of the Buddha, the highest Protector of the world and thus adored with constant devotion the Buddha and the other (sacred) objects. In their faith they worshipped the Tooth Relic day by day with sacrifice, with jasmine and other blossoms and with all kinds of flower festivals, with sweet betel mixed with camphor and other 9 things, with lamps with fragrant oil, with sweet-smelling sandal wood and so forth, with divers kinds of fragrant incense, with sugar and honey and with other drugs, with garments, ornaments and so on, with silver and golden bowls 11 which were abundantly filled with all that one can chew, eat, sip, drink and taste, with curtains, carpets and the like, with 12 many articles of use and with costly robes — and thus and otherwise laid up a store of merit. They kept constantly 13 the five moral commandments¹ and the uposatha vows even on days that were not uposathas, diligent in hearing the (sermon of the) true doctrine. Even as the yak cows (protect 14 their tails)², so they preserved the memory of the Buddha and the other (sacred objects)³. They worked for their perfection, had sacred books copied. They strove after the blessing that lies in generosity. They understood to perfection 15 the regular offering of food and other (occasional) distribution of food to wandering or sick (bhikkhus). They were not 16 attached to acquired wealth but dispensed (it in) continual feeding and the like. They made young people renounce the world, showed them favour of many kinds. They had good instruction given in the knowledge of the sacred scriptures and 17 of pious duties and by dispensing always what was desired they were like to a wishing-tree. Kind beyond measure and 18 very full of pity they thought of all people in Laṅkā as a mother of her children, and were merciful and mines of virtue. They had images and reliquaries fashioned in the best manner 19 possible and always fearing every sin and ever rejoicing over every meritorious deed, adorned with the ornament of such and many other virtues, they were highly regarded in the whole island of Laṅkā. The King had dwelling-places erected here and there and made the sāmaṇeras take up their abode in them and pious as he was, he showed them full of zeal, much favour with garments and other necessities, heard the splendid true doctrine from these sāmaṇeras and revered (especially) the sāmaṇera Sarapaṃkara by name who strong in faith dwelt in the Upasathārāma, who was a mine of virtues. He invited him and had a commentary on the four bhāṇavāras¹ made by him in the language of Laṅkā and thus protected the knowledge of the sacred scriptures.

¹ In kanīṭṭhabhāta I see the influence of the Sinhalese on the Pāli of the chronicler, vā being added in Sinhalese at the end of attributive adjectives.

² According to 97. 24 (cf. 98. 4'), Narindasīha's Maheś was a princess from Madhurā. With the ascent of the throne by her brother a foreign dynasty is thus introduced into Laṅkā. The series of Sinhalese kings ends with Narindasīha. The succession of Vijayarājasīha meanwhile, was not undisputed. A strong party at court supported the claims of Unambuva, a son of Narindasīha's by a concubine. It seems however, that he voluntarily renounced the throne. Later on he lived safe and sound at the court of Kandy.

Since the Lord of men had heard from foolish people outside (of the Buddhist Order) that great evil would befall if he were to place the relic in a new relic temple, he gave orders that this should be done by other people² and betook himself thence to another town. While he sojourned there the dignitaries assembled and together with the caretakers³ and other people, they tried with all their might to open the reliquary. But although they tried the whole night long they did not succeed. The dignitaries went thither and told the matter to the Great king. When the King heard that, he came in haste to the splendid town and after the Ruler had reverently made offerings with all kinds of fragrant flowers, with lamps, incense and the like and shown his reverence,

¹ For purposes of recitation the whole of the Tipiṭaka is divided into bhāṇavāras, sections of equal length. There are said to be 2547 of these (CHULAKAS, s. v.). It seems to me, however, as if the word in our passage is used instead of nikāya. The commentary would then have embraced Dīgha-, Majjhima-, Samyutta- and Aṅguttara-Nikāya.

³ Vattakārakā (meaning literally "fulfilling the duty or the task") refers I believe, to the guardians who were appointed just at that time, to look after the shrines and see that they were kept in proper condition. See PIERIS 3, p. 70.

he took hold of the lock and at once opened the reliquary without difficulty. Then after opening one after the other the caskets inside it, he beheld the Tooth of the Enlightened One. "It is accomplished, with success" uttering these joyful words, he assembled the inhabitants of the town, prepared a great feast and celebrated a great sacrificial festival. As he gazed on the wonderful (relic) the Monarch was transported with joy and enthusiasm. As offerings he presented an elephant and a horse, jewels, pearls and the like, took the sacred Tooth of the Prince of the wise in the lotus of his hand, showed it forth and so caused all to rejoice in perfect fashion. The relic temple built in the time of former kings he furnished with all kinds of stuffs interwoven with gold, lit lamps with divers-smelling oils, had filled jars placed about, and then in this gaily decorated temple, like to a heavenly temple, he placed on a silver throne the Tooth of the Prince of the wise. He arranged a great festival, made a sacrifice to the relic and after cleansing the whole town in a worthy manner and strewing it with sand he placed during this festival of the Tooth Relic, round about the temple, within in the court and without on the terrace, further in the royal court and in all the streets on either side with lofty poles placed upright, an unbroken series of festive arches, bound thereon banana stalks and adorned them fair with areca and coconut blossoms and other flowers. With the brightly hued, gleaming and shimmering streamers tied bunch-wise to the points of the poles, the sky above the town looked pleasant as if it were filled with flights of cranes. Here and there he placed in due order filled jars and in the maṇḍapas in a circle in front of the temple terrace he fastened canopies shimmering with silver and golden and other embroideries, hung thereabout brightly gleaming curtains, spread there in fair fashion carpets resplendent with many a work of art and also strewed around the five kinds of flowers, lāja and the like¹. Then after the Ruler had put the whole

¹ P. lājapañcamakay, lit. "that in which lāja is the fifth". See for this PTS. P. D. s. v. lāja. This is the name for the blossom of the city in order so that it looked as if the former kings of Laṅkā were celebrating a festival with the thought that in like 48 fashion the King of the gods makes a feast in the city of the gods¹, he himself with royal ornaments adorned, gathered 49 together in that town the sāmāyeras who dwelt in Laṅkā, further the lay brethren and lay sisters, all the inhabitants of the town and the people who dwelt outside in the provinces.

 50 Out of mercy towards them² the Ruler of the earth for whom pity was the highest, flung himself on the ground in most 51 humble posture³ and so worshipped the Tooth of the Prince of the wise. Then the King took it in the lotus of his hand 52 and his heart filled with the highest joy, he left the relic temple. With silver umbrellas, with a golden casket, with 53 row upon row of fair fly whisks, with manifold offerings of flowers, consisting of silver, golden and other blooms, with 54 divers jewels and pearls, with robes, ornaments and many other sacrificial articles, with the fivefold music⁴ he celebrated a great sacrificial festival, like to a stream flowing on uninter-55 ruptedly. Then the King, the Ruler of Laṅkā betook himself dalbergia arborea. W's version is quite different (note to the passage). He takes laja in the sense of "roasted rice" and remarks "Paddy when roasted bursts and the grain inside the husk expands in the shape of a beautiful white flower. These are used on public occasions and festivals as a mark of respect, for showing the ground whereon a shrine is taken or on which a high person walks over."

¹ The style is extremely stilted. Literally the passage should be translated thus: "showing the town in such a way that one would be obliged to say: in such wise did the former princes of Laṅkā celebrate a festival, whereby they thought: thus doth the King of the gods etc. etc." The idea is this: the King has adorned the city as magnificently as the kings of yore were wont to do on like occasions, and the splendour they displayed was due to the fact that they imitated divine models.

² He will not rob the people of the purifying spectacle of the sacred relic.

to the maṇḍapa outside (in front of the temple) which was adorned with divers bright ornament and standing here, displayed the sacred Tooth. Having thus given the greatest joy 56 to the mighty multitude gathered round, he brought the Tooth Relic back to its place. Thus by bringing full contentment 57 to all as if by the sight of the Buddha in person, he laid up a store of much good.

Now after the Lord of men had offered abundantly with 58 all kinds of ornament, such as gold, jewels, pearls and the like, with sacrificial offerings like elephants, horses, slaves 59 male and female, with flowers like jasmine, campaka¹ and other blossoms, with fragrant sandal wood and the like, he 60 bethought himself of the great blessing inherent in a sacrifice of lamps. Hence the Lord of men issued the command that in their own town and in the cetiyas in the divers provinces on one and the same day², people should make an offering 61 of lamps, and in that selfsame night he gathered together the people and celebrated a sacrifice of lamps with seven hundred 62 and ninety thousand, six hundred lamps. Thus with burning 63 lamps the Ruler of Laṅkā made the land of Laṅkā like to the star-strewn firmament. With an offering of three hundred³ 64 thirty and three thousand, eight hundred flowers he laid up a store of merit.

This King rich in virtue who found joy in causing images 65 of the Buddha to be made, had erected in Ālokalena⁴ and other vihāras in the province of Mātula, as well as here and there in the rock temples of the various (other) provinces, Buddha 66 statues in life-size, in recumbent, standing and sitting posture and new cetiyas which bring happiness to living creatures, and he had many decayed image houses restored and increased 67 thereby showing favour to the people, the quantity of his merit.

² The words ekāhe va must be taken in the oratio recta.

³ For koṭi which here probably means 100,000, see PTS. P. D. s. v. In has the general meaning of an extremely high number.

⁴ Now the Alu-vihāra not far from Matale situated in the cleft of a mighty primeval landslide.

68 In the town of Sirivaddhana the Lord of men did away with the royal palace and many other buildings that had 69 been founded formerly but had meanwhile fallen into decay.
 In place of these the Lord of men built new houses which 70 excelled by reason of their mason work and the like, made fine gates¹ and erected a magnificent gate-building furnished with iron gateways, adorned with ornaments² of divers form and consisting of two storeys.

71 While he resided in this town, he full of zeal when listening to the sermon of the doctrine, had maṇḍapas erected 72 within the royal courtyard. He furnished them completely with coloured arches and the like, put up canopies, spread 73 seats, brought then with great ceremony³ many preachers of the true doctrine thither, made them be seated and lay hold 74 of their white fans. Then he hearkened to the good, heart-penetrating doctrine as it was preached by them along with enlightening explanation and the like, and filled with pious 75 joy the Ruler honoured it with gold and silver, with lamps, incense and the like, with divers coloured stuffs, (in short) 76 with sacrificial articles of every kind, the Monarch himself in common with the dignitaries and the troops and so on many occasions laid up a store of abundant good.

77 Now when the King heard through the true doctrine that spiritual offerings⁴ are a great thing, he intent on the wel-78 fare of the people dwelling in the various provinces, had dwellings and sermon halls erected here and there in places 79 fitted for the assembling of a great multitude of people. Then the Lord of men sent to the various places numerous preachers of the doctrine and others, had the people gathered together and the true doctrine preached to them and in this way he offered a spiritual offering.

The infamous Paraṅgis, the infidels, the impious ones who 80 at the time of King Rājasīha had still remained behind in the town and now dwelling here and there, rich in cunning, 81 endeavoured by gifts of money and the like to get their creed adopted by others, led a life without reverence for the doctrine 82 (of the Buddha). When the King heard thereof he became vehemently indignant, issued commands to his dignitaries, had 83 their houses and their books destroyed and banished from the country those who did not give up their faith¹.

On the Sumanakūṭa made sacred by the footprint of the 84 Enlightened One the Ruler celebrated a sacrifice of lamps and all other festivals. In Anurādhapura, in Mahiyāgaṇa and in 85 other places he likewise celebrated a great sacrificial festival.
To east and west (of the town) where water made the road 86 impassable, he had stone bridges put up for the comfort of those coming and going.

When the Monarch realised that the Order of the Victor 87 was declining because a bhikkhu community was not to be had in Laṅkā he was greatly moved. As he was minded to 88 invite a bhikkhu community, he considered in every possible way where the Order of the Sage could possibly still exist.
Then he heard from the Olandas² the welcome news that the 89
Order still existed in various countries, in Pegu, Rakkhaṅga,

¹ The King's measures are thus directed against the Roman Catholic Church and against the Portuguese still settled in the country. For the Catholic mission in Ceylon at the time of the Dutch settlement and its ultimate suppression see PIERIS 3, p. 70 f.

² The only passage where Vijayarājasīha's relations with the Dutch are noted. If in spite of the friction caused by trade, these relations led to no open rupture, this was largely due to the easy going and at times really feeble policy of the Dutch. Their forbearance was met by increased claims on the part of the court of Kandy. An embassy to Pegu was first sent off in the year 1740. The Dutch Company placed a vessel at its disposal which was however wrecked off the coast of Pegu. A second embassy seems to have gone to Siam in 1741. Envoys of the Sinhalese king came also in 1746 to Siam and succeeded in persuading a number of bhikkhus to undertake the journey to Ceylon. Vijayarājasīha however, died 1747 before their arrival. See COBRINGTON, HC. p. 139 f. and especially p. 154; PIERIS 3, p. 71 ff.

- 90 Sāminda¹. Now in order to test the condition of the Order of the Sage in these various countries, the King had letters 91 carefully written in the sacred language², gave them over to ministers and other dignitaries and sent these forth singly.
 When the Lord of men heard the news that in the kingdom 92 of Ayodhyā³ the Order existed in all its purity and in the best condition, in order to bring from that same country sons of 93 the Victor to Laṅkā, he sent dignitaries thither to whom he gave a writing together with many gifts and sacrificial implements.
 94 For the placing therein of the Tooth of the Prince of the wise the Monarch had a fair, golden reliquary made one and a half cubits high and encrusted with costly jewels and pearls.
 95 But before it was finished his merit was exhausted⁴ after he had reigned eight years.
 96 This prince who was adorned with the ornament of faith and of many other virtues, who was at pains to purify to the utmost the splendid Order of the Buddha, that best of men after he had done much good, went finally thither to Namuci⁵.
 97 In this wise did the King of Laṅkā whose joy was in the welfare of others, who worked for his own and others' salvation, carry on the government, as best among the best, the Ruler of men who loved virtue. Ye who wish for your prosperity in this world and for abundant happiness in the world beyond must therefore wholly give up indolence and do a multitude of meritorious works which will bring you many a happiness.

Here ends the ninety-eighth chapter, called «History of Sirivijayarājasīha», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

CHAPTER XCIX

ACCOUNT OF THE KING'S CONSECRATION
AND OF OTHER FESTIVALS

After the passing of this Monarch dowered with splendid 1 virtues, his brother-in-law¹ became king of kings. Gifted with physical beauty (he was) a delight to the eyes of the people, filling the whole superb island of Laṅkā with splendour, a prince of glorious grace.

When in the island of Laṅkā the year two thousand, two 2 hundred and ninety since the nirvana of the Enlightened One had come² this Ruler of men whose joy was the welfare of 3 Laṅkā, comforted his subjects who were afflicted by their parting from the Great king. This whole people racked by 4 suffering, like to the darkness (which sets in) when the sun after it has illumined the whole world, goes down — the far- 5 famed King made free from grief, like to the (newly) rising sun which illumines the whole world (afresh) and having taken 6 over the royal dignity of Laṅkā, he made everyone joyful to the utmost. After attaining his consecration as king, the Lord of men who was devoted in faith to the Triad of the 7 jewels, Buddha and the others, strove unweariedly after merit. The highly famed one had the whole town (of Sirivaddhana) 8 cleansed and decorated with stuffs, triumphal arches and the like. Then he gathered together the whole of the inhabitants of Laṅkā completely in the fair, glorious town and moving 9 along with royal magnificence, the Great king whose merit

was now having its effect¹, marched round the town, his right side turned towards it, thus making known that the realm of 10 Laṅkā bereft of its king had again a king. The Lord of men dowered with abundant merit, resided in Sirivaḍḍhana.
 11 The virtuous one had (already aforetime) made the firm resolve² to shelter the Order of the Sage and now under the name of Kittisirirājasīha he ruled gloriously this our Laṅkā. Enjoying the good fortune of the royal dignity of Laṅkā, full of discernment, recognizing that his wealth consisted in faith, he mindful of what things are of worth and of what things are worthless, prepared in piety a festival
 12 for the three sacred objects, Buddha and so forth³. He gave up evil friends and enjoyed intercourse with the learned people; he passed his time with the good and hearkened to 13 the incomparable doctrine. Pious and wise as he was, the Lord of men distinguished between what should be done and what should not be done. What should not be done he avoided, 14 but to that which should be done he held fast. By the four heart-winning qualities he made all people well disposed to 15 him and he was worthy of the praise of the learned. Hearing that reward lies in a spiritual offering⁴ and success in the hearkening to the true doctrine and merit in the copying of works of the true doctrine, as also in sacrificial festivals for 16 the doctrine he thought: that which is in accordance with the true doctrine⁵ must be done. He had maṇḍapas erected in

³ V. 6c to the close of v. 11 is a single sentence. The construction is however, quite inorganic and it is impossible to translate the sentence as a whole. It is the same with the following.

⁴ See note to 98. 77.

⁵ P. saddhammato must be understood adverbially. Cf. skr. dharmaṭas "according to law or rule, lawfully."

many places for sermons, made canopies therein of stuff of 17 varied colours, furnished them in every possible way with arches and other ornaments, lit lamps and spread seats, brought 18 thither with worthy service and honour preachers of the true 19 doctrine, invited them full of reverence, made them sit down on the well prepared seats, made these preachers recite parts 20 of the true doctrine and listened with devotion the whole night long to many suttantas, such as the Dhammacakka Suttanta¹ and others. Since he recognized the worthlessness 21 of body, life and wealth as worthlessness and the worth of listening to the true doctrine as worth, he was pious and 22 joyful and celebrated in common with the dignitaries and the troops, a great festival with articles of sacrifice of every kind. For the welfare and blessing of the multitudes dwelling within 23 and without the town the Lord of men repeatedly had spiritual 24 offerings offered and thus performed a meritorious work consisting in spiritual offerings.

Full of reverence towards the bhikkhu community² who 25 had come from Rakkhaṅga, towards the bhikkhus of Laṅkā and towards the many sāmaṇeras, who had renounced the world, the Lord of men showed them favour with offerings 26 of robes and other necessities and had the Paritta and other salutary texts recited by them. Thus on many occasions he 27 furthered the true doctrine, made offerings of necessities and so increased the store of his merit.

At a cost of nine thousand, six hundred (kaḥapaṇas) he 28 in his piety had a magnificent golden book made. On its 29 golden leaves he had many Suttantas inscribed such as the

² Bhikkhus from Rakkhaṅga had come to Ceylon under Vimaladhammasuriya I. (91. 15) and under the second king of this name (97. 10). Kittisiri had some brought from Siam. This is narrated as a kind of appendix in 100. 54 ff. In all probability the Siamese monks are to be considered as included in this passage.

30 Dhammacakka Sutta and others and had these recited by preachers of the true doctrine the whole night long. Honouring them with many articles, he listened repeatedly to the 31 incomparable doctrine. The Lord of men called scribes together, made them copy out in one day the Dīgha-Nikāya¹, showed 32 them much favour and then had the sacred text preached the whole night long in the right manner. He celebrated a great 33 sacrificial festival, listened to (texts) and recited himself. In his piety he had the Saṃyutta-Nikāya and many other books 34 copied and gave the scribes money. People who had renounced the world and inhabitants of houses² had other sacred books carefully copied and when these were shown to him he was 35 highly pleased, showed them with money and other gifts much favour and thus in his pious zeal took a share in the merit of other dwellers in Laṅkā.

36 Yearning for merit the Lord of men betook himself with his retinue to superb Anurādhapura. Here the King sacrificed
 37 to the Bodhi tree and the sacred cetiyas with elephants, and horses, with gold, silver and the like, and thus in divers ways
 38 laid up a store of pious works. Then too in royal splendour the highly-famed Lord of men visited the Mahiyaṅga-cetiya and the superb Nakhā-cetiya and revered them by the celebration of a great festival and so laid up a store of merit.
 39 In order to honour with sacrifices the beautiful cetiyas and vihāras erected by the Lord of men Parakkama in superb Pulaṭthinagara, the highly famed King rich in faith, betook himself thither with a great retinue and sacrificed to them in 40 the right way. Endowed with faith and other virtues the King also honoured the Rajata-vihāra³ and brought together a store of merit.

42 After a sacrificial festival for the lotus-hued patron god and other deities such as was popularly recognized as bringing luck even in the days of former sovereigns of Laṅkā¹, he had for the purpose of a military display², the whole town 43 without exception put in order like the city of the gods. He gathered together all the inhabitants of Laṅkā and in the town 44 he had the people from the individual provinces separated and made them dwell in different places, provided with standards. 45 Then he had the symbols³ in the temples of the gods placed on the back of an elephant. He had the elephant surrounded⁴ 46 by divers beaters of the drum and the tambourine and by crowds of dancers⁵, by various groups of elephants and divers groups of horses, by people wearing the Brahman dress of 47 various stuffs and with (divers) ornaments, by people carrying divers umbrellas and divers fly-whisks; by various groups of 48 women and various groups of dignitaries, by people carrying divers shields and divers swords, by such as carried divers 49 spears and various symbols⁶, by such as carried various stuffs

¹ Something of this sort must have been in the mind of the chronicler when he wrote this passage with its absolutely confused style. Maṅgala-saṃmatana must be taken as attribute to paṭṭa contained in the compound which follows (42 ed). The Col. Ed. tries at least to smoothe away the difficulties by reading instead of the °bhūpātā of the MSS. °bhūpā ca. I fear this amounts to a correction of the author.

² P. senāgaḍassanattāya. W. does not give the full sense of this expression. That a military tournament is meant is clear from verses 44-45 a b. The assembled people are divided according to the individual local contingents of which the army is made up. Each contingent has its special flag. The army thus forms the main element in the festive procession.

³ P. decatthāna-āyudhāni. Skr. āyudha means besides "weapon", "implement" in general. W. translates quite correctly "the emblems of the gods that were in the temples".

⁴ Anticipates hatthiṃ parivāriya in v. 51.

⁶ Here again āyudha is used. I should prefer here to take the word

- 50 and various banners; by people who had come from various regions and who understood the different tongues; by such as were practised in the various arts and by divers artisans —
- 51 with such and many other people he had the elephant surrounded, ordering them to go immediately in front or behind.
- 52 Thereupon the King set forth, like to the Prince of the gods, with great (and) royal splendour and marched round the whole town, his right side turned towards it. Finally¹ they all arrived again and entered (the town) according to their rank².
- 53 When our King of kings³, dowered with faith, wisdom and other virtues, was wont every year to hold the Āsāḷhi⁴
- 54 festival, he was minded beforehand to celebrate a sacrificial festival for the Buddha. He had a canopy fastened on the
- 55 back of the royal elephant beautifully ornamented with gold embroidery. Then he had the elephant whose tusk was as
- 56 the bright moon⁵, decorated with ornaments and then surrounded by (other) elephants whose riders held in their hand silver umbrellas and fly-whisks⁶ and flowers of every kind, by

in the same sense as in v. 45, as "weapons" are already mentioned in the foregoing.

¹ P. niṭṭhite used as adverb, as also in v. 58.

² This verse is a good example of the utter neglect of style where the subject so rāja (nikkhamitvā, katvā) in the same verse is followed by the plural predicate pavisanti.

⁴ The Āsāḷha month corresponds to June-July. The festival held in this month brings in the rainy season. H. Kern, Manual of Indian Buddhism, p. 100.

⁵ P. subbha-candī-radaṃ. I separate the compound thus, candī seeming to me to stand for skr. candra or candrin. The explanation is however, uncertain.

⁶ The acc. rajatacchattacāmere is governed by gāhaka in the follow-people having in their hand articles of sacrifice and wearing garlands of flowers, by people with various banners and pennons 57 and by such as wore divers garments, by various royal dignitaries and by people come hither from various regions. Finally 58 the Lord of men placed the splendid sparkling casket of gold in which the bodily relic¹ of the Buddha was contained 59 carefully under the canopy and by the strewing of flowers let a rain of flowers rain (upon it). With the shouts of the 60 cries of "Hail"¹, with the sound of the shell trumpets and the cymbals and with the rattle of the various drums celebrating high festival², good and pious people their hearts filled 61 with astonishment and admiration, with hands folded before the brow, paid lasting reverence (to the relic). But the Lord 62 of men had the Tooth Relic revered with all kinds of particularly costly sacrificial gifts by people who bore lamps on poles and who were festively attired. Then placing at the 63 head the relic which holds the first place among all things worthy of reverence by gods, demons and men, he ordered 64 all the rest, such as gods³ and men to follow behind. He himself in royal splendour to the strains of hymns of praise which promised happiness, set forth in all the majesty of a Great king, with great magnificence showing men how even 65 thus the King of the gods in the city of the gods is wont to celebrate high festival for the relics.

Dowered with faith and many other virtues, devoted to 66 the Buddha, his Doctrine and his Order, collected, mindful of what is worth and of what is worthless, ever performing meritorious works, such as almsgiving and the like; distinguish- 67 ed by splendid virtues, piety, wisdom, mercy, shining over the ing compound. Thus we have again to do with a compound resolved into its component parts (= rajatacchuttacāmarapupphagāhakaārūḥaka-tāhī).

¹ Not "relics" (W.); it is only a case of the Tooth Relic.

² I am inclined to think that kārento which might be the direct equivalent of the skr. kārayantas, belongs to the following janā pājenti.

³ By surā are meant the figures of deities or divine symbols which are carried in processions.

island, with faith in the Enlightened One, living according to the good doctrine of the Sage, dowered with the ten powers¹, ever giving alms and performing other meritorious works unweariedly and full of zeal, mindful of what is worth and of what is worthless, he ever acted in this way for the welfare of all men.

68 With great ceremony he instituted day by day a great 69 festival for the Tooth Relic, reverential towards the triad of the jewels. His own community which had been received into the Order in his own time, he provided in pious reverence 70 from his own property with the four articles of use. Devoted in piety to the true doctrine he listened again and again to (the preaching of the) doctrine and accumulated in pious re-71 verence numerous meritorious works. He furthered as during the lifetime of the Buddha the Order of the Victor and in-72 creased the happiness of the people dwelling in Laṅkā. When he heard of the doings of former kings, of Parakkamabāhu and others, he recognized it as right and imitated their doings.
 73 He learned the duties of a king, was filled with reverence for kingly duties, shunned the (four) false paths, schooled himself in the four heart-winning qualities, showed his brothers and 74 others all favour by befitting action, made them contented and won their hearts by caring for them in the right way.

75 In this manner the Sovereign of Laṅkā, the Lord of men, whose joy was in the welfare of others sheltered in the best way, ever unweariedly the Order of the Master as likewise the laity, and when he learned the history of the many rulers of men who had formerly been kings in Laṅkā, he mused on their deeds and made the resolve: "I also will fulfil the duties 76 of a king." In making this resolve he thought of the work, entitled Mahāvamsa², in which the ancient history of the kings of the great dynasty as of those of the lesser dynasty 77 is narrated in the form of verses, from Mahāsaṃmata to (the kings of) Hattiselapura¹. And the King of Laṅkā caused an examination to be made in due order of this book existing on the island of Laṅkā and of the same chronicle of the kings of Laṅkā brought from the Sāmindā country — of these two books separately — and when he heard that the Mahāvamsa was deficient, he also caused the unknown history of the kings of the latter time — beginning with Parakkamabāhu up to the kings of the present time — to be written down and to be continued (thus) the royal chronicle.

Thus while he neither transgressed the commandments (laid down) for a king nor the precepts of religion, the Lord of men carried on the royal government in justice and peace. In accordance with the duties of a king he daily did good, such as almsgiving and the like, mindful of the sublime religion, practising the four heart-winning things, practising generosity and friendly speech and care for the welfare of others, and constant in condescension. To show the world that he respected his royal brothers² as himself he assigned the two uparājas vehicles and retinue and every kind of distinction, made them thus completely contented and thus showed forth in the best way the fourfold heart-winning qualities. These two who in this wise attained distinction, celebrated each for himself a great festival for the Tooth Relic. They had books copied

¹ I. e. Kurunegala. According to this passage the chronicle came down to the time of Parakkamabāhu IV., who resided in Kurunegala. The MSS. confirm this where after 90. 102 a new section begins. The mode of expression in this passage (v. 80) is only in so far inexact as the reign of Parakkamabāhu IV. does not begin the new part but stands at the close of the old. That the Siamese Mahāvamsa goes further than the original Mahāvamsa of Mahānāma is not expressly stated. The Mahānāyaka of the Malvā-vihāra in Kandy, Tibbatuvava, was entrusted by the King with the task of comparing the two chronicles and of completing the Sinhalese Mahāvamsa (cf. P. E. PIERIS, 3, p. 142). In all probability, therefore, he was the author of chapters 90. 104 to 100 of the Mahāvamsa.

² The King had two brothers of whom the one was brought with him and his sister to Ceylon by their father Narenappa Nayaker (PIERIS, 3, p. 78) while the youngest was born there.

87 and gave the scribes money. They invited the bhikkhu community and each for himself continually gave them alms, such 88 as constant maintenance and the like. By listening to the pious doctrine they learned to distinguish between what should be done and what should be left undone, abhorred sinful
 89 actions and were full of zeal for meritorious deeds. By testing they discovered the ablest, most skilful and most pious sāmāgeras; and to these sāmāgeras they presented as gift the eightfold necessities¹, so that they were worthy of a king, had the 90 ceremony of admission to the Order performed for them and took care that they were rightly instructed in the precepts of monastic discipline and in the suttantas. Then they had dwellings erected which was a great blessing² (for themselves), 91 made the monks dwell therein caring for them meanwhile in worthy fashion full of reverence. They considered in every 92 way what should be done for the laity and the Order, developed in accordance with the intentions of the King, kindness towards the good and sternness towards the bad, according to 93 their deserts, strove in this wise and with other means after good and acted according to the intentions of the King as good friends of the laity and of the Order.

94 Many former kings for the sake of gaining the royal dignity or for other reasons did not look on each other as 95 brothers or otherwise (as friends), but fought one another and as a result of their discord their subjects were even so minded. But these three (brothers) who had yet attained such royal
 96 power, shunned all discord and showed no weaknesses. They dwelt together in one town and were ever friendly with one 97 another as their own shadows. Thus there was never the least enmity among them on account of the royal dignity and they developed the virtues of the Bodhisatta in the Sīlavajātaka³.

² On account of the merit, the puñña, inherent in such performances.

³ Cf. Mahāsīlavajātaka (Nr. 51), FAUSMÖLL I. 261 ff. The point of the comparison lies in the fact that the Bodhisatta as King Mahāsīlava of Benares, although his position was threatened by the Kosala king, undertakes no deed of violence in order to preserve his kingdom.

The Licchavis too of Visālā carried on the government in 98 harmony and without discord and won thereby the victory¹.
 Rulers of men of little discernment, infatuated by the beauty 99
 of the maiden Laṅkā, did what they ought not to have done and fell in consequence into much misfortune. But rulers of 100 great discernment, made happy by the beauty of the maiden Laṅkā, did what they ought and were thereby happy and famous. As rulers of this kind have these three Lords of men 101 held fast to harmony, and I say: that was wonderful.

When the Great king, rich in virtue, saw his brother to 102 whom he had granted the umbrella and other distinctions enter (in pomp) with royal retinue, he rejoiced, gazed at him 103 again and again and realized thus in himself the unique, sublimest spiritual perfection².

As the highest in the dynasties of the princes of the earth, 104
 as supporting pillars of the Order, possessed of immeasurable virtue, living according to the pious doctrine, shunning to follow the path of evil, associating with pious friends, desirous of reaching the road to the salutary path of deliverance — thus 105 these Rulers dowered with pious virtue, who saw in faith their highest good, did honour with sacrifice in piety to the Tooth of the blessed Enlightened One and to the Doctrine and the Order, accumulated abundant merit assuring the fullest salvation and piously sheltered the Order of the Sage and this stainless Laṅkā. For ever (therefore) shall one honour this 106 Ruler of Laṅkā, distinguished by virtue, who ever remembers the fulness of valuable qualities of the Sage, the sole Lord protector of the world, having piously accepted them in his heart, and who then further remembers³ his sublime doctrine and his Order⁴.

¹ Visālā, name for Vesālī (note to 37. 80). Our verse alludes to the fact that the Licchavis were able to maintain themselves against the advancing Kosalas while the Sakiyas succumbed to them. R. V. DAYNE, Buddhist India, p. 259—60.

² P. bhārayā . . . brahmabhūvanam ekakam. W. translates freely "only turned his mind to contemplate the virtue of benevolence to all men."

³ I translate anusarantam thus in contrast to the preceding sarantam, the former being a necessary corollary of the latter.

⁴ Dhammagāyā is a dvandva compound and gaya = saṃgha.

- 107 Thus this Monarch dowered with great royal power, the great King of kings, protected the Order of the Sage and this stainless Laṅkā in pious fashion; making men of all countries contented and dispensing to them great happiness he made gods and men beam with joy, discerning, strong in merit, miraculous power and dominion.
- 108 While the highly famed Great king, dowered with great power, resided in the great town and protected the laity and 109 the Order, the powerful Olandas, sea merchants who had been entrusted with the protection of Laṅkā at the time of King Rājasīha¹, fulfilled the task of envoys to the kings who ruled 110 in Laṅkā. Every year they were wont to bring with great reverence and great ceremony as gifts and lay before the King 111 various stuffs, made in different countries, along with many other articles, fitted for the use of a king, which they had 112 carefully chosen out. In consequence of former actions of the inhabitants of Laṅkā or in consequence of their neglect of the deities and so forth who were entrusted with the care of 113 the laity and the Order, they were now angered in the highest degree and in every way cruelly tortured the inhabi-114 tants of Laṅkā². When the highly famed Great king heard of these events he thought this was not as it should be, and 115 sent dignitaries forth. The dignitaries set forth with the people living in Laṅkā, fought a fearful battle with the Olanda 116 people, destroyed the foe, burned down his strongholds and terrified him in every possible way.
- 117 Now when the enemy were thus tortured by fear a cruel treacherous man³ placed himself at their head, low-minded,

¹ Rājasīha II. Cf. 96. 35.

³ Baron van Eck is meant here. He succeeded Schreuder as governor of Ceylon in 1762. The word khīṇāyā is an allusion to the fact that van Eck died suddenly, immediately after the unfortunate campaign against Kandy. Cf. v. 135.

a villain, the end of whose life was near, and with a great 118 following consisting of Jāvakas and many other people he laid waste in every (possible) way the various provinces and villages, the vihāras and the temples of the gods, the bridges, rest-houses and the like. The dignitaries charged by the Ruler 119 of Laṅkā fought here and there in every way with their war-skilled troops, but although they defeated the foe in various 120 places, the enemy were not to be warded off, and they advanced against the town. The war-equipped high dignitaries 121 hindered the foe on the way by every means, took up a frontal position against them and checked their gradual advance. The discerning Great king, the Ruler of Laṅkā, who 122 understood the conditions of the time, thought: it is impossible to stop the advance of the foe who are like a forest fire, and he entrusted the two uparājas with the sacred Tooth Relic, 123 the Maheśī, his sister and all valuable treasures, to watch over them well and sent them to a province which was 124 scarcely passable owing to mountains, forests and difficult roads. Thereupon the hostile hosts like cruel armies of yakkhas, 125 forced their way into the town and destroyed the sacred books and everything else. Surrounded by his great digni- 126 taries like the senāpati and others, and by war-skilled heroes who knew the right occasions from the wrong, the Great 127 king took up a position at the head of his great army here and there in the suburbs situated not far from the capital, and invested the town on every side. The people dwelling 128 in Laṅkā who had remained true to the teaching of the Buddha adopted the plans of the King and cut down here and there many of those who had gone over to the enemy, whomever 129 they caught sight of, but the envoys of the King and the other officials and the community of the bhikkhus they took under their protection. The bold warriors gifted with heroism 130 who were on the King's side played the war game, and as their aim was the protection of the Order of the Victor, they fought 131 surrounded by their warlike men in every way with the enemy who were posted at various positions on the road, put them 132 to flight, began then to fight also with those who lay in the 133 town and repeatedly caused them great losses¹. I think it was no wonder that men adopted the plans of our King: the 134 deities did the same. Hence after a short time the greatly deluded leader of the enemy was smitten with fear, horror and delusion which came over him owing to the might of the 135 gods and owing to the power of the merit (of the King). He left the fair town, fled without prestige and landed in the 136 fire of death. Victims of the power of infatuation all the hostile armies who had advanced, were helpless and shelterless, 137 and came to a bad end. Some were visited by illness, some tortured by hunger and disease, some were slain in fight, some had lost themselves in mountain and wilderness: thus were the miserable people on the enemy's side destroyed.

 138 "Protected in such wise by gods, men and others", one said,
 "this Monarch is certainly of great power: he is rich in 139 merit. Who in the world will be able to neglect the commands of so mighty a king who is so rich in merit?"

¹ Verses 130—132 describe the guerilla tactics employed by the Sinhalese. The attacks are directed first against the communications in the rear, the positions in the line of march. The troops in Kandy are thereby isolated and so exposed to attack.

² The whole section vv. 108-139 (cf. vv. 159 ff. and note) is perhaps historically the most valuable part of the latest Cūlavamsa. It refers to the military events of the year 1765 (see H. W. COCHRAN, HC., p. 142 f.; P. E. PIERIS, S., p. 118 ff.). The causes of the conflict again lay in the sphere of trade policy. The King wanted to secure his share in the areca and elephant trade, and to compel the Dutch to yield this he harmed and hindered the business of the Dutch Company in every possible way, particularly in their export of cinnamon which was for them specially important. At first the Dutch sought to keep the peace by weak surrender. It was not until 1763 under the Governor van Eck that they decided on warlike measures. Their first venture in this year was a failure. Two years later the Dutch troops entered Kandy, but suffered so under the perpetual attacks of the Sinhalese that they were soon obliged to evacuate the town and withdraw with the severest losses to Colombo. Three facts are passed over by the chronicle in silence: 1) There was a conspiracy in 1761 against Kittisiri, important so far as it was obviously the work of the nationalistic circles at Court and was directed against the Dravidian dynasty. 2) At the beginning of the hostilities the King started negotiations with the

When after the hosts of the enemy had been done away 140 with, the Great king no longer beheld a hostile army, the Ruler had the fair town cleansed as formerly and in fitting 141 manner the temple of the Tooth Relic and the other sanctuaries specially beautifully decorated. He was filled with 142 pure reverence towards the sublime doctrine of the Enlightened
 One, meditated ever on the sublime words of the Enlightened
 One, was filled with remembrance of the virtues of the sons of the Enlightened One and ever revered the Tooth of the Royal Enlightened One. The Ruler of men who in such wise 143 was completely devoted to the three sacred objects, could not bear the pain accruing to him from his separation from the Tooth Relic. So the Great king, strong in faith, betook himself¹ with his retinue to the most impassable part of the province, and when there he caught sight of the reliquary, 144 he revered it piously, his heart full of astonishment and admiration. He bent his head to the ground, worshipped (the 145 relic) with his head, greeted reverently the community of the bhikkhus and so chased away his pain. Filled with good 146 comfort, he raised the casket with the relic to his head, held a great feast and celebrating with the sound of the cries of 147
 "Hail"! and the fivefold musical instruments a great ceremonial festival, he entered into his town. Then when the 148 people of Laṅkā saw the Ruler with the relic, they rejoiced greatly and sent forth their cries of "Hail!". He brought 149 the relic into the former Tooth temple and instituted all the former festive customs in increased measure.

British, which however, led to nothing. The British emissary to the Court of Kandy was Pybus. 3) A famine in his own country caused by the neglect of agriculture during the war forced Kittisiri in 1766 to make a peace treaty with the Dutch very unfavourable to himself. By this treaty he made over to the Dutch the whole coastal district of the island, so that the kingdom of Kandy was completely cut off from the outer world and absolutely dependent on the good will of the Company.

¹ One expects of course a ganṭhā to govern the acc. mahāduggaṃ raṭṭhaṃ.

² This was the Saṃgharāja mentioned in 97. 51 and 98. 23. The all the monasteries of the town who saw that the danger of 151 the cycle of rebirths is far greater than the danger of the foe, had not given up the monastic life but had departed 152 with books, relics and articles of use, and dwelling outside of the country had protected the Order. The King of kings 153 brought them all speedily back to the town, had the monasteries in the town cleansed and made the bhikkhus take up their abode in them. Then he sought out from among those who were charged to school themselves in the study of the scriptures and in the carrying out of the commandments, 154 the appropriate preachers, invited them and listened ever and again to the Rājovāda¹ and other portions of the sacred scriptures.

155 The many Olanda people who had been our foes thought 156 of the custom of the country. They all came together, took counsel with one another and said: "to capture the whole of Laṅkā is impossible." After they had finally realised this 157 they consulted ever and again: "The people here who rebelled against the King, the ruler of Laṅkā have gone to perdition; 158 it will be the same with us. It is fitting therefore, that we dwell here in the town with humility, love and reverence 159 towards the sovereign of Laṅkā." Together with gifts for the King they took full of reverence the beautiful, empty 160 silver reliquary which had been carried away by the great fool and which sparkled like a cetiya, as well as the golden 161 canopy². They thought: we shall seek pardon for the wrong title of saṃgharāja borne by the head of the whole priesthood but which had fallen into disuse since the 15th century, had been conferred on him by Kittisiri in 1750. P. E. PIERIS 3, p. 76.

² When the Dutch under van Eck advanced on Kandy the Sinhalese secured the Tooth Relic (v. 123 f.), but the karandaka, in which it was preserved and the sirika erected over it in the temple fell into the hands of the enemy. Van Eck took them with him on his retreat to Colombo. His successor however, J. W. Falek, returned these highly sacred objects. The result of this prudent and conciliatory policy was committed by our countrymen and shall from now onwards live (in peace), betook themselves to the Ruler, praised him, showed him reverence and spake many friendly words. The King, the sovereign of Laṅkā, pardoned them their great wrong and showed them distinction in every way. In this wise by friendly negotiations our King achieved with them firm and lasting¹ friendly relations. The Olanda people also became thoroughly reconciled with the King of Laṅkā and were wont every year to present him along with valuable gifts, the products of various countries, with a royal letter which had been handed to them. But the Ruler had the sacred casket which had fallen into the hands of the infidels, covered with gold and silver and set with jewels. After having thus made its beauty like to that of the sun² he had the Tooth Relic placed therein and revered it as the King of the gods.

Thus was the pride of the wicked hosts of the infidel foe destroyed. Ha, (so great was) the power of the merit of the pious, believing Ruler of the Siḥalas. Thinking of this astonishing, wonderful thing, people should devote themselves full of reverence to the virtue of the true faith which is incomparable, praised by the good, splendid.

Since at that time there was not a single bhikkhu on the fair island of Laṅkā, he had after taking over the burden of government, residing in Sirivaḍḍhana, made many sāmaṇeras and as many sons of good family go through the ceremony of renunciation of the world and of admission to the Order. Of these bhikkhus some were preachers of the doctrine and acquainted with the precepts of monastic discipline, some led a life of contemplation or that of hermits. After he had thus ordained so many hundreds of bhikkhus dowered with this and other virtues³ he beautified the whole of Laṅkā (formerly) that the beleaguered garrison left behind in Kandy and reduced to sore straits, was granted a free passage.

¹ P. thiraṃ katvāna must, I think, be referred to mettibhācam.

172 bereft of bhikkhus. Day by day he performed meritorious works, invited the community and dispensed to it daily food and food for the sick, mindful of the welfare of the bhikkhu community.

173 For bhikkhus and sāmaṇeras there were two kinds of disease, such as had to do with the body and such as affected the mind. To cure mental disease the best of men had the Vinaya 174 texts and the Suttantas preached. After he had had the bhikkhus instructed in the Vinaya and the Suttantas which are the cause of the removal of desire and other diseases among mental 175 diseases, the Ruler — when suffering arises through bodily disease it is difficult for the bhikkhus to school themselves in the study of the scriptures and in the carrying out of the 176 commandments¹ — to calm disease like fever² and the like for this reason invited the community. He appointed for them 177 two physicians, well schooled in the medical art, and nurses. To these he granted villages and fields and facilities in the 178 way of garments, ornaments and the like, and as price for medicines he gave them yearly a hundred (money pieces) from 179 the royal treasury. In the various monasteries the Ruler asked after the health or ill-health of the sāmaṇeras and the bhikkhus and gave them the requisite care.

180 In this wise also the King of kings dispensed gain for the community. "Of all gains³ the gain of health is the highest 181 and best", thus the Buddha taught and therefore even he also dispensed⁴ it. He furthered in the best way the Order of the Enlightened One by making it lustrous.

emendation is inadmissible. The fault is the author's, the MSS. are not to blame.

¹ V. 175 is a kind of parenthesis. In correct language the sentence would be accompanied by an iti or iti cintiya as a reflection of the King's. Cf. note to 100. 52.

² W. is probably right in connecting jara here with skr. jarā (not P. jarā "age").

³ Note that lābha means a gain or advantage of an external kind.

Formerly the rulers of Laṅkā, the best of most excellent 182 men, the supports of the Order, removed the infidelity of the hosts of the foe and then bore the burden of the royal dignity. When the King heard thereof and himself compassed in spirit the doctrine revealing itself to him and fraught with immeasurable blessing, he performed continually meritorious works, unweariedly, a support of the Order¹.

Here ends the ninety-ninth chapter, called »Account of the King's Consecration and of Other Festivals«, in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

¹ The panegyric character of many strophes occurring in this chapter of the chronicle seems again to prove that it was composed when the king Kittisirirājasīha was alive. The poet flatters him with the conventional phrases.

CHAPTER C

THE HISTORY OF KITTISIRIRĀJASĪHA

- 1 The highly famed Lord of men¹ honoured the Tooth Relic with constant reverence even as (a world ruler) his wheel² and worshipped it in every way sacrificing³ with all kinds of flowers, such as sumana, campaka, punnāga, nāga, kaṇikāra, 2 ketaki⁴, white and blue lotus flowers and the like, as well as with perfumes of every sort, such as sandal and aloe wood; 3 with divers kinds of fragrant incense, with sugar, honey and so forth and with delicious remedies like betel nut, camphor 4 and betel leaves; with various prepared dishes such as sweet food, rice and cake, with golden bananas and rose-apples, with bread fruits, mangoes and phārusa fruits⁵, with date 5 plums⁶, oranges⁷ and sweet muṇḍakas, with yellow and green

¹ I anticipate the subject mahāyaso (v. 8c) and janindo (v. 12a). The sentence goes on to v. 22 in which the first finite verb appears. Various gerunds occur before this and the subject "the King" is repeated several times.

² P. cakka. This is the first of the seven jewels (ratanaṃ) peculiar to the rājā cakkavattī, the world-ruling king (cf. for this D. II. 172 ff., III. 61 ff.; M. III. 172; PTS. PD. s. v. ratano), a marvellous chariot that carries him victoriously over all countries.

³ I anticipate pājetra in v. 8.

⁴ The botanical names are successively: 1) jasminum grandiflorum, 2) melhelia champaka, 3) rottleria tinctoria, 4) mesua ferrea, 5) pterosperrum acerifolium, 6) pandanus odoratissimus.

⁵ Cf. also Mhvs. 89. 43 and note.

⁶ P. timbarāsaka a kind of diospyros. The fruit called timbaru is compared in Ja. VI. 457¹ to the youthful female breast. We do not know what the phārusa is.

⁷ P. nāraṅga = skr. nāraṅga which is borrowed from the Persian nārang. Muṇḍaka again is unknown.

coconuts, with ripe pomegranates, with dates, grapes and various 6 other fruits, with many fine roots¹ and sprouts of every kind.
 With such and other offerings, with the five kinds of musical 7 instruments, with many of the things taken over from former kings and with new thereto he worshipped the Tooth Relic 8 day by day, thereby intent on merit, increasing the store of his meritorious works. With gold and silver, with fair precious 9 stones and pearls, with countless, brightly embroidered, gleaming stuffs; with canopies, curtains and robes, with many 10
 articles of use and manifold ornaments, with many elephants 11 and steeds, as well as with cattle and buffaloes, with many slaves male and female and with numerous villages and fields he sacrificed full of zeal to the Tooth of the Enlightened One 12 and when the Prince of men beheld it he was filled with pious joy. He was minded to have the golden casket completed 13 which had been begun under former kings but had never been finished. After a splendid, jewel-encrusted² casket had 14 been made for two thousand suvaṇṇas and seven *nikkhas*³, the Lord of men ever intent on meritorious action, had a 15 costly, splendid, magnificent, large diamond placed on the point;
 one hundred and sixty-eight beautiful, costly, splendid (smaller) 16 diamonds, well worth seeing, and one hundred and seventy-one topazes⁴ he had put on it, further he had it set with 17 five hundred and eighty-five blue sapphires and four thousand 18 eight hundred and eighty rubies, also he had it set with seven 19 hundred and seventy-eight pearls, and when the costly casket

¹ P. sādhukandehi. The word kanda „root“ (skr. the same) is missing in CHILDERS and also in the PTS. P. D.

² P. maṇicayya. The word ayya does not mean „colour“ here, but „beauty, ornament“, as is often the case.

³ Suvaṇṇa as well as nikkha, as also skr. suvarṇa and niṣka denote a weight and a coin. The nikkha is = 15 suvaṇṇa (PTS P. D. s. v.).

⁴ P. puppharāgamavīratana. It is true that puppharāga by itself means „topaz“ (= skr. puṣparāga). What is expressed however, is the fundamental meaning „flower coloured“. Thus we have in the same way nīlamayī „blue gem“ (17 d) for „sapphire“ and vattamavīratana „red gem“ (18 c d) for „ruby“.

- 20 was finished he had two further caskets made in which to place it and had these also set with costly splendid, beautiful 21 jewels. The Ruler of men had the casket made by the famous 22 King Vimaladhammasuriya¹ overlaid with gold. Then the Ruler of men, celebrating a great festival, placed the Tooth 23 of the Sage in these same (caskets). Full of pious joy the Ruler dedicated a large village, Akarabhaṇḍa by name, to the 'Tooth of the Prince of the wise.
- 24 At the festival of the relic the Ruler in his mercy thought 25 to show the Tooth Relic to the inhabitants of Laṅkā. After the Ruler had had the whole town of Sirivaḍḍhana carefully cleansed and decorated throughout with arches of many-26 coloured stuffs, with rows of arches of banana leaves, with bunches of coco blossoms and with all kinds of flags and 27 pennons, he gathered together in the town all the people of Laṅkā. The Ruler of men himself, adorned with all the royal 28 ornaments, like the King of the gods, betook himself after he had previously celebrated many great sacrifices of all kinds, to the temple of the Tooth Relic, sacrificed to it in every 29 possible way, worshipped it, he the Ruler by throwing himself in humble posture² to the earth out of reverence for the 30 Tooth Relic of the King of the wise. Then he took the golden lotus flower together with the Tooth in the lotus of 31 his hand and went forth from the temple with it. With sacrificial ceremonies, celebrated³ with silver umbrellas and flywhisks of yak tails⁴, with golden and silver flowers, with the 32 five kinds of flowers, *lāja*⁵ and so forth, with many jewels and pearls, with gold and silver, with various coloured stuffs

¹ In Mhvs. 91. 11 ff. it is related that he brought the Tooth Relic from Labujagāma to Kandy. Nothing is said in the passage about the making of a karuṇḍa.

³ P. kāriyamānapūjāsū in v. 34 c.

⁴ P. camaricāmarehī. The fem. camarī is also employed in Skr. (BR. s. v. camara). See above 98. 14, as well as Jāt. IV. 256 camarīnaṅguṭṭha.

and many kinds of ornaments, with divers fragrant flowers, 33 with many lamps and incense, and amid the sound of the five musical instruments, the shell trumpets, the cymbals and the rest, and amid the noise of the many thousandfold cries of 34
 Hail! — it was like foam-crowned billows¹ — the highly 35 famed King marched in procession like a world ruler in his chariot². In the superb, beautiful maṇḍapa, decorated with 36 all kinds of brightly embroidered cloths, like a heavenly maṇḍapa stood the King, the Ruler of men, like the King of 37
 the gods at the head of the company of the gods, and then the King showing the multitude of the people the sacred beautiful Tooth of the Prince of the wise, right hard to attain in hundreds of thousands of world ages, filled them all with 38
 bliss, heaped up a store of merit and laid (the relic) again in the casket.

In this wise, feeling every kind of bliss, as at the sight 39 of the living Buddha, the multitude also increased the store of their merits.

Intent on good, he repeatedly exhibited the Tooth Relic 40 in the same way and so stored up much good. Of villages 41 and fields devoted by former kings of Laṅkā to the Tooth Relic he took not away the very least. Day by day holding 42 a great sacrificial festival in joyful faith, he dedicated many elephants and horses and in the same way bulls and buffaloes, as well as a prosperous, populous village by name Rajakatthala, 43 and another large village by name Muttāpabbata³ and gained thereby for himself the value of meritorious works.

He was mindful of the purity of the Order. Amongst the 44 bhikkhus who were formerly present on the splendid island of Laṅkā, and amongst all the sāmaṇeras who had undergone

the ceremony of world renunciation, were some who had fear 45 of evil, respected the true doctrine, living in good moral discipline, in pure fashion. Others cherished evil, were of 46 bad moral living, followed false doctrine, took pleasure in the maintaining of women and children and in domestic duties and devoted themselves to unseemly professions such as astrology, medical activity¹ and the like.

47 When the Ruler heard tidings of such unprincipled (bhikkhus) he sought out² with care from among the pious 48 (bhikkhus) who were on the side of the high principled, the respected sūmaṇḍa, named Sarapaṃkara, who led a pure life, dwelt in the wilderness, took pains for the furthering of the Order of the Victor, was careful of moral discipline, virtuous, 49 well instructed, experienced in the interpretation of the words 50 of the Enlightened One. With the reflection that this was the right thing to do, the Ruler with his support, ordered according to precept, an investigation, took strong measures against 51 them and had them seriously admonished that from now onwards those who had renounced the world should for ever avoid unseemly task, like astrology, medical activity and the like and 52 should foster³ the study of the words of the Buddha. As the King was minded to further the Order which had fallen into 53 decay, he strengthened the influence of the high principled, 54 and in many ways gave the Order support. The Ruler was appalled at the thought that with the lack of bhikkhus on whom the ceremony of admission to the Order had been per-55 formed, the pure Order of the Victor should perish on the whole island, and with the reflection: if a Ruler like myself carries on the government in the island of Laṅkā, then the Order of the Victor ought not to perish, — further with the reflection: the furtherance of the Order which was not attained in the time of former rulers in spite of their sending hither and thither for bhikkhus, this will I now bring to pass, the Ruler of men, the Monarch, rich in merit, since he desired a long continuance of the Order of the great Seer, when the year two thousand two hundred and ninety-three after the final nirvana of the Prince of the wise¹ had come — sent messengers to whom he gave besides gifts of many kinds and many sacrificial articles, a splendid royal letter, to the superb town of Ayojjhā², to fetch hither sons of the Buddha. In this wise the Ruler of Laṅkā who was minded to purify the Order of Buddha, began the furtherance of the Order of the Prince among victors.

The dignitaries took the royal letter and the rest and started with great ceremony and with great zeal on their way. With the Olanda people who were entrusted with the protection of Laṅkā, they embarked and sailed to the land of Sāminda. When the town of Ayojjhā was reached the Ruler of men in that country accepted the royal letter and the rest, as was the custom. In best fashion the prudent one showed the dignitaries the honour befitting them and took note of the excellent royal letter. When the Ruler of men Dhammika by name, who striving after the dignity of a Buddha, fulfilled the ten pāramīs³ and took the Order under his protection, ¹ = 1749 A. D. What is meant is the time of the close of the embassies to Siam which had already begun under Kittisirī's predecessor Vījayaṛājasīha. We have an interesting account of these embassies by a member: "An Account of Kirti Sri's Embassy to Siam in 1672 Saka, 1750 A. D., published by P. E. PIERIS in JRAS. C. B. xviii, nr. 54, 1903, p. 17 ff. I see no reason to doubt the genuine character of the document. The relations established by the coming of the bhikkhus from Siam are potent in their influence even to-day. The Siamese sect is the wealthiest and the most influential in the island of Ceylon. For the vicissitudes experienced by these embassies see PIERIS 3, p. 71, 73, 75 ff.

- 67 heard the news of the decline of the Order of the Victor in Laṅkā, and of the other (evils) he was most deeply moved.
- 68 The Ruler thought: "I will be a helper in order to achieve there the furtherance of the Order of the Enlightened One."
- 69 He summoned the Saṃgharāja in the Sāmina country and many other well instructed Grand theras, versed in the doctrine and acquainted with the rules of the Order, who had for a
- 70 long time renounced the world, who were capable of carrying out the business of the Order and took counsel with them
- 71 carefully about the matter. He called together a Chapter consisting of a group of ten (bhikkhus), an abode of virtues, easily satisfied and content, dowered with the virtues of a life of piety and discipline, and besides the Thera Upāli as head.
- 72 These the Ruler who was well inclined to the Great king on the island of Laṅkā — like to King Vessantara¹ — sent² to
- 73 Laṅkā, to the splendid relic temple of the Victor and (with them) books on the doctrine and on monastic discipline which
- 74 did not exist in the island of Laṅkā, further a golden image (of the Buddha) and a superb golden book, a magnificent royal letter, gifts of various kinds and dignitaries of the King of the town of Sirivaḍḍhana called together. In joyful faith the 78 Ruler of men celebrated a great feast. From the sea as far as superb Sirivaḍḍhanapura he had the road put in order and 79 rest-houses¹ erected at various places. Then the Ruler sent forth the Mahāsenāpati and other dignitaries and made them fetch 80 in the right order the golden image and the sacred books, the bhikkhu community and everything else. When with great 81 pomp and great ceremony they making their way had reached the vicinity of the Mahāvālukagaṅgā which comes down from 82

 the Sumanakūṭa, the Ruler of the town Sirivaḍḍhana, the Ruler 83 of men desirous of gaining the reward accruing from the festive reception of the three sacred objects², the highly famed Great king intent on merit, went forth with the army in piety to meet 84 them with elephants, steeds and so forth. He showed reverence to the august Grand therā and to the others and at the same 85 time greeted the great community. Having exchanged with them in the best way possible the customary speeches of welcome, he came with the three sacred objects at the head, to 86 his town. In the fair Pupphārāma³, in a graceful brick-roofed building erected by him, in this decorated monastery he made 87
 the august community of monks take up their abode. Then he provided them in fitting manner with the necessities and 88 charged officials to enquire day by day after their health or ill-health. The Ruler of men accepted the splendid royal letter 89 sent by the King of Ayojjhā and he made the royal envoys who 90 had arrived and the other officials take up their abode in a fitting place and showed them all the distinction to which they

 93 Great king, dowered with vast royal power, betook himself to the monastery. He had seats carefully spread in the middle 94 of the fine Uposatha house contained therein. Then he invited the Grand therā Upāli, dowered with the quality of a life led in moral discipline, experienced in all clever methods, who 95 had his pleasure in the welfare of all beings, and second to him the Thera Āriyamuni² together with the (rest of the) community and bade them be seated. Then with the cele-96 bration of a great festival the Ruler of men, the Ruler of Laṅkā, made these perform on the most distinguished of the sāmaṇeras of Laṅkā the ceremony of admission to the Order:
 97 From that time onwards he was wont to fetch hither sāmaṇeras and others who were versed in the linguistic textbooks on the sacred scriptures, and have performed on them 98 the ceremony of admission to the Order. In the same way he sought out rightly all those who were worthy of the ceremony of world renunciation and of admission to the sublime 99 Order of the Enlightened One and had the ceremony of world renunciation and of admission performed on them according to precept. Among the bhikkhu communities who thus had become 100 numerous in Laṅkā, he again sought out those bhikkhus who were full of lasting zeal in preserving the study of the sacred scriptures and of the rules of monastic life and who were 101 qualified for and worthy of the position of a teacher, and charged them to take instruction from the brethren of the Order who had come from Ayojjhā. Now among those high principled bhikkhus who carried out the commands of the 102 Victor, there was one who³ had long been at pains to make

lustrous the Order of the Sage which for a long time had been on the verge of ruin in Laṅkā, — who in accordance 103 with his insight, as far as possible untiringly, day and night, made lustrous the sacred scriptures of the Prince of the wise and his rules for monastic life — who also instructed as dis- 104 ciples many others in the sacred scriptures and the rules for monastic life and thus in worthy manner brought splendour to the Order, — who striving for his own salvation and that 105 of others, with the wish to obtain long continuance for the Order of the Sage, ever took pleasure in a pure life, — who 106 as regards virtue, discipline and devotion to duty was as a mirror for all the sons of the Victor in Laṅkā who were intent on their salvation, — who during the time that he was a 107 sāmāyera was called Sarapaṃkara: this son of the Victor living in pious discipline now that he had been admitted to the 108 Order, he (the King) invested with the dignity of a Saṃgharāja¹. Amongst the bhikkhus who had joined him, he sought out in both monasteries² such as were skilled and well versed in the carrying out of the duties of the Order of the 109 Master and assigned them positions of rank. Explaining to them: ye all who live out the doctrine of the Victor, should 110 act in harmony, day and night unweariedly, in accordance with the rule of the Order and according to the sacred scriptures, the Ruler showed them much favour and in this wise made 111 the Order lustrous so that it should continue for long in Laṅkā.

The royal envoys too, arrived from the Sāmindā country, 112 and the others sought out the King, handing over to him the royal letter and the other gifts. The Great king, the Ruler 113 of Laṅkā, accepted everything, and after the Monarch had made a close inspection of the superb royal document he highly 114 pleased, had favours conferred on them. Now the Ruler who for his own good, the good of others and the good of the Order, had again and again performed meritorious works, who 115 was devoted to the true doctrine, a light of the Order, greatly 116 wise was wont to visit the monastery and to test in every way in the midst of the community, the means for long continuance of the Order. As he wished to make lustrous the 117 Order, he invited in fitting manner the Grand therā Upāli and listened with believing heart from the Dīgha-Nikāya, the 118 Saṃyutta-Nikāya, the Saddhammasaṃgaha and from various other books, the (sections on the) tenfold royal duties and the 119 four heart-winning qualities. To faith awakened, of deep discernment, he thus learned to distinguish between what ought and what ought not to be done, between what is meritorious action and what is sin, what is blameworthy and what is not 120 blameworthy, and he left undone all things which should not be done, which are sinful and blameworthy, and strove as best he could after the things which ought to be done and 121 are not blameworthy. Almsgiving and other meritorious works he performed day by day, and after he had had the whole 122 town decorated as formerly he full of reverence invited the dignitaries who had come from Ayojjhā and all the people of Laṅkā, the Grand therā (Upāli) with the other bhikkhus (from 123 Sāmaṇḍa) as well as the bhikkhus from Laṅkā, the sūpaṇḍas and all the others, and celebrating as formerly with royal 124 ornaments and all kinds of other sacrificial gifts a great festival he exhibited the Tooth Relic for the salvation, blessing and happiness of them all.

125 Since the royal envoys wished to do reverence to the Mahiyāṅga-cetiya and the other cetiya places, he sent them 126 in the company of Laṅkā officials, to the various places, let them as they desired, perform their devotions and sent them 127 home after showing them to the utmost befitting favours. In the same way giving them sacrificial articles and appointing officials (charged with their care), he enabled the bhikkhu 128 community with Upāli at the head, to visit the sixteen sacred places¹ in Laṅkā, Mahiyāṅga and so forth, as well as the cetiyas in Sirivaḍḍhana and other towns. Then he had sacred 129 boundaries¹ fixed, and intent on the good of the bhikkhus, Uposatha houses and dwellings erected here and there. Devoted 130 in faith to the bhikkhu community he had in three years monasteries founded and made bhikkhu communities take up their abode in them. In the periods of the rainy season² he 131 provided the fitting maintenance, listened to the sermon of the true doctrine and kept the uposatha fasts. When the 132 bhikkhus were presented³ with the various necessities he gave them in addition to the otherwise customary robes⁴, kaṭhina robes⁵. In the course of these three years he had the cere- 133 mony of admission to the Order performed on seven hundred persons in the august community, and for three thousand sons 134 of good families he caused the granting of the ceremony of world renunciation as sāmāyeras for the good of mankind.

more than ten priests with two theras at the head — the Grand therā Visuddhācariya¹, who was an abode for the virtue of a life lived in discipline, whose ornament were faith and 138 the other virtues, who was a mine of virtue, and the capable,
 139 learned second therā Varāṇāṇamuni — to Laṅkā for the further-140 ance of the Order in Laṅkā. When this community arrived the highly famed King of Laṅkā accompanied them as for-141 merly with great honours into the town, made them take up their abode in the Pupphārāma and dispensed to them daily regular food and everything else as formerly.

142 After accumulating a store of merit the distinguished Therā
 Upāli who during these three years unweariedly day and night 143 had done all that was to be done for the furtherance of the Order, was severely troubled by a disease of the nose which 144 befel him. The Sīhala Ruler had the best medical treatment given to the incomparable Grand therā (thus) seized by ill-145 ness. Again and again the highly famed King went to the monastery, visited the Grand therā and when he learned, his 146 heart deeply moved, that the disease was incurable he celebrated with sacrificial objects of every kind, a sacrificial festival for the Buddha and ascribed the merit of it² to him (the 147 Grand therā). When the Therā was dead the Ruler of men had the corpse with great ceremonial laid in a covering of 148 fine stuff, had many sacrificial ceremonies performed, the corpse brought to the pyre and the prescribed rites carried out and thus accumulated merit.

149 The King was aware of how helpful the Ruler of men, Dhammika, the sovereign of the Sāmindā country, had been in the furtherance of the Order of the King of the wise in Laṅkā, by twice sending a pious bhikkhu community and by 150 bringing about the presence of many hundreds of bhikkhus, whereas formerly there had not been a single bhikkhu on the island of Laṅkā and by sending books of every kind which were lacking. He thought: "To a man like that who has given me so much help I will also pay in befitting manner fitting honours." He ordered ministers forth to whom he gave a model of the Tooth of the Sage fashioned out of a costly jewel and many varied gifts such as a likeness of the Victor, a shell curved towards the right¹ and other things, and also a splendid, specially artistic royal letter, and sent with them the bhikkhu community who wished to return to their own country (Sāminda). With great reverence all the dignitaries received this and journeyed forth to the country of Sāminda. When they arrived² there King Dhammika was joyful in heart. He gazed to his hearts content at the likeness of the Tooth of the Sage and at the rest, and full of joy as if he had (himself) received the Tooth of the Enlightened One, he celebrated day by day a great festival. Then when he heard and had taken note of the many words expressed in the royal letter: the transference³ of the merit of the furtherance of the Order and so forth, he put glad confidence in the King of Laṅkā. He gave over (to the envoys) many books which were not in Laṅkā, a beautiful likeness of the sacred footprint⁴, as sacrificial gifts for the Tooth of the Victor golden canopies and umbrellas and all kinds of beautiful and splendid presents, suitable for the royal use, as well as a royal letter in which expression was given to the share in all merits as his own admission to the Order⁵ and the like, wherein the ⁵ I assume that attāpasasampadā means that Dhammika belonged himself, if only for a time, to the Order, as is customary even to-day in the royal family of Siam. With this he had acquired great merit a part of which was to accrue to Kittisirirājastha.

163 reasons for the friendly relations between the two kings found expression, and sent all that to fair, holy Laṅkā.

164 All this the highly famed King of Laṅkā accepted. When he beheld the books of the good doctrine and the gifts like 165 the footprint of the Sage, he rejoiced greatly and paid great honour to the gifts. He celebrated a great festival and showed 166 them to all the people. Then when he had looked at the royal letter and taken note of the many words expressed in it, such as the transference of merit and the like, also the 167 friendly relations mentioned, the Ruler of the Sīhalas was filled with the highest bliss by satisfaction at the transferred 168 merit¹. He thought: "The reward accruing from the meritorious works like furtherance of the Order I have experienced in this 169 life, what shall one say of that which may be perfectly enjoyed in a future existence?" In this wise the Ruler believed 170 firmly in the three sacred things. The Ruler of Laṅkā betook himself to the monastery and heard the sermon of the true doctrine preached by the Grand theras who had arrived the 171 second time. He charged those bhikkhus who had been admitted into the Order by the chapter of monks who had arrived first, to take instruction from the bhikkhu chapter at whose 172 head Visuddhācariya² stood, and had the ceremony of admission to the Order performed in proper fashion by those theras on numerous sons of good family.

173 Of the bhikkhus in Laṅkā some whose ornament was their virtue, learned with the Grand Thera by name Visuddhā-174 cariya, absorption which is the way to nirvana; others learned 175 with the second Thera Varāṇāṣamuni the content of the doctrine and monastic rules, as well as linguistic knowledge. Thus the King pledged the bhikkhus of Laṅkā to the study of the 176 sacred scriptures and to the practice of moral discipline and so sheltered the Order of the Enlightened One. And the 177 bhikkhus of Laṅkā were zealous and discerning. Received into the branch of those ascetics who are without wants, who have taken upon themselves a life of discipline, unwearied, never indolent, they made of the doctrine of the Victor a reality, zealous by day and night, absorbed in difficult texts; and the King showed them honour by the dispensing of dwellings and the like. The chapter of bhikkhus which had come the second time and wished to return to their own country he sent away with Olanda merchants. On a firmly fixed rock situated on a beautiful spot not too far to the east of the town of Siri-vaḍḍhana he had hewn out by skilful workers, masons and others a splendid standing image of the Victor nine cubits¹ high and he had the radiant, shining stone image overlaid with gold plates so that it resembled the living Sage. Round about this Buddha statue he had erected a lofty, massive, beautiful stone wall and superb stone pillars placed and a splendid, beautiful two-storeyed temple built fair to look at, as well as a roomy court, outer walls, maṇḍapas and so forth set up in the best way. Then he put thereon canopies and curtains of all kinds of coloured stuffs. Round about he placed arches one after another and provided them in every way with much ornament. Here and there he set up various flags and pennons and on the day of the sacrificial festival of the eyes² he lit a row of lamps, placed filled jars (about) and carried out in blameless fashion the various customs prescribed for festivals. To the people who supplied the coloured paintings, he dispensed abundantly robes, ornaments and the like and satisfied their wishes in every way. Then he made the splendid loud clang of the musical instruments, like shell trumpets, kettledrums and so forth resound, like the roar of the wide sea, and under a good constellation, at a good hour, on a good day determined as favourable he put in the eyes and celebrated a great festival. Numerous silver bowls and many silver vessels, costly necessities and valuable monks'

193 robes, banners, white umbrellas, shields, fly-whisks and fans — 194 all these and other fair objects of sacrifice the Ruler offered, mindful of the reward accruing from a sacrifice to the Buddha, with the thought that it was as if it took place in the pre-195 sence of the still living Prince of the wise, with a heart full of the joy of faith, intent on merit. Many and manifold foods 196 also such as sweet di-hes, rice, solid dishes and others, sugar, honey, betel, lime, camphor and so forth, also remedies and 197 perfumes of every kind like sandal¹ and the like, beautiful flowers, like jasmine, campaka blossoms and others — all these 198 and other objects of sacrifice he offered in pious fashion. The makers of the Buddha image and the other people he rejoiced by an offering of many animate and inanimate things, elephants, 199 cattle, buffaloes and so forth. If one reckons the sums spent in the making of the Buddha statue and the other offerings 200 on the occasion of this vihāra festival according to their money value, the result was sixteen thousand one hundred and fifty (kaṭṭapaṇas).

201 The large, beautiful vihāra, well worth seeing, which is known as Gaṅgārāma because it was built on a fair spot near 202 the Mahāvālukagaṅgā was founded by the King under the 203 name of Rājamahāvihāra. This vihāra, thus superbly furnished with glory and splendour, was also destroyed by the enemy² 204 who had penetrated into the town. The King had it in the best way restored to its original condition, and just as he had 205 held a solemn ceremony at the former eye festival, so (now) he held another eye festival. After the Ruler of men had dispensed in great abundance to the painters and so forth 206 garments, ornaments and other articles and had sacrificed with many sacrificial gifts, he erected near by a fair monastery

¹ I think sāragandha should be taken in this sense like the corresponding skr. word.

² Thus we learn here that all these festivities described in the foregoing took place before the capture of Kandy by van Eek in 1765, that on this occasion the Gaṅgārāma founded by the King, was also destroyed, but as related in the following, restored after the destruction of the Dutch expedition, when the change of name possibly took place for the community and made a chapter of bhikkhus who devoted themselves with lasting zeal to the study and the fulfilment of moral duties, take up their abode there, providing them in every way with what was necessary. Then by holding in the way described formerly, full of reverence for the Triad of the jewels, a sacrificial festival for the Buddha, and at the same time sacrificing to the chapter of the bhikkhus, he increased the fulness of merit for himself and the laity.

Now in order that this beautiful fair vihāra, worthy to be seen, that was erected in this manner, and all the numerous sacrificial ceremonies inaugurated there and the many meritorious works such as the offerings to the community — should be continued for a long time in the right way, the Ruler determined a village situated near the vihāra by name Arupala, and many other villages and fields, and gardens also, as well as the large, populous village by name Udaḡāma¹ in the district of Māyādhanu and granted them (to the monastery). And the King confirmed this in perpetuity by having an inscription graven on the beautiful mountain (in the stone).

In this way the King of kings dowered with splendid virtues, since he realised the worthlessness of acquired wealth, in his piety had sacrificial festivals celebrated for the Buddha and sacrificial festivals for the community of the excellent sons of the Victor and so performed perpetually all valuable, meritorious works². Therefore should ye all also perpetually perform without wearying, meritorious works.

In the fair, splendid suburb by name Kuṇḍasūlā, the Ruler of men had erected in a charming garden a vihāra fair to look on, supplied in the best way possible with outer walls and maṇḍapas, and brought thither relics and images of the 219 for the service of the monastery, and celebrated, intent on merit, day by day all sacrificial ceremonies, such as offerings of food and the like.

- 220 The wicked king known by the name of Rājasūtha in the town of Sītāvaka¹ who had committed parricide and destroyed the Order of the Victor, as he could not distinguish what it 221 was right to do, had adopted a false faith, was devoted to the adherents of the false faith and ordered them to take for themselves the income accruing from the worship of the sacred 222 footprint of the Enlightened One on the Sumanakūṭa. From that time onwards the adherents of the false faith destroyed
 223 everything there. When the highly famed Great king heard of these things he realised, reverently devoted to the En-
 224 lightened One, that this was unseemly. He commanded the adherents of the false faith from now onwards not to do so, and charged the sons of the Buddha to carry out in the right 225 way the many sacrificial ceremonies which should be performed there. He dedicated the flourishing, populous, large village 226 named Kuṭṭāpīṭi to the sacred footprint and to shield it from the heat of the sun, he erected above it a maṇḍapa with cur-
 227 tains, adorned with an umbrella on the point, fastened it with iron chains and accumulated much good by the celebration of sacrificial ceremonies. But the income accruing therefrom he assigned to the Order.
- 228 In this manner did our happy, sublime² Sihala Ruler in the knowledge that what that deluded king had done, because he knew not the virtues of the sublime Sage — was unseemly, put away all the wrong and by entrusting the spotless bhikkhu community of the sublime sons of the Buddha therewith, he celebrated a ceremonial festival for the Buddha which granted sublime immortality.

The Majjhavela-vihāra¹ built by the ruler, King Vaṭṭa-gāmaṇī, which had fallen into decay, and the cetiya belonging to the vihāra he had rebuilt in the finest way and granted it the village called Singatthala² that had been long separated from it. Day by day he celebrated there in the right way a sacrificial ceremony and so smoothed the road to heaven which he would have to tread in the future.

To the Dutiyasela-vihāra³ the Ruler of men granted the village by name Ratanadoṇi⁴, having learnt from the record of a stone inscription that it had formerly belonged to it but had been severed from it, and he the highly famed, intent on merit, celebrated a sacrificial festival.

For the restoration of the Majjhapalli-vihāra⁵ the Ruler conferred distinction on the bhikkhu Saṃgharakkhita in pious fashion. He caused a great recumbent image (of the Buddha) to be made and finally he had a great festival celebrated there and the festival of the eyes held. In order also to perform the (customary) sacrificial ceremonies he dedicated the village called Mālāgāma⁶ (to the monastery) and had a sacrificial festival celebrated daily according to rule. To the sāmapera called Siddhattha the Ruler granted the large Rajata-vihāra⁷ erected by King Duṭṭhagāmaṇī when inspired⁸ by the wish for the august position of a chief disciple of Metteya¹, the 239 King of the wise. After the Ruler of Laṅkā had caused the ceremony of admission to the Order to be performed on him, he granted this bhikkhu and all the sons of the Victor dwelling in the Upasathārāma rank and showed them favour in 240 every way. Then in order to restore this vihāra which had long been in the state of a ruined house, the Ruler of men 241 in Laṅkā assigned it divers artisans, painters and others, as well as much fine gold wherewith to gild the Buddha images, 242 and all handiwork and so forth. That prince among ascetics

 — Siddhattha — accepted all this and removed in the best 243 possible way everything that had been destroyed by age. He had a lofty, massive stone wall and a fine plaster floor built 244 in the house, and outside a maṇḍapa, as well as (a picture) the figure of the Buddha in combat with Māra above on the rock face. Then when he had caused creeper work of flowers 245 to be applied in the best manner possible and had caused a vast image of the recumbent Buddha to be fashioned out of good bricks, lime and clay and also many sitting and standing 246 images of the Victor, he had represented in the best way possible in painting on the beautiful inner wall, enlightened 247 ones like Muhuttamuni², a thousand in number. And at the foot of the vast statue of the recumbent Buddha he had placed 248 one after the other beautiful images, that of the Buddha's constant servant and protector of the true doctrine³ — Ānanda, that of the Bodhisatta Metteya, that of the sublime patron 249 deity (Viṣṇu), and that of King Gāmaṇī. He overlaid the five 250 great images of the Buddha with gold, and when he had thus in every possible way finished the works which were to be

Then too he caused a great, beautiful triumphal arch to be made, well worth seeing, further two lion figures on either side of the portal and in the empty interstices of the wall figures of demons. Also he had pictures pourtrayed in coloured painting of the sixteen holy places¹, Mahiyāṅgaṇa and the others, further of the famous foot-print on the Saccabaddha mountain², of the ten pāramīs³, of the three forms of (right) action⁴, as well as of many jātakas in which subjects like the five great renunciations⁵ are treated of. In the maṇḍapa he had all kinds of figures introduced, series of lions, series of elephants, series of geese and creeper work of flowers. In the delightful cave above in the same rock he built a vast image house, well worth seeing, splendid, beautiful with many sculptures fashioned to perfection and so forth. There he had a beautiful, vast, life-like sitting Buddha made — splendid was this figure and fair to look at — and on either side well fashioned, upright standing statues of the Bodhisatta Metteyya and of the lotus-hued god⁶. He also caused many other figures to be set up: figures of sages, figures of many hundreds of the perfect⁷, the four and twenty Buddhas, the

² This is a sacred mountain in Siam, called Saccabandhana in the narrative (p. 31) mentioned above (Note to 100. 59). There was a foot-print of the Buddha on it which had come there miraculously. King Dhammika had sent a model of this footprint along with other gifts to the King of Lañkā.

³ See note to 37. 180.

⁴ P. tiḍḍa cariyaṃ. The three forms are lokatthacariyā, ñātatthacariyā and buddhicariyā "action for the advantage of the world, for the advantage of one's kinsfolk and for one's (own) enlightenment." See DhCo. III. 441¹⁰.

⁵ P. pañcamahāpariccāyā. The surrender of the five precious possessions, the wife, the children, the royal dignity, life, limbs. DhCo. I. c. CHILDERS, PD. s. v. pariccāga. ⁶ See note to 83. 49.

⁷ P. asakkha "he who no longer undergoes training", synonymous with arahant.

261 whole of the Bodhi trees in the same number, the four and twenty intimations¹, the sixteen holy places, fair forms of spiritual beings and others, the five great Councils² and yet 262 divers other beautiful pictures well worth seeing. Then he 263 brought thither relics of the Sage and had a cetiya erected, adorned with a golden finial. In the image house itself he 264 had placed on the lofty vaulted³ ceiling a sitting figure of the Sage surrounded by his five hundred followers, Sāriputta 265 at the head. In the court he had walls and maṇḍapas erected at different places, as well as several gate-buildings and here 266 and there stairs and other fine buildings, partly the restoration of much that had suffered by age, partly also many new (buildings).

267 All these fine structures the King dedicated (to the mo-268 nastery) at the festival of the eyes by dignitaries whom he had sent⁴, and in addition clothing, ornaments and much else.
 He had rows of various triumphal arches without gaps put 269 up, placed on them the necessary ornament, gave orders for 270 the sacred ceremonies and while celebrating in worthy fashion a great rite, he carried out the festival of the eyes under a lucky star and at a favourable hour.

¹ Each of the 24 Buddhas who according to the legend, precede the historical Buddha — they are enumerated Mhvs. 1. 5 ff. — has his special sacred tree under which he attains enlightenment. To each in a former existence on a particular occasion, a Buddha gives the intimation (cyākaraṇa) that he too shall in time attain the dignity of a Buddha.

² The Mahāvamsa 3, 4 and 5. 268 ff. gives an account of the three first Councils (dhammasaṅgīti) in Rājagaha, Vesālī and Pāṭaliputta. Of the two other Councils the one is the Church reform under Parakkamabāhu I (Mhvs. 78. 1 ff.), the other perhaps that under Parakkamabāhu II (Mhvs. 84. 7 ff.). We get an idea of what the representation of such a council might have looked like from a fresco from Qyzil near Kutscha (Central Asia) the subject of which is the first Council. See A. von Le Coq and E. Waldschmidt, Die buddhistische Spätantike in Mittelasien VI. p. 79 und Tafel 14.

⁴ The construction of the sentence is quite irregular. It seems to me, however, that pesite 'macce is acc. pl. which like the preceding accusatives is made to depend on datvāna.

From that time onwards there came hither many inhabitants of the whole kingdom from all quarters, like the sea when it overflows the land. When all the people who had gathered there beheld the many golden and other works of art which had been carried out, there their hearts were filled with joy, as if they saw the Enlightened One at the miracle of the double appearances¹. In joyful and high spirits they celebrated amid cries of Hail! a great festival and thus paved their way to Heaven. At that festival he invited the bhikkhu community of the vihāra, had seats prepared in the inner room of the vihāra, made bhikkhus who were preachers of the true doctrine sit down thereon, and had the Mahāmaṅgalasutta² and other sacred texts worth hearing recited by them and thus celebrated in worthy manner a sacrificial festival of the doctrine³. All the people who saw and heard this, in that they at one and the same time beheld the Enlightened One⁴ and heard the true doctrine, were filled daily in every possible way with the highest joy and ecstasy, as if by a sermon of the living Sage. Thus he made manifest both: the beauty of his form and the charm of his sermon.

Outside in the court he placed pillars of stone, erected a maṇḍapa, spread seats therein and after establishing the great multitudes gathered round the maṇḍapa in the five major and other commandments relating to moral discipline, he made them listen daily to abundant texts. Full of reverence he⁵ also invited the preachers of the doctrine to preach the doctrine repeatedly during the three watches of the night.

¹ The yamakāṃ pāṭiheraṃ is often mentioned, as in the case in the ancient Mahāvamsa (See my translation, note to 17. 44; cf. DhCo. III, p. 193 ff.; Samantapāsādikā, ed. TAKAGUCHI I, p. 88 ff.).

² In the Suttanipāta, Cūlavagga, Sutta 4 (ed. by DINES ANDERSEN and HELMUT SMITH, p. 46).

³ P. dhammapāṇā. The dhamma itself is the pāṇācattho, the "object of sacrifice", because the sacred texts are recited.

⁴ I. e. the images of the Buddha in the Rajata-vihāra.

⁵ The subject from v. 274 onwards is throughout the King. W. quite unnecessarily takes Siddhattha (see v. 238) as the subject of nimantiya in 281 b.

282 In the year two thousand three hundred and one after the final nirvana of the Enlightened One¹ he had the vihāra called 283 Rajata restored and the great festival celebrated. He then thought of repairing the splendid cetiya erected on a clear, 284 fine large slab of rock to the south of the vihāra but which was so dilapidated that it resembled a heap of dust. Therefore he had fetched from all quarters lime, bricks, stones and so 285 forth. Hereupon he had a fine, square throne built of stone in the best possible manner whereon he placed a relic of the 286 sublime Enlightened One. At the restoration of the cetiya, he erected on a neighbouring, particularly beautiful piece of land for the community whom he invited thither in 287 fitting manner for the purpose, setting up a marked out boundary, a monastery with an Uposatha house and other 288 (buildings) provided with a brick roof and so forth. On the land round about he laid out beautifully a large park adorned with divers blossoming trees, with divers blossoming creepers, 289 with divers fruit trees and the like, and where there were many bathing-ponds. And full of zeal as he was, he piously made the sons of the Victor dwell there and devote themselves to study and religious exercises.

290 In such wise was the place restored by royal power, visited (in days of yore) by great saints and honoured by the 291 former rulers of Laṅkā. When the highly famed King heard thereof he fixed the boundary of the vihāra solemnly in the 292 same way (as before), performed there all the solemn ceremonies, arranged in still more abundant measure (than before) for an almsgiving to the community and the like and laid up 293 a store of merit. Near the Dohaḷa mountain² adorned with rows of trees like pūga, punnāga, nāga³ and others, resound-294 ing with the sweet twitter of all kinds of birds, provided with cool, spotless white stone slabs, enlivened with herds of 295 divers animals, there was in the fair monastery situated there

² Mentioned in 44. 56. See note to the passage.

³ For the tree names cf. 73. 98, 74. 204, 79. 3.

which bore the name of Sūkara¹, an image house of the Victor, erected by a dignitary who was charged therewith by the King. There the councillor Suvannagāma setting up 296 stone pillars, built an Uposatha house and dedicated it to the sons of the Sage. He also had supplies of wood collected 297 for pillars and the like and numerous dwellings built there. To the bhikkhus to whom dwellings had been assigned there, 298 the Lord of men devoted many villages, fields and so on for the provision of what was necessary. After that Ruler of men 299 had caused all this to be brought about he kindly dedicated it to that prince of ascetics, Dhammarakkhita.

After the Ruler of men had in such wise stored up divers 300 kinds of merit he passed in the thirty-fifth year of his reign from this world thither in accordance with his deeds.

When one reflects on the worthlessness of wealth and of the 301 life of the flesh one utterly rejects the yearning thereafter. Ye also, revering the Triad of the sacred things, ought to perform good works such as spiritual exertions and the like².

Here ends the hundredth chapter, called «The History of Kittisirirājasīha», in the Mahāvamsa, compiled for the serene joy and emotion of the pious.

¹ The Col. Ed. reads sūkarārāṭṭanāmaṃhi instead of the sūkararathaganāmaṃhi of my MSS. W. gives Varāvaḷa as the modern name of the monastery.

² The whole of the hundredth chapter has the character of a supplement to chapter 99 and treats especially of the services of the King to the Church. It repeatedly alludes to events which have been touched upon in the foregoing (cf. 98. 91 with the note to 100. 59, also the note to 100. 203). I have already pointed out (note to 99. 53) that Tibbotuvave's contribution to the Cūlavamsa (see note to 99. 76) which deals with the reign of Kittisirirājasīha is composed in praise of this king and completed during his lifetime. This is the case too with the greater part of the hundredth chapter. Here too in v. 228 we meet with the expression amhākeṃ Sihalindo and the benediction in v. 135 sounds as if it were addressed to a living person. At the end however Kittisiri's death is mentioned. The last part of the hundredth chapter must thus have been added later, whether by Tibbotuvave himself or by another author. The break cannot be fixed with certainty, it might possibly be at v. 228.

CHAPTER CI

SUPPLEMENT¹

1 On his death, his younger brother Sirivājādhīrājasīha²
 2 received consecration as king in Laṅkā. After attaining his consecration as king, he devoted himself with pious joy to the Triad of the Jewels, zealous in listening to the true doc-3 trine, unwearied, discerning. The Ruler of men continued, as formerly without abatement that furtherance of the laity and 4 the Order which his brother had carried out. The highly famed offered meat and drink and so on as before to the sublime Tooth 5 Relic without depriving it of anything. He commanded that the regular almsgiving which had been established for the sons of the Victor should be given to them in the order in-6 troduced by the (former) king. The bhikkhus who with the Thera Upāli at their head had arrived from Sāminda, came to the 7 town of Sirivaddhana. Here those bhikkhus who had come from there, with the Thera Upāli at their head, established a sacred boundary to the south of the town in the so-called Kusumā-8 rāma³, according to the ñattidutiya process⁴. When he saw

¹ Chapter 101 of the Mhv. has been composed and added to their edition of the chronicle (1877) by H. SUMANGALA and BATUWANTUDAWA. See MALALASEKERA, Pali Literature, p. 142. No MS. however of those which I could examine, reaches beyond v. 292 of ch. 100, and I do not know on which authority the vv. 100. 293—301 are based.

² Reigned 1780-1798 (cf. v. 18). It was during the reign of Rājādhīrājasīha that the capitulation of Colombo took place (15th Feb., 1798) and with that the passing of the dominion from the Dutch to the British. Cf. PIERIS 3, p. 142 ff.; CONNINGTON, HC., p. 133 ff.

³ Synonym for Pupphārāma 100. 86, 141, now the Malvatu-vibhāra.

⁴ This is a particular form of a saṅghakamma or ecclesiastical act. See Vin II. 89³ and 91³⁷ (= Cullav. 4. 14 2 and 11).

that the Uposatha house built formerly by King Kittisiri, was decayed, the Ruler of men who was intent on merit, first of 9 all raised the ground on all sides and then by the adding of 10 still more stones he put up the walls inside the boundary. He put up stone pillars and so built the Uposatha house 11 which the Ruler made over¹ to the community from the four regions of the heavens.

The King was acquainted with various literary works, works 12 in Pāli and Sanskrit, he rejoiced in the continuous giving of alms, was in form like the god of love². As expert in the 13 text books relating to language he made a poem in the Sīhala tongue out of the Asadisajātaka³ and had it written down. With a heart full of faith he revered⁴ the Tooth Relic in 14 faith with a hundred thousand lamps which he had lit in a single night. Hearing of the great merits of a kaṭhina offer- 15 ing over all gifts of alms, he every year presented kaṭhina⁵ robes to the community. He had an image of the Aṅgīrasa⁶ 16 made in bronze in the proportions of the King and since he strove after the dignity of a Buddha, he erected in the 17 monastery called Gaṅgākṛāma which was held to be pious, a graceful cetiya well worth seeing.

¹ The description of the building is obscure. V. 9 seems to refer to the securing of the whole base, v. 10 to the laying down of a walled terrace and v. 11 a b to the building of the house itself.

² P. makaradīhaja = skr. makaradhraja "whose badge is the makara, the dolphin".

³ Jātaka nr. 181 in FAUSBÖLL II. p. 86 ff.

⁴ I believe that here we should read saṃmānesi instead of saṃmānesi as the meaning of the latter can hardly be harmonized with dāṭhā-dhātum. The instr. dīpasatasasassena would also not fall within the construction of the sentence. We must, it is true, put up with a slight disturbance of the metre, when reading saṃmānesi.

⁵ See note to 44. 48.

⁶ Aṅgīras in the Rīgveda is the designation of "beings half gods half men who act as intermediaries between the two, as sons of Heaven, as ancestors of men, as those who impart to mankind the gifts of the gods" (GRASSMANN). The expression aṅgīrasa is already used of Buddha, Therag. 1252 (quoted S. I. 196). Cf. also A. III, 239³²; Jā. V. 141¹.

- 18 After the Ruler had accumulated these and other merits
he passed after an eighteen years' reign from this world in accordance with his deeds.
- 19 The sister's son of Rājādhirājasīha, the Lord of men, Sirivikkamarājasīha¹, the discerning ruler of the country
20 hearkened to the doctrine preached by the Victor. The Ruler found pleasure therein and sacrificed to the sacred Tooth Relic 21 jewels, pearls and other (valuables) and many villages and fields. To the community whose head is the Buddha, he 22 dispensed often delicious foods and so strove after eternal happiness. These and other merits the Ruler accumulated.
23 But as he indulged in intercourse with impious people he changed (for the worse). He had the chief councillors, the 24 great dignitaries and many other officials gathered together and destroyed his subjects like a devil. He had the people, 25 many hundreds in number, brought to different spots and had them impaled, merciless as death. Much wealth that had 26 come to the people by inheritance, the King had confiscated like a thief that robs villages. And because the Ruler com-27 mitted in this way many evil deeds the Siḥalas and the inhabitants of the town of Colombo² rebelled. They all came 28 hither, captured the criminal king alive when the eighteenth year after his consecration had passed, and brought him to 29 the opposite coast³. After they had brought the King, the torturer of his people, to the opposite coast the Ingirisi by name seized the whole kingdom.

IV. Mahāvamsa, tr.

Introd. p. XXXVI ff. WICKREMASINGHE's Chronological Table of Ceylon kings in EZ. III, p. 4 ff. differs somewhat from my list of kings. As nr. 5 he adds after Paṇḍukābhaya the name of Gaṇatissa which does not occur in the Mhvs., and therefore nrs. 6-28 in W.'s list correspond to 5-27 of my list. Instead of nrs. 28-32 WICKR. has only nr. 29 Anulā, omitting the names of the paramours of this queen. Nrs. 30-58 correspond to 33-61 of my list. In Cūlavamsa trsl. II, Introduction I accepted WICKR.'s table.

2. 11. Translate the verse thus: and sixteen even unto Okkāka. These (kings) who are mentioned in groups reigned in due order, each one in his capital — and add the note: We must with the Tīkā read pavutta instead of paputta.
5. 69. The note 4 on page 31 is indeed misleading (WICKREMASINGHE EZ. II, p. 276). Read thus: Upajjhāyassa. Every novice on his entrance into the order chooses an upajjhāya "spiritual preceptor" and an ācariya "teacher". The former instructs him in the rules of the monkish life, the latter in the study of the holy scriptures. In his relation to the upajjhāya the novice is called saddhivihārīka, and antevāsika in his relation to the ācariya.
5. 139. Read: after it had been perfumed, instead of for better care thereof.
7. 43. Page 58, note 3 read Malvatu-oya inst. of Malvaṭṭe-oya.
9. 23. Read Citta instead of Cīttā.
10. 53. The note 1 on page 72 is wrong. Read thus: According to v. 62 foll. not far from the Kacchakatittha (see note to v. 58), on the right bank of the Mahaveliganga. The Dhūmarakkhapabbata is also mentioned Mah. 37. 213. It is identical with the Dimbulāgala (anciently Udumbaragiri, cf. Cūlav. tr. II, p. 102, note to 78. 5), the so-called "Gunner's Quoin". H. STORREY, Ceylon Antiquary and Literary Register III, p. 229).
10. 90. To Yonas add the note: See E. R. AYRTON, Ceylon Notes and Queries I, Oct. 1913, p. VIII.

11. 10 ff. As to yaṭṭhi Professor N. LAW (letter of 3rd April 1930) calls my attention to skr. yaṣṭi in the meaning "necklace", occurring in the Kauṭaliya Arthaśāstra 2. 11. 29 (p. 76 of SHAMA SASTRY's edition). Accordingly we should translate thus:

(10) At the foot of the Chāta mountain there appeared¹⁾ three cane-like necklaces of the size of a chariot whip. (11) Of them one was a creeper-necklace of bright silver: on this might be seen brilliant delightful creepers of golden colour²⁾. (12) One was a flower-necklace³⁾: on this again might be seen flowers of many kinds, of manifold colours, in full bloom. (13) At last, one was a bird-necklace⁴⁾ whereon might be seen numbers of birds and beasts of various colours, as if they were living.

Notes: ¹⁾ P. jata. — ²⁾ Perhaps suvaṇṇapaṇṇā "with golden leaves". — ³⁾ P. kusumayaṭṭhi, commonly called puṣpahāra, a string made of golden flowers. — ⁴⁾ I. e. a necklace formed by a string of birds made of gold and other precious metals. Cf. also the description of the various necklaces in the Kauṭaliya I. 1.

11. 22. Here we should translate: Those three kinds of precious stones and the three chariot-like¹⁾ necklaces &c &c. — with Note ¹⁾: Refers to rathapatodena samānā parimāṇato in v. 10.
11. 26. Read: the rank of general, instead of the rank of staff-bearer — and add the note: In daṇḍanayaka the word daṇḍa means "army", and nayaka "leader". Cf. Cūlav. tr. I, p. XXVI.
15. 4 (p. 96, N. 2). The note should run thus: I. e. "the discourse of the fool and the wise man" = Majjhima, Nr. 129 (III. 163).
15. 38 (p. 100, l. 12). Read mango-fruit instead of mango-tree.
17. 31 (p. 118, l. 25-6). Read: was covered with kadamba-puppha- and ādāri-creepers — and add in note 3 after This creeper: (skr. kadambapuṣpā; the name seems to prove that the flowers of this creeper remind those of the kadamba-tree).

19. 73, 75 (p. 134, l. 11 and 17). Read Kadambapuppha-thicket.
22. 7. Expunge in note 3 the words: Tradition seems &c., and add: Cf. on Yatahalena H. C. P. BELL, Kégalla-District, p. 35-6.
24. 22 (p. 165, N. 5). The note should run thus: According to local tradition the battle took place near Yudagannava $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles NNW. of Buttala. The spot is marked by a thūpa (now in ruins).
24. 39. To came to a vihāra (p. 167, l. 18) add the note: According to popular tradition this vihāra was that of Okkampitiya, about five miles East of Buttala.
25. 48 (p. 173, l. 28). Read: surrounded by a kadambapuppha-thicket.
25. 99 (p. 177, l. 16). Read: sitting on the throne, instead of in the royal chamber.
30. 84 (p. 206, note 2). Add: Cf. Suttanipāṭa 976 foll.
32. 40 (p. 224, N. 2). Jāla-pūva means "net-cake". I was told in Ceylon that even now cakes of a peculiar shape are prepared there for which such a denomination would be befitting.
33. 43 (p. 232, l. 6) Read: 'The great black Sīhala is fleeing'.
33. 85 (p. 235, l. 22). Read: concealed herself in a kadambapuppha-thicket.
35. 104 (p. 254, l. 6). Read: in a kadambapuppha-thicket.
35. 116 (p. 255, l. 2). Read: on the place of the kadambapuppha-thicket.
36. 6. Add to note 1, p. 256: In Sinhalese inscriptions he is called Maḷu Tissa. See H. C. P. BELL, ASC. 1896, p. 47-8.
- p. 274, l. 12. Read: Sum. I, p. 258 ff.
- p. 288, l. 12. Read: south-east of Anurādhapura, instead of south-west of A.
- p. 289, l. 31-290, l. 2. (See above note on 10. 53). The passage should be corrected thus: Its position is shown clearly by Mah. 10. 53, 57, 58. We must look for it on the right bank of the Mahaveliganga, not far from the Kacchaka-ford. It is the Dimbulāgala rock, the so-called "Gunner's Quoin", as Mr. H. STONEY has shown.

V. Cūlavamsa, tr. I

Introd. p. XXII, l. 7. To bhāgineyya add the note: Mr. A. M. HOGART, C. J. Sc. II, p. 34, refers to the part played by the sister's son in Ancient Germany, according to Tacitus, Germania 20: Sororum filiis idem apud avunculum qui apud patrem honor. Quidam sanctiorem artioremq; hunc nexum sanguinis arbitrantur. "The sister's son is in as great honour with the uncle as with the father. Some consider this tie of blood more sacred and closer."

Introd. p. XXV, line 9. Add the note: The inscriptions of King Nissanka Malla's "Council Chamber" in Polonnaruwa supply us with useful information as to the highest officials and the constituent members of the royal council at the time of that king. At the king's right hand there sat 1) the mahādīpāda (p. XVIII), 2) the adīpādas (p. XVI), 3) the senāpati (p. XXVI), 4) the adīkarins (p. XXV), 5) the Chief secretary (mahālekha, p. XXVIII); — and on his left side 1) the Governors of the provinces (maṇḍalika, p. XXV f.), 2) the eighty-four chiefs of smaller districts (samanta, p. XXV), 3) the heads of the merchants (setṭhin). The number 84 exactly corresponds to the 84 sāmanta appointed by Parakkama-bāhu in Dakkhinadesa (Mhvs. 69. 16). See H. W. CODRINGTON, JRAS. C. Br. XXIX, Nr. 77, 1924, p. 304 ff.; the same, HC. p. 68.

37. 175 (p. 16, N. 5). The identification of Mahādhammakathin with Ta-mo-kiu-ti is doubtful as -kiu-ti would correspond to a -gutta rather than to a -kathin.

P. 17, 18, 19, 20 top. Read Upatissa I. instead of Upatissa II.

37. 213 (p. 22, N. 4). Read: right bank, instead of left bank.

38. 68 (p. 36, N. 4). Add at the end of the note: It is however probable that in the Mahāvamsa not the Buddhist yojana, but the common Indian yojana is meant which has the double length. See PARKER, Ancient Ceylon, p. 255 f.

P. 52, top. Read Upatissa II. instead of Upatissa III.

41. 89 (p. 60, N. 5). Add at the end of the note: But we may also take vasaṇi as part. pres. and assume that the sentence extends to v. 92 with pāhesi as finite verb.
42. 67 (p. 73, N. 2). Add in the note: Cf. note to 70. 286 and 312.
48. 66 (p. 116, N. 4). Add in line 8 of the note after °jehāni: (Cf. C. J. Sc. G. I, p. 145 ff.).
56. 6. The translation should run thus: he thought it not the time to carry on war and came suddenly into the company of the gods when he just had visited (the town of) Devanagara.
59. 7. The translation is not precise enough. It should run thus: After the wise (prince), that best of men, had held the position of a yuvarāja seventeen years he caused (this number of years) to be written down (in the annals). — Add the note: Satturasavassāni refers as adverbial to yuvarājapadaṇi sito santo and is at the same time object of likhāpayi.
60. 64 (p. 220, N. 2). On line 13 of the note read thus: The Jambukola-vihāra is the monastery erected by Devānampiyatissa at the landing place Jambukola (Mhvs. 20. 25) and Jambukolalena the Dambul monastery 26 miles N. of Matala with its celebrated rock temple.

VI. Cūlavamsa, tr. II

74. 151. My translation of the verse is wrong. It is based on a reading cātuddisikaāḍḍinaṃ, but the cātuddisikandīnāṃ of the MSS. is quite correct and we must translate: "Collect for the poor (bhikkhus) from the four regions of the heavens a plentiful gift of alms."
81. 67 (p. 141, l. 17). Read: after that, instead of for that.
